IMPORTANT TESTIMONY IN FAVOUR OF THE

SPECIAL DEVON TRICYCLE.

Seaton, September 27, 1882.

SIR,—Having had a good trial of the SPECIAL DEVON TRICYCLE, over very rough and very hilly roads, I must tell you that I am much pleased with it. It is an easy one to ride, and the swing frame is a wonderful assistance for hills. It is very strong and comfortable.—Yours faithfully, A. H. TRAHERNE.

The Manager, Exeter B. and C. Co.

I may add that, being lame, I cannot get any exercise by walking; but the exercise I get on the machine has not only restored my health, but I am able to go out into the country when and where I like.—A. H. T.

2/- TEA OF EXTRAORDINARY QUALITY,

As Supplied to Dukes, Earls, Barons, and the County Families of England.

THE unprecedented depression in the Tea Market now enables COOPER COOPER and CO. to offer such value in Tea as would, a few years ago, have been considered simply impossible, but is now a realised fact, for at

TWO SHILLINGS

A POUND,

COOPER COOPER and CO. are able to supply Tea of amazing strength and exquisite quality, while the choice kinds at Three Shillings a pound, which are coming to hand in lessening quantities year by year, COOPER COOPER and CO. have the greatest difficulty, after ransacking the markets of China and India, in procuring in sufficient quantities for their consumption. These choice and selected Teas COOPER COOPER and CO. have the honour to supply to many Foreign Princes, Potentates, Ambassadors, &c.

THE enormous success—without competitors and with no rivals—which has attended the sale of COOPER COOPER and CO.'s Teas is perhaps unparalleled in the annals of this or any other trade, and can only be accounted for by the way in which their business has been conducted, which has gained the patronage of all classes. COOPER COOPER and CO. number among their customers Princes, Dukes, Earls, Barons—in fact, a large per-centage of the entire Peerage—Church dignitaries of every grade, and ministers of all denominations, County Families from every county in Great Britain, and from all classes of the community. COOPER COOPER and CO. are also shipping their Teas every day to foreign parts. Paris would appear to draw its supplies from COOPER COOPER and CO.'s Stores, and in almost every large city, and especially in the seaport towns of Europe, Asia, Africa, and America—in fact, to the very ends of the earth—COOPER COOPER and CO.'s Teas and COOPER COOPER and CO.'s name are known.

COOPER COOPER and CO. have their own Agents in China and India, and are consequently able to sell their Tea at a price which is actually under that which wholesale merchants, brokers, &c., charge to ordinary dealers. They are enabled to do this as they have not the expense of travellers, and no bad debts to provide for, their terms being strictly for nett cash before delivery. They also save an immense amount by keeping no horses and vans—many houses having from 20 to 100 horses, vans, and two men to each, to deliver, sometimes, half-a-pound of tea miles and miles away, this overwhelming expense having all to come out of the quality of the Tea.

COOPER COOPER and CO. have, in fact, no expense but indispensable rent and labour, which in consequence of still-increasing business, amount only to a fraction on the price of the Tea they sell.

COOPER COOPER and CO. may mention that they include among the regular buyers of their Tea a great many London Tea Brokers, from the simple fact that it can be purchased cheaper and better from them than from the importers themselves.

COOPER COOPER and CO. sell their Teas for ready money only. They have thus no provision to make for bad or doubtful debts.

AND now a word about this year's crop. It is hardly satisfactory on the whole, but some of the choice crops secured by COOPER COOPER and CO. are simply delicious, COOPER COOPER and CO. are still enabled to sell the very best at Three Shillings a pound, and it is veritably a marvel of goodness—a "thing of beauty" and "a joy for ever." But the most astonishing thing of modern times is the Tea at Two Shillings a pound which COOPER COOPER and CO. are now selling. The rich and wealthy buy this Tea. Ladies drink it in their boudoirs and at their early drums, and, as one of our country patrons writes, "It is lovely."

COOPER COOPER and CO. may add that Indian Tea is becoming day by day a greater favourite among the best judges, and this year's crop has been prepared with greater care than ever. It is strong, pungent, with most agreeable flavour, and the better it is known, the more it will be liked. The Tea is 3s a lb., for the best.

COOPER COOPER and CO. charge threepence a package (of any size) for delivering their Teas at any of the Railway Stations in London, or any place within the limits of the London Parcels' Delivery Co., thus putting all on an equality; those who send for their tea, and those who require it sent.

COOPER COOPER and CO. do not pay railway carriage, but are willing to compound for the same on receiving the sum of 6d. in addition to the price of the Tea, to any Railway Station in England, on quantities of the value of £2 and upwards. Families residing in the country can thus, by clubbing together, have their Tea sent almost carriage free, as well as save about 9d a lb. in the cost.

The following shows the relative state of health of eight regiments of the Line:—

Leave of absence is granted to Lieutenant E. Gilpin-Brown, A.D.C., from April 26 to June 26; Captain Herring-Cooper, R.A., in extension, to July 7; Lieutenant-Colonels Hammill, C.B., and Boyes, Gordon Highlanders, from May 1 to August 15; Lieutenant H. R. Stewart, Gordon Highlanders, from May 1 to July 31.

On Thursday, the 26th ult., the Khedive personally decorated with the Osmanieh Colonel W. W. Corban, of the Berks Regiment, Lieutenant-Colonel Webster, of the 19th Hussars, and Major Hitchcock, Brigade-Major.

It is satisfactory to note that the authorities are doing something to reduce the strength of the Army Hospital Corps. This corps numbers no less than 260 out of the total force of 8,339, that is, one man of the Army Hospital Corps to every 31 officers and soldiers. Twenty-four of them are ordered to embark, 8 for Cyprus, 7 for Mauritius, 5 to Ceylon, and 4 to Hong Kong.

In view of the unsatisfactory state of health of the 46th, it is thought probable that this regiment may be be ordered home in place of the Berkshire. In fact, four regiments of the Line would be quite a sufficient garrison.

NOTES FROM ALDERSHOT.

(FROM AN OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENT.)

In conformity with the programme of work for the season, published early in March, the three Infantry brigades were ordered to parade on Tuesday morning for divisional drill, under the General commanding. The troops got under arms, but the rain came down so heavily and continuously, that the parade was countermanded, and ordered for the following morning. On Wednesday the Infantry brigades paraded with "general attendance" (which means musketry, gymnastic-instruction, and working and fatigue parties suspended, but all specially employed men, orderlies, and bâtmen exempted), in marching order, at 10.30 a.m., and were formed up on the Queen's Parade, North Camp, in line of double-company quarter-columns facing west. The 84th and 87th, being the strongest regiments on the ground, were each formed into two battalions for drill purposes. The brigades were thus equalised, and consisted of three battalions each: 1st Brigade, Major-General Mark Walker, V.C., C.B.; 2nd Brigade, Major-General F. A. Willis, C.B.; 3rd Brigade, Major-General H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, K.G. On the arrival of Sir Daniel, the Royal and general salutes were practised several times, after which the troops formed up and marched past, first by brigades in open columns of double companies, then from the reverse flank in mass of columns, and again in line of columns. The marching past over, the troops had a good hour's steady divisional drill, returning to quarters at 12.30 p.m. The only unsatisfactory feature noticeable during this excellent morning's work was the attenuated condition of the battalions. There were six and a half regiments on parade, the 26th, left wing, 31st, 39th, 84th, 85th, 87th, and 3rd Battalion, Rifle Brigade; yet, deducting officers, supernumeraries, band, and drums, there could not have been many more than 2,000 bayonets in line. The following officers, undergoing instruction here under Staff-College Regulations, were attached to the Staff of the General commanding during the field-day:—Major James, Scots Greys; Captain Leefe, Royal Marine Artillery; Lieutenant H. de H. Haig, Royal Engineers. A detachment of the 31st Regiment—four officers and 107 men—will arrive at the Camp from Shorncliffe, to join the detachment already here, to-day (Saturday). The 7th Battalion Rifle Brigade (King's Own Royal Tower Hamlets Militia)—19 officers and 780 men—arrived at the Camp on Tuesday, for the annual training. A wing of the 31st Regiment, from Gibraltar—seven officers and 307 men—under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel R. L. Leir, arrived here on Saturday last. The head-quarters and remainder of the battalion will arrive about the end of the month. A free issue of 20,000 rounds of ball ammunition has been authorised for use at the Army Rifle Meeting in July next. This surprising liberality on the part of the Military authorities must be taken as evidence of an earnest desire to really improve the shooting of the Army. General Sir Daniel Lysons, K.C.B., has approved of contributions being made from canteen funds towards the expenses of the Army Rifle Meeting at Aldershot. The qualifications to entitle intending competitors to enter and shoot for prizes will be as follows:—(1.) A regimental subscription of £5, or upwards, will entitle the non-commissioned officers and privates of a battalion to enter for the prizes, on payment of the regular entrance-fees, without restriction as to numbers, as far as target accommodation will allow. (2.) A regimental subscription of £8, or upwards, will entitle the officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates of a battalion to enter as above. (3.) A regimental subscription of less than £8, but exceeding £5, will entitle the non-commissioned officers and privates to enter as per Clause 1; and the officers, in addition, at the rate of 10s. each, up to the amount subscribed in excess of £5. (4.) A regimental subscription of less than £5 will entitle the non-commissioned officers and privates of a battalion to enter up to the amount subscribed, calculating at the rate of 5s. each. (5.) Any non-commissioned officer or private of the Army or Royal Marines, petty officer or seaman of the Navy, not qualified under the above clauses, will be entitled to enter on payment of a subscription of 5s. (7.) Any one not qualified under under the above clauses will be entitled to enter on payment of a subscription of 10s. The following officers have been examined in subjects (a) and (b), Sec. 4, par. 28, Q.R., and have been found qualified.—Lieutenants Howe, 84th; Davis, 96th; Pigott and Hunter, 3rd, Rifle Brigade. The following officers, having been examined, are found qualified to instruct their troops and companies in musketry:—Captains Conran, 39th, and Smythe, 85th; Lieutenants Scott, 3rd Hussars, Holland and Cockayne-Frith, 15th Hussars, and Maul and Scholes, 84th. Lieutenant Daniel C. W. Lysons, 60th Rifles, has ceased to act as Aide-de-Camp to the General Commanding the Division, and has rejoined his regiment. Lieutenant H. Lysons, V.C., 90th Light Infantry, has been appointed in his place. Lieutenant Hill, R.E., has been ordered to Aldershot for duty. The whole of the batteries of Artillery at present stationed here will leave the Camp for annual target practice, on various dates during the present and following months, returning to the Camp on completion of practice:—For Shoeburyness, I-B, P-2, H-4, and P-4. For Okehampton, F-B, and T-1. In former years, the practices were carried out on Cove Common, between the hours of 6 and 9 a.m. But the natives of these parts have such an inveterate habit of crossing the range, at the risk of their lives, while firing is going on, and so much time has been thereby lost, that it has been decided to discontinue Artillery target practice at Aldershot, at least for the present. Sir Daniel Lysons evidently intends that the force under his command, though small, shall be efficient. The whole of the infantry battalions (except the King's Own Royal Tower Hamlets Militia, just arrived) were out again yesterday (Friday), at 10.30 a.m., in marching order, on the Queen's Parade, North Camp, and were put through a stiff morning's work by him, returning to quarters about one p.m. These infantry field-days, which have commenced with steady divisional drill, will go on to more extended formations and the new system of attack, and will take place at least twice a week during the present month. A contingent of the 6th Lancashire (1st Manchester) Rifle Volunteers—500 of all ranks—will arrive here from Manchester to-day (Saturday) for drill with the Regular forces, leaving the Camp on the 17th inst. The battalion will be quartered in huts in the South Camp, and attached to the 1st Brigade. This corps moves to and from Aldershot under arrangements made by it own commanding officer.

DECORATIONS FOR EGYPT TO NAVIGATING OFFICERS AND PAYMASTERS, R.N.

Honours and decorations were profusely showered around for the Egyptian Campaign, but in their bestowal most pointedly diverted from the Navigating and Accountant Branches of the Navy, the seniors of each of which obtained not the slightest recognition. While the 3rd Class of the Order of the Bath was conferred on the Fleet Surgeon and Inspector of Machinery of the Alexandra, the Staff Captain and Paymaster remain unnoticed. With regard to the Inspector of Machinery, we are unable to discover by what law the Military Division of the Order fell to him, as his branch of the service is not included with those qualified by the Statute of June 24, 1861, given at page 575 of the Navy List. An officer of the same rank received the Civil Order for Abyssinia; and if the rules are unaltered since then, the present recipient is incorrectly decorated. While we are only too glad to see Naval Engineers' services properly recognised, we must at the same time raise our voice in complaint at the slight shown to Staff Captains Sutton and Hosken. Their duties exposed them to as much danger as did those of the Commander-in-Chief or any officer in command, but the fact of belonging to the Navigating Branch is not attended with advantage. Distinctions bestowed heretofore on Navigating officers have had to be squeezed out of the Admiralty, as instanced several years ago in the cases of Captains Mainprise, Allen, &c., and in that of the late Sir George Biddlecombe The unusual proceeding of creating an Officer a Knight Bachelor for Military services was resorted to, instead of conferring on him the Second Class of the Military Division of the Bath, public opinion having almost demanded that his valuable services to the country should be recognised. After the Executive, the Navigating Branch have every reason to consider themselves entitled to consideration, but from past experience it is clear that however skilful and zealous an officer may be, he need not expect the slightest reward for performing the most dangerous or complicated duty. Such is fully borne out by the treatment of Navigating officers in the distribution of honours for Egypt, and they have to bear the misfortune of seeing others rewarded while they are left in the cold, because official hearers cast their complaints to the wind. The Paymaster of the Alexandra is the senior on the Active List, and arrived at that rank a few years before either the Fleet Surgeon or Inspector of Machinery entered the service; but rewards to officers of his grade, in their position as Accountants, have never been conferred, and the Admiralty take advantage of that as a precedent for excluding them, when other officers are decorated. During the past 24 years, four Paymasters, who never served in any other appointment than that of secretary, have been made Companions of the Civil Division of the Bath, therefore it must be inferred that a Paymaster as a secretary is eligible, but not so when performing the duties of an accountant officer,—a difference which Admiralty wisdom has invented for the exclusion of a class who are treated with the least consideration accorded any of the civil branches of the service. Why two Admiralty clerks were each awarded a Civil

C.B. for their services in connection with the Egyptian Expedition, when they were not liable to risk of either life or limb, while Paymasters, subject to the danger of shot, shell, and torpedo, were not decorated, might be explained by the First Lord to the satisfaction of a Parliamentary audience, but would not convince those outside the Legislative Chamber. In the award of the Medjidie and Osmanieh, the Navigating and Accountant Branches have been most unfairly treated. Of 40 Staff Commanders and Navigating Lieutenants, 3 were selected; from 27 Paymasters of ships, only 1, not the senior, was selected; while from 34 Fleet and Staff Surgeons and 38 Chief Engineers, 5 of each branch were decorated; making the proportion 1 in 13 for Navigating Officers, 1 in 27 for Paymasters of ships, and nearly 1 in 7 of each of the the Medical and Engineer branches. All the secretaries to Flag Officers were decorated, to the exclusion of senior Paymasters; with the exception of the secretary to the Commander-in-Chief, others of that grade were all juniors in their substantive rank. The Navigating and Accountant Officers have long-standing complaints, which the Admiralty persistently ignore, and this unjust distribution of distinctions is another slight added to the number which "My Lords" have unsparingly heaped on them. If these officers are a necessity to the Naval service, they should be fairly dealt with, instead of receiving treatment which the Admiralty dare not inflict on the profession who have the advantage of Parliamentary representation.

Reviews.

Among the very interesting papers which appear in the Quarterly Review for April, a foremost place may be assigned to a notice of "Les Mères Illustres," by M. le Lescure. The author of this work, setting aside the theories of Mr. Francis Galton, who, in his "Hereditary Genius," relies almost exclusively on instances of its descent or transmission through males, pursues a diametrically opposite course, and insists that all the highest gifts and qualities may be commonly traced to females, and that there has been no great man who had not a great mother. The writer in the Quarterly, leaving the moral, metaphysical, and physiological aspects of the question, proposes to examine somewhat in detail the historical and biographical examples which M. de Lescure has brought together in confirmation or elucidation of his theory. In doing so, he leads the reader from the days of the mother of the Gracchi to those of Madame Victor Hugo, pointing out from time to time many incidents of historic value which are relied upon in support of M. de Lescure's theory. In the course of the narrative, a very interesting letter from De Maistre, addressed to his daughter in 1808, is transcribed:—"Voltaire has said, as you tell me, that women are capable of doing everything that men can do. The precise contrary is the truth. Women have produced no masterpiece in any walk. They have produced neither the 'Iliad,' nor the 'Æneid,' nor the 'Jerusalem Delivered,' nor 'Phèdre,' nor 'Athalie,' nor the 'Misanthrope,' nor the 'Tartufe,' nor the Pantheon, nor St. Peter's, nor the Venus de' Medici, nor the Apollo Belvedere, nor the fire-engine, nor the spinning jenny, nor, &c. But they produce something grander than all these things. It is on their knees that is formed what is most excellent in the world, an honest man and an honest woman." In closing this capital paper, the writer utters some words of warning to the British matrons and spinsters who are clamouring for the rights of women:—"It may opportunely suggest to them that they are running counter to the laws of nature in contending for the equality of the sexes; that they cannot reconcile incompatibilities; that their preordained sphere of action is the domestic circle; that they do more than risk the happiness of the individual family by departing from it; that national interests are at stake; that the general disregard or light observance of the maternal duties in any given community will lead infallibly to the deterioration of the race." In an article on "The French Republic in 1883," the writer in the Quarterly addresses himself principally to the facts set forth by M. Jules Simon in his work, "Dieu, Patrie, Liberté," and draws particular attention to the powerful chapter in which he reviews the general result of recent French legislation. "What," M. Simon asks, "have we done during the last three years? We have done nothing but make ruins. We have lowered men of intelligence by subjecting them to the masses, and the masses by depriving them of their belief. In two words, this is our history." Referring to the mass of candidates who seek for the place of Deputy, the writer in the Quarterly quotes M. Simon's caustic observations:—"They ought to be at the service of a principle, but they are at the service of their own interests, which is almost the contrary. All are beggars; none have professions to make. When the country was infatuated with Gambetta they were Gambettists, and next they sought success by attacking them. It is of little matter to them what hangs at the tail of their hook, provided the fish will take it. What would we not give to find some electoral address of this sort of style!—'Electors, you wish for a military service of three years, because you are only thinking of yourselves; but I shall vote for five years' service, because I think only of the country.' Who can tell, perhaps it would be successful? The electors might say, 'Here is a man!' But we shall have no such pleasure. All are servile. In return, those who are elected exert over the Ministers the despotism which the electors exert over them. The Ministers obey the Deputies, the Deputies obey the electors, the electors obey the demagogues, and what is the result? It is that at home there is an end of government, and abroad there is an end of France."

MARITIME POWER.

The paper read some time back at the Royal United Service Institution by Mr. Barnaby, entitled "Battle Ships—a Forecast," concluded by Mr. Barnaby propounding five questions, which, he stated, seemed to him to be debateable in connection with his subject. These questions were, to some extent, answered in the discussion which followed the reading of his paper, but it has, however, been reserved to Capt. R. H. Harris, R.N., to obtain a much fuller reply to them than was given on that occasion. We promised to again refer to the very carefully thought-out and valuable paper on "Maritime Power and its Probable Application in War," which was read by Capt. Harris on April 27 to a large and distinguished audience at the Royal United Service Institution; Sir Thomas Brassey, K.C.B., M.P., in the chair. It is this paper and the interesting discussion it provoked which has given such a complete answer to Mr. Barnaby's questions. Capt. Harris commenced his paper by referring to the jealousy with which supreme maritime power has been coveted by all nations, at every epoch in the history of the world, and dwelt upon the very transient power it has proved to have been; and how its successive owners "have had to yield that which they so much prized to some other more powerful nation, whose people have made a determined effort to secure maritime supremacy." He then pointed the moral home to ourselves, and fully demonstrated the great necessity that exists of our being fully alive to this fact. After amply illustrating the extreme value of Naval supremacy to an insular and over-populated nation like our own, he went on to say that "we must indeed acknowledge maritime power to be our very life as a nation; without it, our present mercantile prosperity and material wealth must inevitably dwindle to a much lower level," and then wisely observed, "can we with safety let such power slip from our grasp, and feel sure that a successor would continue to use it with the same justice and moderation which we can fairly place to our own credit?" It would be well if such words as these could be heard and appreciated by those who consider our Navy Estimates an undue burden on the country. Want of space will unfortunately prevent us from quoting from this part of Capt. Harris's valuable paper as much as we should wish, but it must be evident to our readers that we have largely shared and supported Capt. Harris's views on these matters, more especially in connection with the fact which is thus aptly put by Capt. Harris, i.e., "that a maritime power with small commerce on the seas, &c., has, at the outset of a war, far less to fear than his enemy, who, with an equal war navy, has a large and extended mercantile marine, &c. The latter has much to lose by defeat, the former has little to lose, and much to gain if victorious," and we also entirely participate in his opinion that every unit of a mercantile fleet, with the exception of its fastest steamers, is a national weakness in maritime war. Following Capt. Harris's remarks on the actual application of maritime power, we were glad to find that he is a strong advocate for much greater speed than we now have in most classes of war vessels, and also that he directs full attention to the many advantages that accrue to either fleets or single ships by the possession of a higher rate of speed than an adversary. Capt. Harris, however, perfectly recognises the many conflicting difficulties which the Naval architect of to-day has to reconcile in his efforts to attain perfection in war ships. We have ourselves repeatedly pointed out in these columns the danger of using heavy ships for blockades, when torpedo vessels are likely to be employed against them. Capt. Harris's remarks on this point alone appear to us to be of infinite value, while we have never heard a more complete exposition of the merits and demerits of the plan of employing fast merchant steamers as cruisers during a maritime war than Capt. Harris has given us in his very interesting paper. From the whole tone of the long discussion that followed, we could see that Capt. Harris's remarks were appreciated and generally accepted by his audience as correct. Amongst those who took part in the discussion were Gen. Sir Lintorn Simmons, several gallant Admirals, Captains, and others, who were interested in the important subject which the lecturer so ably handled. Personally, we were highly gratified to find from the ex-official remarks of Sir Thomas Brassey, the chairman, that the whole question under discussion was receiving the most careful attention of the Admiralty, and that in the immediate future we are likely to have some important additions to our maritime power, in the shape both of faster armoured vessels and corvettes; and we heard with much satisfaction that the speed of the "Admiral" class of armourclads is to be brought up to 16 knots, and the proposed new corvettes are to be even faster. We cannot leave this interesting lecture without remarking on the very obvious advantage which temperate papers of this kind must be to both the Naval architect and seaman, by enabling them to mutually understand and appreciate each other's efforts in regard both to the supply and application of maritime power.

Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil.—Its Unequalled Efficacy in Infantile Wasting and Debility of Children.—Thomas Hunt, Esq., late Medical Officer of Health, St Giles and Bloomsbury, writes:—"In badly nourished infants, Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil is invaluable. The rapidity with which two or three tea-spoonfuls a day will fatten a young child is astonishing. The weight gained is three times the weight of the Oil swallowed, or more; and as children generally like the taste of Dr. de Jongh's Oil, and when it is given them, often cry for more, it appears as though there were some prospect of deliverance for the appalling multitude of children who figure in the weekly bills of mortality issued from the office of the Registrar-General." Dr. R. C. Croft, author of "Handbook for the Nursery," writes:—"I have tried Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil, and find that it contains all the properties which render the Oil so efficacious. I find, moreover, that many patients prefer it to the pale Oils, and are able to retain it more comfortably. It is almost a specific in many of the diseases peculiar to infancy and childhood, and I have seen marked benefit produced by its use." Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil is sold only in capsuled imperial half-pints, 2s 6d; pints, 4s 9d; quarts, 9s; with his stamp and signature and the signature of his sole Consignees on the capsule and the label under wrapper, by all Chemists. COMMISSARIAT AND TRANSPORT CORPS.

FORMATION OF THE BARRACK SECTION.

A Royal Warrant has been issued stating that the ranks of the barrack section will be filled by non-commissioned officers of not less than 18 years' service, volunteering from the Army, who will be allowed to continue in the service after completing 21 years, and of non-commissioned officers discharged to pension within a period of two years prior to the date of the Warrant who may be willing to have their discharges cancelled, and to continue in the service beyond 21 years, for the purpose of serving in the barrack section. Barrack serjeants appointed since July 1, 1881, who have been discharged to pension within a period of two years prior to the date of appointment, will have the option of having their discharges from the Army cancelled, and of reverting to their Army engagements in order to serve under this Warrant, or of continuing to serve as pensioners; but in the latter case with no further claim to further pension on discharge. Candidates for appointment to the barrack section must not be under the rank of serjeant, and not over 45 years of age. They must pass such an educational examination as may be prescribed, and will, if qualified, serve on probation of three months, after which, if serving on Army engagements, they will be transferred to the Commissariat and Transport Corps. On and after the completion of 21 years' service, they will, for misconduct or any other sufficient reason, be liable to be at once discharged. The ranks, titles, and rates of pay will be as follow:—Barrack serjeant, 3s. 6d.; barrack colour-serjeant, 4s.; barrack quartermaster-serjeant, 4s. 6d.; barrack serjeant-major (warrant officer), 5s. per day. The establishment of each rank will be fixed by the Secretary of State for War, and promotion to higher rank within such establishment will be regulated by selection according to length of service and efficiency. The pay of a non-commissioned officer on probation will be 3s. 6d. per day, but if in receipt of higher rate of pay, he will receive such higher rate until confirmed in his appointment. Service and pay will be reckoned from the commencement of probation. Non-commissioned officers with the rank of colour-serjeant on appointment will assume the rank of barrack colour-serjeant, similarly a non-commissioned officer with the rank of quartermaster-serjeant will assume the rank and pay of barrack quartermaster-serjeant. Non-commissioned officers of the barrack section on Army engagement will receive deferred pay under the usual conditions. The retirement of Warrant and non-commissioned officers of the barrack section will be compulsory at the age of 55 years, but in special cases the Under-Secretary of State may extend the age to 60 years. A pensioner appointed to the barrack section with a view of cancelling his discharge will, while on probation, receive duty pay at 2s. per diem in addition to his pension, but if in receipt of a higher rate of pay at the time of his appointment, will receive such higher rate until confirmed in his appointment. A pensioner electing to serve as a pensioner will receive such rate of pay as he drew before the issue of this Warrant. The following is the establishment authorised:—Warrant officers, 30; barrack quartermaster-serjeants, 100; barrack colour-serjeants, 100; barrack-serjeants, 100. Pensions will be governed by Royal Warrant, March 11, 1882, Classes I., II., and IIIa.

A terrible explosion occurred at Priddy's Powder Magazine, Gosport, near Portsmouth, on Saturday morning, resulting in the death of six persons. The explosion took place in a building known as the shell-filling room. The men returned from breakfast at 9 o'clock, and proceeded with their work, filling the shells. For this purpose a barrel of powder is kept in the store. At the time of the explosion James Jones, 39, a seamen pensioner, was employed on the establishment, and six gunners of the Royal Artillery named Sewitt, Raynor, Burn, Hilting, Heither, and Lawrence. In the adjoining room were Bowler, Haingate, and Gunners Mitchell, Postens, Dickens, and Grayson. Jones was in the act of screwing in a fuze, which it is supposed was defective, when the explosion occurred. An examination showed that Jones and Gunners Hilting and Hillier were dead; Gunners Burn, Sewitt, and Raynor succumbed shortly afterwards; and the remaining man Lawrence has had to undergo amputation of one of his legs. They were all horribly burnt, their clothes burnt in shreds from their bodies, and the flesh was stripping off from the limbs. Fortunately, the shed did not catch fire. The Queen sent Sir John McNeill from Osborne to make personal inquiries. A court of inquiry has been held by the military authorities, but nothing satisfactory as to the cause of the disaster was elucidated.

The London correspondent of the Irish Times writes:—"I hear that the dissatisfaction which prevails in the two cavalry regiments stationed in Dublin with regard to the heavy duty imposed upon them during the past two years, while another regiment has been taking its ease in the neighbourhood of the city, will form the subject of a question by Col. O'Beirne, and that if no satisfactory assurance can be obtained from the Secretary for War, the hon. and gallant Member intends to ask leave to move the adjournment of the House, in order to call attention to the matter."

The Queen has been pleased to approve of the Hon. Artillery Company, London, taking precedence next after the Regular Forces; the Militia, Yeomanry, and Volunteers ranking after the corps in question in the order named.

Headaches and Disordered Stomach.—"After suffering for nearly two-and-a-half years from severe headache and disordered stomach, and after trying almost everything, and spending much money without finding any benefit, I was recommended to try your Fruit Salt. Others I know that have tried it have not enjoyed such good health for years.—Yours truly, Robert Humphreys, Post Office, Barrasford." CAUTION.—Legal rights are protected in every civilised country. CIVILIAN CLERKS AT THE ADMIRALTY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—Your publication of Mr. Swainson's "confidential opinion on the Cambridge scandals, for Admiralty information, to save their Lordships trouble," has caused most intense amusement in Naval circles, especially when it is known that your exposé has had much the same effect on the "permanent" officials in the way of scare as if a shell had gone off in their midst. You well deserve the thanks of the Navy for the splendid way you stand up for the service, and your exposure of the shameful manner in which ignorant civilians furnish reports on subjects of which they have not the slightest knowledge. Mr. Swainson's comment on the executive discipline of the Cambridge is remarkable for its impertinence and presumption, which would be laughable, were it not so serious for the Navy to be ruled by men who know nothing of the subjects on which they volunteer their opinions. It is to be hoped that before long the Admiralty will see the necessity of employing Naval officers at Whitehall in work for which they are in every way qualified. Mr. Swainson is so very unpopular with Naval men, that if their Lordships were to request him to resign, the Navy would not grieve; and, if all accounts are true, there would be no tears shed at Whitehall by this gentleman's brother-clerks. In the coming Royal Commission on the Navy, let our party-cry be, "Let Naval men do Naval work at Whitehall and Spring Gardens." Many thousands a year in pay would be then saved on the Estimates, as will be seen on comparing the pay of the Navy with that of civilians at Whitehall.—I am, &c.,

RETIRED PAY AND CIVIL APPOINTMENTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—In your number of Saturday, April 28, among the "Naval Notes," a correspondent calls attention to the great injustice under which, by an arbitrary rule, some officers of the Navy and Marines holding civil appointments still continue to be debarred from receiving their retired pay, whilst to others it is paid. Your correspondent, if he inquired, would find that, as a matter of fact, Parliament knows no distinction, but votes annually in the Navy Estimates a sufficient sum to pay all, and none of the money so voted can legally be appropriated to any other purpose. The present Lord Chief Justice and the late Master of the Rolls, Sir George Jessel, were, as law officers of the Crown, consulted on the subject of withholding retired pay from officers of the Navy and Marines in civil employ, and their opinion, which has never been questioned, may be found quoted in full in the copy of the Army and Navy Gazette of May 6, 1876. It would be curious to hear what Lord Coleridge would say, if the cases to which your correspondent alludes were brought before him. Some remarks made by his lordship in a recent case may give some inkling. His remarks were, that if laxity in the administration of the law is bad, the most odious form of laxity is a discriminating laxity, which does not treat all alike, or words to that effect; and he added that we have to administer the law, whether we like it or not. I think your correspondent may rest satisfied that sooner or later the question of retired pay will have to be met, and dealt with in accordance with law, whether the Admiralty like it, or not.—I am, &c.,

UNFAIR TREATMENT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—As your journal is always ready to come to the assistance of the officer who obtained his commission prior to the abolition of Purchase, might I ask you to insert the following grievance, which I cannot help feeling would be rectified, if inquired into closely—i.e., the hardship in connection with the promotion of captains to the rank of major, under the present system of two battalions? Formerly, in single battalions (on the new system coming into force) the promotions went by seniority and selection. Then came the territorial regiment, with double battalions, and an order to the effect that promotion to major would take effect for a certain number of years in each separate battalion. A grosser injustice was never perpetrated. The system of carrying out promotion is hard in the extreme on many deserving captains, who, because the vacancy does not occur in their own regiment, are passed over by captains considerably their junior, both in length of service and date of captain's commission. The senior captains have generally passed the required examination; whereas the younger captain in many cases is promoted without passing the necessary examination, but is allowed to do so at a future time, in several instances failing, and having to revert months afterwards to his former rank. Surely, it is not fair to the senior captains, who have in most cases passed the examination, served for a long time as adjutants and in other regimental Staff appointments, that they should be passed over by others much their juniors. The great hardship is the fact that it often compels captains of 20 and 21 years' service and 40 years of age to be compulsorily retired, when, if promotion had gone regularly and in order, they would have escaped retirement. If it is too late to cancel the General Order, I would strongly recommend that captains in this unfortunate position should in their regular turn be promoted "supernumerary majors" without increased pay, until absorbed. It would cost the country nothing. It would be a great boon to the officers in question, by saving them from an enforced retirement at an age when they are in the prime of life.—I am, &c.,

Amusements.

The ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA programme has been attractively varied during the week. Meyerbeer's "L'Africaine" has been produced with a strong cast, Madame Pauline Lucca rendering Zelica with remarkable vocal and dramatic energy, while M. Devoyod, the French baritone, has gained a notable triumph as Nelusko, in which character he made his first appearance in this country. He has a rich voice of great power and considerable compass. Signor Mierzwinsky, as Vasco, won much applause by his fine declamatory singing in the trial scene. On Monday was performed "Les Huguenots," Madame Fürsh-Madi more than repeating her previous success as Valentina. On Tuesday Madame Sembrich made her welcome reappearance, after two years' absence, as Elvira, in Bellini's opera of "I Puritani." On Thursday "Faust" presented Madame Pauline Lucca as Marguerite and M. Devoyod in his original character of Valentine, and this evening (Saturday) Meyerbeer's grand opera of "L'Etoile du Nord" enables Mdlle. Gini to make her début in this country, and Madame Sembrich to appear for the first time in England in the prominent character.

The revival of Mr. F. C. Burnand's cleverly adapted comedy of "The Colonel" at the IMPERIAL THEATRE has greatly improved the fortunes of that establishment, now once more exclusively occupied by afternoon performances. The piece was first produced at the Prince of Wales's Theatre in February, 1881. Mr. Edgar Bruce as the American Colonel Wood; Mrs. A. W. Pinero as Olive; Miss Lingard as the comedy widow, Mrs. Blythe; Mr. G. W. Anson as the hypocritical Lambert Streyke; and Mr. C. W. Garthorne as the "Philistine" husband, Richard Forrester, complete, with Mrs. Stephens, Mrs. Dixon, Mr. C. H. Hawtrey, and Mr. H. W. Lambert, a most efficient cast.

The comic opera season will terminate at the STRAND THEATRE next week, and Mr. John S. Clarke will then appear for a fortnight prior to his departure for America.

The morning performance at the GAIETY in aid of the fund for Mr. Royce, the esteemed actor so suddenly disabled from following his profession by a paralytic seizure, is fixed for Tuesday next. A very attractive programme has been arranged, comprising the names of nearly all the popular members of the London stage.

The authorities in India (the Times says) have hired four transports for the conveyance to England of a large number of soldiers whose period of service with the colours has expired. These men had been given the option of extending their service over an additional period of two years, each receiving a bounty of 50 rupees, but the offer is said to have been universally rejected by those to whom it was made, the monotony of military life in India being distasteful to the men. The military authorities had not, it appears, calculated upon this, and had, therefore, allowed several of the regular troopships to come home unfilled. They are now consequently obliged to resort to hired vessels in order to keep faith with the soldiers, and to incur a heavy expense which might have been avoided, had the feelings of the men upon the subject of the prolongation of their service been ascertained at an earlier period.

Experiments have for some time past been going on at Portsmouth with torpedo poles, but nothing has been found sufficiently strong to withstand the strain when the pole is immersed and the torpedo-boat is driven at full speed. Some idea of the enormous pressure on the pole may be obtained from the fact that it was formed of two steel plates each 5-16 in. thick, bent into a circle 6 in. diameter, to form a tube, and having flanges above and below, $1\frac{1}{2}$ in. deep. Between these plates, and riveted to them, was a third plate of the same thickness and 9 in. deep, the whole making an extremely strong girder. Whether any further experiments with another pole will be made is not yet known, but apparently it seems almost unnecessary to make a pole strong enough to stand the full speed of this class of boat, as probably in practice an enemy would never be attacked in this way. Were the pole retained inboard while steaming full power at an enemy, and lowered at about half-speed when nearly up to her, there would be more chance for the pole standing the work required of it, some chance of the boat and men escaping after the attack, and little chance of the enemy escaping the discharge of the torpedo.

SPECTACLES v. BLINDNESS.—"Spectacles can only be perfectly adjusted by those having a thorough knowledge of the anatomy of the eye, combined with optical experience."—We have the highest medical authorities confirmed by daily experience, that imperfect glasses, together with the haphazard plan of selection generally employed by the mere vendor, is the cause of most cases of blindness and defective vision. Sir Julius Benedict writes:—"I have tried the principal opticians in London without success, but the spectacles you have adapted suit admirably. The clearness of your glasses as compared with others is really surprising." The Rev. Professor W. A. Hales, M.A. Cantab., 2 Minford Gardens, West Kensington Park, writes:—"The spectacles are perfect, and a most decided boon. I had occasion on Monday to write to Lord ——, and took the opportunity to mention your name and the wonderful power of your spectacles." Dr. Bird, Chelmsford, writes:—"I could not have believed it possible that my sight could have been so much improved and relieved at my age (82). I can now read the smallest type, although suffering from cataract on the right eye." Testimonials from Earl and Countess Lindsay; F. D. Dixon Hartland, Esq., M.P.; the Venerable Archdeacon Palmer, Clifton; Rev. Mother Abbess, St. Mary's Abbey, Mill Hill, Hendon; C. J. Alford, Esq., Gas Light and Coke Company, Horseferry Road, Westminster, &c. Mr. HENRY LAURANCE, F.S.S., Oculist Optician, 39 OLD BOND STREET, W. (late 3 Endsleigh Gardens, Euston Square), personally adapts his Improved Spectacles daily (Saturdays excepted), from 10 to 5. Special arrangements are made for invalids and others unable to wait on Mr. Laurance. Pamphlet, "Spectacles: their Use and Abuse," post free. City Branch, 6 Poultry, Cheapside.

THE Revised Musketry Instructions, which have lately been issued, are a slight step in the direction of improving the firing of our soldiers, and we can only hope that as the system now introduced becomes perfected, such disasters as that of Amajuba Hill will, for all future time, be averted. But while we agree most cordially in the provision made by these regulations for the increased allowance of ammunition allowed to the soldier for practice, there are several points which will well bear criticism, and which it is desirable to discuss. To begin with, Pars. 1 and 2 of the Regulations provide for the abolition of all Regimental Instructors and Serjeant-Instructors of Musketry, and arrange for the duties previously carried out by them being undertaken by the officers and non-commissioned officers of the companies, under the frequent supervision of the Lieutenant-Colonels commanding. Now, these Musketry-Instructors, both officers and men, have undergone a long course of musketry at Hythe, have studied the subject closely, and during the practical courses year by year have added to their knowledge. If, then, these men are done away with, and the instruction is entrusted to company officers, who, however good in themselves, have not had the benefit of special training, it seems only reasonable to suppose that the instruction cannot be so effectively carried out as heretofore. There can be no doubt that this portion of the order will have a good effect in so far as the education of the officers themselves is concerned, since, in order to teach others, they must first learn themselves; but we see no provision made to furnish them with the means of acquiring the knowledge which it will now be necessary for them to possess. The order says (paragraph 4):—"They must be able to impart instruction in the position, aiming, and judging-distance drills, and cleaning-arms instruction; in all the details of the annual course, including the duties of the register-keepers, markers, section commanders, and signallers, and in the use of stadiometers and range-finders,"—truly a goodly list of accomplishments with which to expect every officer to make himself acquainted. Another point in connection with this part of the order is that these officers, inexperienced in the ways of teaching, are to be simply under the supervision of the commanding officer. Now, the commanding officer has not only the musketry to attend to, but he has the whole internal economy of the regiment, the drills, the discipline, the cleanliness, and the routine to superintend. It is impossible that he can find the time to look closely into the details of the musketry course, and see that the men are being properly instructed. True, he can call upon his Majors to assist him; but if this work is to be specially superintended, why not have some one specially qualified to superintend it? In Par. (7), under the heading of the Second Part of the Annual Course, it is ordered that each man should fire 50 rounds, but it goes on to say that the number of rounds need not necessarily be the same for each man, as the total number of rounds allowed for the second part may be distributed amongst the good or bad shots, as most desirable. This is a very excellent arrangement, as it leaves to the commanding officer freedom in the finishing of the men's musketry education. Certain practices are suggested for his consideration, the first being "(a) repetition by the worst shots of any portion of the first part of the course." This raises the question as to whether it is desirable to have the whole regiment an average shooting regiment, or to have half, say, exceptionally good shots, and the remainder decidedly bad ones. There is nothing that requires so much constant practice as firing, and if in a regiment there are certain men who make good firing, and promise well, it seems a pity that the limited amount of ammunition provided should be employed in endeavouring to teach the "duffers" to shoot, instead of applying it to perfecting the good shots. Look at the case of the Boers, from whom we have learnt the lessons that are now bearing fruit. Would their firing have been so effective had they simply, as a whole, been able to fire only fairly, instead of having, as they had, a great proportion of exceptionally good shots? No amount of practice will make some men good shots, and it is only right to infer that those recruits who, after firing the 260 rounds given to them, have not made satisfactory progress, are not worth having more rounds bestowed on them to the detriment of the good shots. Whilst on the subject, we would point out that the War Office ought not to be blind or indifferent to the necessity for the Reserve—which they have created at the expense of remodelling the whole of the military forces of the country—receiving some kind of training during the years when the men are rusting in civil employment. Whatever difficulties may beset the situation, it is imperative that the Reserves, if they are to be of any use as fighting men, should at least be able to shoot. Generals Willis and Drury-Lowe, on their return from Egypt, spoke publicly of the infantry shooting generally as "execrable." As victory was achieved with such shooting, what a relief it must have been to those distinguished leaders to find that their men were opposed to an enemy whose shooting was, if possible, worse, instead of to Boers, who could have shot down any formation within 400 yards of them, as they did at Laing's Nek, Ingogo, and Amajuba Hill! The indisputably bad shooting of our infantry is attributed to defective instruction and insufficient practice; and hence the new system has been inaugurated. These measures are, however, to our minds, fallacious, and do not really strike at the root of the evil. Bad shooting results almost entirely from the nervously excitable unsteadiness of the juvenile Tommy Atkins, and the lost training of the Reserve man, who has probably not fired a single shot for several years when suddenly recalled to the colours for active service. It will be remembered that just outside Alexandria, a battalion, or portion of one, whether of Rifles or "red soldiers" it matters not, fired at a body of cavalry within 350 yards without emptying a saddle or disabling a horse. This is as much a matter of history as the battle of Tel-el-Kebir, though not mentioned in despatches. If the men had been Boers, a very different account would have been given of those horsemen. The shooting justified the opinion of the General who said "that the men could not hit a haystack"; yet it is hardly flattering to the pride of the British Lion as a formidable opponent. Those who have been in action with young soldiers quite understand how this "firing party" made such a mess of it. The juvenile Tommy, in his over-anxiety to expend his ammunition as quickly as possible in the direction from which the compliment is being returned, will almost invariably "let her off" before the butt comes to the shoulder, and when the eye is a couple of inches above the backsight, with the certain result of an unscathed human target. The shooting in action of the very young soldier can never be otherwise than indifferent, for he has only been through one or two annual courses of instruction, and the excitement of action will affect him more than his older comrade, and produce greater unsteadiness. Now, considering that the whole Army has been converted into a nursery, and all else sacrificed for the "fad" of a Reserve, what ought that to be but the main element of stability in the service? Yet, unpractised in shooting, marching, or drilling, what is the Reserve now but a snare and a delusion? The Government cannot see their way to training these men, because employers will not give up their workmen for the purpose, without discharging them altogether, thus destroying the Reserve scheme, and recruiting with it. Yet a partial remedy remains. Our admirable auxiliaries, the Volunteers, all men of business, manage to find time both to drill and to shoot. Let every Reserve man be attached to whatever Volunteer Corps is nearest to him, and let him fire annually, under proper supervision, the prescribed number of rounds, and put in at least seven drills, with liability to forfeiture of pay in case of failure. There may be some difficulty in carrying out such a scheme as this, though it seems simple and practical; but the matter is of such grave importance, that whatever obstructions may lie in the way should be removed. If merely the shooting of the boy soldiers in the ranks be improved, the work will be only half done. What we want to do is to leaven the whole mass. It is no use creating crack shots, if directly they are trained to the use of these weapons of defence they are to quit the ranks of the Army for the Reserve, and forget all they have learnt. We should aim at increasing efficiency all round, so that our battalions might proceed on active service fully confident of their own powers of self-defence. They cannot do this now, for they lack the first requirement of military organisation—cohesion. The object of those in office should be, therefore, to overcome whatever defects are found to exist. These shortcomings to which we refer must be apparent to every officer of experience. Not a moment, then, should be lost in inquiring how far it would be possible to remove the blots which exist in the new system, and which will effectually mar its success and frustrate the objects of its framers.

SIR THOMAS BRASSEY, in replying to Lord Henry Lennox, made a remark in which we entirely concur. It is unfortunate that the discussion of Naval questions should so frequently land us in what seems to be a hopeless controversy. We admit, also, that the responsibility for the general position of the country as a Naval Power must be shared by a long succession of Administrations, by far the greater number of which have, we would remind the Senior Lord of the Admiralty, been Liberal in name, but most niggardly in nature. We cannot admit that the present Administration is free from blame for the existing state and condition of the Navy, however much Sir Thomas Brassey would like the country to do so. For we cannot forget that, since the present Administration entered upon its duties of government, it has received ample warning to remedy the mistakes made by its predecessors. Sir Thomas Brassey admitted this when he stated that the Admiralty had received some extremely unfavourable reports as to the state of the Navy. But, acting under the belief that the fleets of foreign Powers have been exaggerated and our own unfairly depreciated, our Naval rulers have elected to disregard all warnings, and to follow their own policy of masterly inactivity, like that bird which thrusts its head into the sand, and fancies itself secure from the attacks of its enemies. We will not follow Sir Thomas Brassey through all his fads and fancies, although some of them we must notice. For example, to take credit for never having armed ships with lighter ordnance than that for which they were designed, as he said foreign Powers had to do, when there were no heavy guns for the ships designed to carry them in our own Navy, where the whole armament is muzzle-loading, when it should be breech-loading, is evidently a fallacy. To estimate the fighting efficiency of a ship now-a-days by her tonnage is also a fallacy; while to disregard numbers, and assert that an ironclad of 10,000 tons' displacement is superior to, say, three of 3,000 tons' displacement, is a fault we should hardly have thought possible in a Lord of the Admiralty, even though he be a civilian. "Differences of coal supply are ignored," says Sir Thomas Brassey. This statement, however, is directly opposed to the real facts of the case, which a cursory perusal of the back numbers of the Army and Navy Gazette will prove conclusively. We have repeatedly proved that the French and Italian ironclads carry a far larger coal supply than do our own ships, which, for the most part, could not last out a week at full speed, while many of the foreign ships carry enough coal to steam across the Atlantic and back. To assert that our obsolete ironclads could be made serviceable cruisers by substituting improved machinery for their old-fashioned engines and boilers, is simply assuming that the Members of the House of Commons, knowing nothing of Naval matters, will gulp down any official statement, however absurd it be. Far better spend the money on new ships. To lay it out on improved machinery for the old would simply be throwing it away. The comparison made by Sir Thomas Brassey of the relative strength of the French and English Fleets was as misleading as the fads and fancies we have exposed above. He assured the House that his comparisons were confined to ships actually ready for sea in 1882, and to those which would be ready for the pendant in 1885, and built of iron or steel, or of wood launched subsequently to 1867. We prefer to consider all ships launched prior to 1876 as obsolete or obsolescent, as during the last eight years the improvements in armour-clad construction have been so fast and numerous that not one of the ships launched prior to that date could face a modern ironclad with any chance of success. Their armour is too thin to keep out the projectiles thrown by the heavy ordnance recently introduced. Their own guns are too light to penetrate the compound or steel armour of the modern ships. Their speed is too slow to enable them either to overtake and ram, or to run away from, and thus avoid being rammed by, ironclads of the latest types. Hence we condemn as obsolete or obsolescent 42 English and 37 French armourclads. Sir Thomas Brassey, however, groups together his ships in a most misleading manner, and omits to mention that the French ironclads ordered to be ready by 1885, whether belonging to the first, second, or coast-defence class, will all be able to take their stations in line of battle, and that their speed, average thickness of armour, and total tonnage exceeds that of the English ships the Admiralty promise will be ready by the same date. The comparison made by Sir Thomas Brassey was as follows:—"In the first-class ships, with armour of not less than 9 in., and a displacement exceeding 8,500 tons, we had, in 1882, ten ships aggregating 96,000 tons; the French, three ships of 22,000 tons. In 1885, we should have 15 ships of 140,000 tons; the French, six ships of 61,000 tons. Taking for the second-class ships protected with armour exceeding 8 in., and displacements under 8,500 tons, we had, in 1882, 13 ships of 80,000 tons; the French, seven ships of 56,000 tons. In 1885, we should have 16 ships of 101,000 tons, and the French 13 ships of 93,000 tons. In a third class, consisting of ships with 4½ in. to 6 in. of armour, and without limit as to displacement, we had, in 1882, 13 ships of 104,000 tons; the French, 12 ships of 50,000 tons. In 1885, we should have 12 ships of 98,000 tons; the French, five ships of 24,000 tons. For coast defence, we had, in 1882, eight ships of 28,000 tons; the French, 14 ships of 37,000 tons. In 1885 we should remain as at present, while the French would have increased to nine ships of 41,000 tons. In this comparison, vessels for colonial defence and the Viper, Vixen, and Waterwitch were omitted on our side. On the French, seven floating batteries and the Onondaga were excluded. The Committee and the country should be reassured by this statement." And the Committee and the country appear to have been reassured by this statement, but we have not. On the contrary, we are now convinced that dust is being thrown with a purpose in the eyes of the people and of their representatives in Parliament. If this were not the case, why should the Admiralty stoop to mis-stating facts? And these, as disclosed by the official documents before us, are as follows:—England, as we have already stated, possesses forty-two ironclads, now obsolete or obsolescent. France possesses thirty-seven ironclads in the same state and condition. This leaves England five ironclads, not line-of-battle ships, more than France. No doubt, a certain number of these ships could be used as cruisers, blockaders, or troopers, on both sides, in case of war; but for the purpose of a Naval combat, in which modern ships of the line, with their monster guns, thick armour, and high speed, took part, they are, to all intents and purposes, useless. Of battle ships of the line proper, built or building since 1875, England possesses fifteen, while France owns twenty-two. It is perfectly true that the French ships are divided up into classes, and that some of them are called coast-defence ships, but our argument is this. All the French ships designed since 1875 are intended to act as battle ships of the line, when necessary. Their armour, guns, and general design entitle them to rank as line-of-battle ships. They are all ram built, and their engines have been designed to impart to them a rate of speed exceeding anything yet obtained in this country. Their total displacement tonnage also exceeds that of the English ships, as does the mean thickness of the armour which protects their guns and vital parts. Nothing, in our opinion, is more fallacious than to base an estimate of the fighting efficiency of a modern ironclad on her displacement tonnage. In the olden days of three-deckers, no doubt this was the correct method of forming an appreciation of the fighting power of a ship, for then tonnage meant guns, and men to fight them and board the enemy. Then the shot crashed through and through the ship, carrying havoc in their wake. Then an additional thousand tons meant many guns, and the consequent ability to sink a ship the more easily in a single broadside. But even then small ships vanquished large ones,—as in the case of the Spanish Armada. In modern times, however, we have seen the small Huascar defy the superior tonnage and numerous guns of the Shah and Amethyst, and only succumb to the heavier metal and armour of the Almirante Cochrane and Blanco Encalada. Hence, we say Sir Thomas Brassey was decidedly at fault when he endeavoured to impose upon the credulity of the House of Commons by his tonnage formula for measuring the fighting efficiency of a modern ironclad, for it should never be forgotten that four, or even two, gun-vessels of moderate tonnage, such as the French are now building, having a very high rate of speed and carrying one gun only, but built to ram, would be more than a match for an Inflexible of 11,000 tons. Not only in this, but in every one of his arguments, as also in his facts, was Sir Thomas Brassey most egregiously at fault, and this we prove by the following tabular statement of the modern ironclads of England and France, both built and building, and designed to be ready for sea in 1885:—

The foregoing tabular statement only includes ships built or building since 1875. All others have been relegated to the obsolete or obsolescent list. We thus see that in 1885 the total owned by France in modern ironclads will amount to 182,537 tons displacement, carrying a mean thickness of armour of 43½ centimètres; while England will only have afloat a total of 140,600 tons displacement, carrying a mean thickness of armour of 43 centimètres. France will thus possess 41,937 tons of modern ironclads more than England. Taking from the obsolescent list the five best ships England possesses over and above the number possessed by France, namely, the Sultan, Superb, Neptune, Devastation, and Thunderer—in all, 46,430 tons displacement, carrying a mean thickness of armour of 28 centimètres—we only equalise the displacement tonnage of the two ironclad fleets, while reducing the mean thickness of the armour carried by the English ships; even then the English Fleet will only consist of 20 ships, of which five will be obsolescent, as against the French Fleet of 22 ships, of which all will, in 1885, be modern. In addition, the French will have eight armoured gun-vessels, each of 1,639 tons displacement, built to ram and launch torpedoes, carrying each one heavy gun, and having all very high rates of speed. The French fleet of troopships will also be colossal, no fewer than fifty large troopships having been built or ordered to be built. The Shamrock, built at Havre, is in every respect similar to our Indian troopships, but of what use such an enormous fleet of men-of-war transports can be to France, unless she meditates transporting an army to the Baltic or across the Channel, we cannot conceive. Even an energetic colonial policy will hardly account for this addition to the French Navy. Taking all these facts together, we think that neither the House of Commons nor the country should rest satisfied with the existing state and condition of our Ironclad Navy or the shipbuilding policy of the Admiralty.

WE noticed lately an agitation that had been set on foot among the Subalterns of the Indian Staff Corps to obtain acceleration of promotion to the rank of Captain, and whilst commenting on the peculiarly unfavourable conditions under which these officers are serving, we suggested that the matter was well worthy the attention of the Secretary of State for India. We have just had placed in our hands a published circular emanating from the Committee of "The Staff Corps and Indian Army Fund," and from it we find that this Committee has agreed to administer a Fund, to be described as "The Staff Corps Accelerated Promotion Fund," for the purpose, as the circular states, "Of giving definite and vigorous shape to the undoubted grievance of Indian officers in the matter of promotion." The circular sets forth the cause of grievance which the fund will, it is hoped, be the means of redressing, and mentions the means which are to be applied to effect this end. We give the circular verbatim:—"Under the present Staff Corps rules, a Lieutenant is promoted to the rank of Captain after twelve years' service; to that of Major, after twenty; to that of Lieutenant-Colonel, after twenty-six; whereas, in British regiments, a Cavalry Subaltern gets a troop, on the average, in seven years, while the Infantry Subaltern is promoted, as a rule, after nine years. Only the Engineers have to wait twelve years, and for them the Government is understood to be going to do something. As to Captains, it is noticeable that they cannot be promoted to the rank of Major until they would, if in a British regiment, be superannuated; and it is a fact that, under the present system, unless some change be made, there will only be seven Majors in the whole of the Madras regiments. It is not, therefore, for Subalterns alone that this movement is set on foot, but to ensure accelerated promotion generally throughout the service. The exact period of service qualifying for promotion can only be suggested as yet, but it is submitted that, as the Warrant of July 1, 1881, accelerated promotion enormously in British regiments, all Staff Corps Subalterns who had completed ten years' service or more at that date should have their captaincies dated from that day, and those who had not completed that amount should be promoted at the expiration of ten years' service. The rank of Major to date, similarly, with seventeen years' service; that of Colonel with twenty-four years. The great injustice by which Sub-Lieutenants were deprived in many instances of one, or even two years' service needs, and will receive, thorough ventilation. The English Press has always afforded great facilities for the assistance of those who, being far from home, are apt to be forgotten or neglected amid the more obvious demands of the home service; and it is intended in this case to rely largely on the Press, as was done with great success in the earlier movement. By this means, and by questions in the Houses of Parliament, the real state of the case will be laid before the public, and meanwhile, individual petition forms will be sent to the officers interested, by which each one will be enabled to lay his case before Parliament. These petitions will be sent in the first instance to the Committee, and will only be presented when a sufficiently large number has been received to mark the decided and important nature of the complaint." It will probably be remembered that the Committee of the Staff Corps and Indian Army Fund took up some two years ago the case of the pensions of the Indian Army, and it was the indirect means of bringing about great changes in the Pension Rules, which would probably never have been obtained but for its representations. We hope that the Committee will now meet with the same success that then crowned its efforts; but, at the same time, we cannot help thinking that agitation of this sort is to be regretted for many reasons. An agitation in the Army closely resembles a strike among labouring classes; but, whereas on the one hand, military discipline keeps the machine in motion while the disturbances are at work, on the other, the whole mechanism stops until the difficulty is removed in one way or another. Strikes are only resorted to in extreme cases; they are always to be foretold, and by careful management, by conciliation, and by slight concession, they ought to be, and generally are, averted. In the same way in the Army, any unsatisfactory state of affairs which produces known discontent, and it may be, hardship, likely to lead eventually to agitation, should be gone into by the Military authorities, and by them remedied as soon as the existing grievance is proved. Unfortunately, in the Indian Army, this system does not appear to be in vogue. The Military authorities, either from insufficient knowledge or by reason of their working on the principle of "masterly inactivity," do not move until things have reached a climax, and agitation is set on foot. A fund is formed by subscriptions raised among the officers, and the matter is placed in the hands of civilians at home, who use every means to ventilate the grievance they have in hand. Then, and not till then, do the authorities institute inquiries. They find grievances existing, and while rebuking the officers on the means they have employed to give their grievance publicity, they then redress them. Surely the same result might be obtained by keeping a more careful watch on the working of the Army, and especially on that of the Indian Army, the constitution of which is so intricate, as to be, to any but to professional men thoroughly conversant with the subject, a complete mystery.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales has consented to read a paper on the subject of "Fisheries and the Fishing Population of this Kingdom," prepared at considerable trouble by H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh. The information contained in the paper is derived entirely from the personal experience of the Duke of Edinburgh, and the information his Royal Highness gained on the subject while in command of the Royal Naval Reserves. In this paper, the Duke of Edinburgh endeavours to explain the present state and condition of our fishing population, and he also gives an account of the fisheries of the United Kingdom, as they exist. Means to ensure the safety and welfare of our fishermen are also advocated. This paper will be read by the Prince of Wales during the absence of the Duke of Edinburgh from England to attend the coronation of the Czar of Russia.

Vice-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke, accompanied by her Royal and Imperial Highness the Duchess, of Edinburgh, and attended by General Lord Wolseley, Vice-Admiral the Earl of Clanwilliam, and their respective suites, left England on Thursday for Moscow, to attend the coronation of the Czar of Russia.

The Director of Shipbuilding and Engineering of the Danish Navy requests us to state that no order for armour-plates has yet been given by the Danish Government consequent on the trials which recently took place on the island of Amager, near Copenhagen. Mr. Nilseen further requests us to state that neither he nor any other Engineer officer of the Danish Navy has at any time been officially connected with the Creuzot Works, and informs us that a copy of the official report on the Amager trials will be forwarded to us for publication as soon as it is ready.

We have on more than one occasion advocated the establishment of electric communication between distant lighthouses and the shore, and we are pleased to see that steps are being taken to carry out this suggestion. At a Trinity House banquet held on the 9th inst., H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, Master of the Corporation, said that "an important experiment was shortly to be tried which had been loudly called for from many quarters, and that was the attempt to establish electric telegraph communication between lightships and the shore. This was thought, and very properly so, as of especial importance in regard to the mouth of the River Thames, where so many wrecks occurred. It was believed that the lightships which were anchored or moored off the shoals there, would often be able to telegraph to the shore for assistance from lifeboats to save the crews of ships going to wreck on these shoals. He hoped the attempt would prove a success, and that this telegraphic communication between lighthouses, lightships, and the shore would soon be universal." There is no doubt but the experiment must prove successful, and that it will be a benefit to the Royal Navy, to merchant ships and their owners, and to the public at large.

Admiral Sir Anthony Hoskins, commanding the Royal Naval Reserves, has been engaged during the past week inspecting the Coastguard stations on the Shannon, and on the West Coast of Ireland. The men have been put through their various drills, and an assault-at-arms was given in honour of Admiral Hoskins by the men belonging to the Cappa, Kilrush, Doonbey, and Spanish Point stations.

Naval officers who have served in Australia will hear with regret of the death at Melbourne of Captain Fredric Standish, late Chief Commissioner of the Victorian Police. He formerly belonged to the Royal Artillery, and was a prominent representative of the English Turf, on which he bore a reputation which is still remembered by the few remaining of a good old stock of whom the late Admiral Rous was the leader. In 1852 the Derby was calamitous by the race being sacrificed to an outsider, who, on a course deep in mud, beat the most splendid thoroughbreds that had ever appeared at Epsom. Through the misfortunes attendant thereon, Captain Standish left this country, and in the far-off land of Australia hoped to realise a fortune in its goldfields. But like many others who tried their hands, he was unsuccessful, and had to resort to labourer's work for a subsistence. Luckily, he was recognised by an old brother-officer of former days, then in the legislature of the colony, who obtained him an appointment in the police force, a post for which he was eminently fitted, and retained it as its chief until 1880. His knowledge of Turf matters, acquired in England, helped him largely in the great sporting community which has sprung up in the Antipodes. Many of our readers will remember the Melbourne Cup, and Standish foremost among the leading members of the Jockey Club. Naval men found him, as of old, a genial companion and friend, ever ready to help them, if new to Melbourne, and willing to sacrifice his own convenience for their benefit. His death makes a gap which cannot easily be filled up; and visitors to the great city of Australia, as well as Naval officers, will miss one who, in spite of early reverses and absence from the old country, still retained those qualities which mark men of our good, old, county families, and make them appreciated in distant English communities.

The Mediterranean Squadron left Malta for Corfu and Fiume on Thursday.

Early in the year a dock was opened at Port Lyttleton, New Zealand, which, while it will answer all requirements of the Mercantile Marine, might have been adapted to those of vessels-of-war, had the advice of the Naval profession been offered. The length is 450 ft.; width at entrance, 62 ft.; least width where ship's bilge would be, 54 ft.; width at top, 82 ft.; width on floor, 46 ft.; but the depth on the sill is only 23 ft.; therefore, the Nelson, now on the Australian station, could not be taken into it. Considering that, with the exception of Williamstown, Melbourne, there is no dock on the station capable of receiving a first-class ironclad, it is to be regretted that, when the New Zealand one was proposed and planned in 1879, timely suggestions were not made by Commodore Wilson, who was then on the station, to the Government of the colony, to ensure the Lyttleton Dock being built to admit our largest fighting-ships. While the length was not overlooked, considerations of bilge width and depth at sill appear to have been lost sight of, and we feel sure that, had Imperial advice been proffered, it would have been taken advantage of. The adventurous spirit of the people of Canterbury, of which Lyttleton is the chief seaport, is a remarkable feature in this important colony, and deserves every encouragement from the Home Government; but to forget, and not aid them, seems the intention of our rulers, who do not appear to attach importance to a country which in the march of years must attain greatness.

A correspondent, writing from Port Royal, Jamaica, on April 24, says:—"We are all much amused at the reshuffling of the Admiralty pack,—how one man goes from Private Secretary to Steam Reserve, from that to Excellent, from that to Sheerness Dockyard; another from Excellent to Private Secretary, Private Secretary to Sheerness, and from that to Ordnance; while others, our poor old Commodore here, for instance, never get a home appointment all their lives, but go on toiling and slaving in the hottest and most unhealthy climates without the slightest recognition for their services. Commodore Purvis has more sea-service than most Admirals, and all his ships have been noted for their good order and cleanliness. I am afraid, however, that we shall lose him before long, as he cannot get over the accident he met with while inspecting the Flamingo, and the doctors think he ought to go home. He will be a great loss, as he is much liked, and has done a great deal for the dockyard and for us socially."

Lieutenant de Brazza, of the French Navy, landed at the Gaboon on April 21, having arrived there with his expedition to take possession of the territory he claims for France on the Congo. We have not yet heard of any conflict having arisen between this officer and Mr. H. M. Stanley, who is credited with having matured some deep scheme to ensure the failure of M. de Brazza's expedition.

We have reason to believe the recent grounding of the Inflexible was due to the regulations of the Admiralty on torpedo practice. To fire these weapons and prevent their being lost, it is required to take ships-of-war into shallow water,—thus to save a few hundred pounds, a million is risked: such is official economy!

From the West Coast of Africa we learn that the French sloop Voltigeur has visited Bonny, and that her commander has endeavoured to induce the Chiefs to enter into a treaty with France. This they declined to do, asserting that they were well treated by the English, and that they regarded Mr. Hewett, the British Consul, as their father, and would do nothing in his absence. Consul Hewett was expected to return in about a fortnight, but the Commander of the Voltigeur did not consider it advisable to await his arrival. At the same time, a report reaches us that the French have landed near Porto Novo, and have hoisted the French flag, and commenced constructing a fort on some land of which they have taken possession in the name of the Republic. The Deputy-Governor of Lagos, accompanied by Judge Stubbins, left Lagos on April 9 for Porto Novo, to enquire into the matter. From the Sherbo River we hear that the natives have been giving the colonial authorities some trouble.

The Channel Squadron will leave Gibraltar after the Queen's birthday, when the Neptune has joined, and will proceed to Port Mahon.

The Congo question is daily becoming more and more complicated, and the negotiations between England and Portugal on the subject had a curious and somewhat inconvenient result for the Whydah traders last month. It appears that the British Government was making overtures to Portugal for granting to the latter Power the unquestioned right over some valuable land up the Congo River, in return for the cession of Whydah to Great Britain. The King of Dahomey took great umbrage at the statement, and asserted that the Portuguese have no authority to dispose of Whydah in the manner named. By way of asserting his prerogative, his Majesty has caused all white people within his dominions to be confined to their houses, and trade is thereby stopped. We hope shortly to publish an article going thoroughly into this important question.

There are at present building at Ferrol and Cartagena three large cruisers for the Spanish Navy. The names of these vessels are Alfonso XII., Reina Cristina, and Reina Mercedes, and they are of the following dimensions:—Length between the perpendiculars, 264 ft.; beam, extreme, 41 ft.; draft of water, 21 ft.; displacement, 3,100 tons; indicated horse-power, 4,400; estimated speed, 15·5 knots; armament, eight 6-in. Armstrong breech-loading guns, and four lighter guns of Spanish manufactures.

The Admiralty intend paying off the London before the beginning of the next unhealthy season at Zanzibar, and an arrangement is being made for other measures being taken for the suppression of the slave trade on the Zanzibar coast. The London will not be replaced by another store-ship. A depôt will most probably be formed on shore, and the senior officer of the division will take charge of the coast and the suppression of the slave trade.

Captain John Ericson has advised his Swedish countrymen, in answer to a committee which addressed him on the subject, that the defence of the kingdom would be best insured by a powerful fleet of ironclads for coast defence. According to Captain Ericson's opinion, Sweden can only then successfully resist the attack of a large power, if she has at command a number of vessels capable of contending with an ironclad fleet. Pointing to the enormous mechanical resources of Sweden, the builder of the celebrated Monitor observes that he could, within a comparatively short space of time, and at a moderate expense, build a Fleet which, armed with his under-water cannon, would be equal to any emergency. He undertakes to build at New York 20 vessels, 130 ft. in length, 18 ft. beam, and 11 ft. in depth, for a sum of 2,000,000 dollars. Whatever may be the value of Captain Ericson's suggestion, there can be no doubt but that they have created some sensation in Sweden, where it is now proposed to devote 3,500,000 crowns annually to the construction of a number of iron war vessels. A large order for compound armour has already been placed with a Sheffield firm by the Swedish Government. It is, however, supposed that this armour is not intended for Naval purposes, but for coast fortifications.

The German steel cruiser Blitz, which, as reported in the Army and Navy Gazette of the 7th ult., has recently undergone some rather unsuccessful trial-trips (the horse-power falling short by several hundreds of that contracted for), seems to be giving much trouble somewhere, as it is said that the German Admiralty have refused to take over the vessel from the builders, unless at a very large reduction in the price. The builders deny this report, and state that unsuccessful results were due rather to the bad weather encountered on the six-hour runs. Here is a fine chance for our Admiralty to pick up a "valuable addition to the Navy!"

Admiral Lord Alcester presided last Friday week at the Royal United Service Institution, when a paper was read by Captain G. H. Noel, R.N., on "Masting Ships," the lecturer advocating a return to the general employment of sail power in ironclads. Captain Colomb and Captain R. H. Harris opposed the views of the lecturer, which were supported by Admiral Boys and Captain Curtis. Lord Alcester, in closing the discussion, said that, "with regard to the employment of mastless vessels, if we allowed our ability to sail our vessels to fall into abeyance so far that officers could be found giving the most ridiculous and contradictory commands, something might be expected to happen. He feared the statement was true which had been made, that with mastless vessels for ocean cruising we must have a tonnage of not less than 10,000 tons. It was all very well in the Mediterranean and other European waters to depend upon mastless ships, but what, he asked, would take place on the Pacific station, for example, where, between Vancouver's Island and Portland, they had not a single coaling port? He did not refer to cruising in the neighbourhood of Esquimault, but to the many distant points on that long route where it might be necessary to cruise. The Italians were going in very largely for increasing the capacity of their vessels for coal stowage, and in the Colbert, Redoutable, and other vessels of the French Navy, the same tendency was exhibited. In Germany, they had decided on sending their vessels to sea with lower masts alone rigged, the topmast being used for signalling, and he supposed that as we imitated foreign countries so readily, we should perhaps have in the end to follow them in this. But the circumstances of our Empire were different from those of any other, and until the employment of mastless ships by other countries was general we must not give up the many advantages to be derived from the use of sail-power." In our opinion, a full-rigged ironclad, in action, would stand no chance against a mastless ship of her own, or even of an inferior, class as masts would reduce her speed. A man carrying a large banner might as well try to run an athlete stripped for the race. Cruisers should, as a matter of course, be masted, and in these vessels both officers and men should be sent to sea to learn seamanship.

The composition of Admiralty Circulars must be very wide of their Lordships' intentions, or they change their minds very quickly, when subsequent explanations are so frequently necessary. On November 30 last instructions were issued relative to the messing of Engineer officers, and almost immediately recalled. On March 8 a Circular appeared on the same subject, from which we inferred that all Engineers, including Assistants, were to mess in the ward-room, and not in the gun-room, when there was no mess place of their own provided. "My Lords" now explain by another Circular that it was not their intention that Assistant-Engineers should be required to mess in the ward-room, where there is a gun-room and no Engineers' mess; as in such cases they are to mess in the gun-room. Again, in rearranging the messing of Assistant-Paymasters, the option of joining the ward-room after five years' seniority was removed, and it was made compulsory by letter of March 8; but the official mind, having pondered over the matter, ordained on March 31 that after six years' seniority they were compelled to join the ward-room. We do not imagine that their Lordships have come to the end of the matter yet. With regard to Engineers, the real cause of this vacillation is a lack of moral courage to meet the inevitable. Why cannot the Admiralty say at once that the Engineers' mess "is abolished" in the Navy; that Engineers are to mess in the ward-room, and Assistant-Engineers in the gun-room, instead of "beating about the bush," and stultifying themselves by the issue of ambiguous instructions, which only defer the necessity to a future day? The discipline of the service suffers thereby, as it is not very comfortable for Engineer officers to be placed in a false position by being forced into a mess which is not theirs by right, merely for the convenience of the service. Had the Admiralty given positive instructions for the messing of Engineers, many complications would have been avoided. Any ill-feeling which may now exist would eventually disappear, if all doubts of their Lordships' intentions were removed. Ship life is not the most enjoyable, and when harassed with social differences, becomes unbearable; therefore the Admiralty should aid in sinking those unpleasantnesses which will live as long as the present system of a separate mess for Engineers continues.

Considering the small number of navigating officers who attain the rank of Staff Captain, and that they are selected from those distinguished by service and professional ability, it would be a graceful act of the Admiralty if they gave them the same retiring allowance as that lately granted to Chief Inspectors of Machinery, viz., £500 a year. The additional cost would be but trifling. Taking the retirement of Staff Captains for the last five years—1878, 0; 1879, 2; 1880, 2; 1881, 0; 1882, 3; in all 7—as a guide, the total extra charge would only be £350 for that period, which is not a very large sum for rewarding such deserving officers, and would only be required progressively. In less than twenty-five years, the navigating branch will have disappeared from the Active List of the Royal Navy; and as our proposal would only extend to a small proportion, the Treasury would be hard-hearted to refuse such a small concession to a class who are still valuable to the service, although the mandate for their extinction has gone forth.

Assistant-Paymasters, Royal Navy, have long enough to wait for promotion, as evidenced in the case of Mr. J. McP. King, of fifteen years' seniority, without retarding their advancement by retaining those on the Active List who do not intend serving again. Why a Paymaster who holds the secretaryship of a large steam-shipping company, and in receipt of a high salary, should be allowed to block the list, to the disadvantage of unfortunate juniors, is an injustice which the Junior Naval Lord would not be skilful enough to defend, excepting by stating that under Order in Council of March 2, 1870, an officer cannot be retired unless he has been unemployed for five years. But if this paymaster is allowed to remain until he has completed that period of unemployment, the same should be conceded to his brother officers, who, from ill-health, attributable to foreign service, are obliged to retire, and in some cases would be benefitted if retained on the Active List, as the time on half-pay adds to the amount of retirement. The Childers' scheme was fruitful of much loss to the Accountant Branch; foremost among its drawbacks is the slowness of promotion, therefore it is unjust to allow the convenience of even one officer to override the advantages which are due to others. As the Admiralty have unlimited authority to grant retirement to officers, they should make use of it in the case we have quoted.

A few days ago, a Swedish torpedo boat, built in England, passed through the Eider Canal, leading from the North Sea into the Baltic, on her passage to Sweden. This torpedo-boat is the first vessel of war that has ever made use of the passage, and she was obliged to send her machine-guns and torpedo-gear round by sea.

The principle of making people "jump from the frying-pan into the fire" has been followed up by the Admiralty in ordering the Briton from the West to the East Coast of Africa to relieve the Eclipse; the former station is bad enough, and the latter possesses no advantages over it. The First Lord, when explaining the Navy Estimates in 1867, informed the Lower House that it had been found undesirable to retain the crews of her Majesty's ships longer than eighteen months actually on the West Coast of Africa; and, in future, at the expiration of that period, they would be relieved and sent to other stations. This rule has been followed up by ordering them to the North American, Brazilian, occasionally the Mediterranean, and, on two occasions, the Australian stations, but in no case does it appear that any have been sent to the East Coast of Africa. If the necessary relief for the Eclipse could not have been sent from England, it shows that the reserve of smaller vessels has been neglected, either by a misappropriation of the money voted or insufficiency of the sum asked for; and as the Eclipse has not been found fit for recommissioning, "My Lords," forgetting that sailors are human, have ordered her to be replaced by a vessel whose crew, having undergone the baking process on the West Coast of Africa, are to be further indulged in a different one at Zanzibar and other places equally unhealthy and undesirable. We hope that some honourable Member will question this unjust proceeding, as it is simply a piece of Admiralty shuffling to save the expense of commissioning another ship.

Notwithstanding the statements which have appeared to the contrary, we have ascertained beyond doubt that the remarks made in these columns not long ago regarding the success which has attended the amalgamation of the engineer and gun-room messes on board the Nelson are perfectly correct. There are in the service a certain class of officers who can never reconcile themselves to any reform, however much it is needed; but we fail to see any reason why officers who, by virtue of their rank and standing in the Navy, will eventually mess in the ward-room, should not at an earlier stage mess and associate in the gun-room with the same officers whom, at a later period, they will meet in the senior mess. Thanks to the judicious firmness of Commodore Erskine, the reform is a decided success in the Nelson.

We commend to our Army reformers the following extract from St. Paul's Magazine, of July, 1868, which was written two years before short service was adopted:—

> "We cannot assent to the proposition to decrease the term of enlistment, so long as our troops are employed in India as they now are; for by the time a recruit is thoroughly trained, and fit for Indian service, a year or two of his time has elapsed, and the expense of relieving every man abroad at the end of five years would be enormous. Nor do we believe it would be necessary; for men will not object to bind themselves, as now, for twelve years, provided you can convince them they are about to enter a first-rate service. At present, we cannot do so. The one thing wanted is to increase the advantages of the profession. If that were sufficiently attended to, men might be allowed to enlist for a year on probation, before taking the final step. There are different ways of improving the soldier's lot."

The Government are now occupied in getting hired ships to bring home about 5,000 short-service soldiers who refuse to serve any longer in India. The immense cost of sending out recruits to India and bringing home time-expired men would go far towards paying the cost of pensions.

In another column we publish a letter from Lieutenant-General Sir P. L. MacDougall with reference to some remarks which appeared in this paper on March 24. In the article to which Sir P. MacDougall refers, a comparison was drawn between General Sir Lintorn Simmons's article in the Nineteenth Century, on "The Weakness of the Army," and Sir P. MacDougall's pamphlet on "Short-service Enlistment and the Organisation of Our Infantry." Our correspondent does not now enter into the merits of the system he has advocated, nor does he attempt to refute Sir Lintorn Simmons's arguments. He says,—"The discrepancy between the figures of the 'General Annual Return' and of the Inspector-General of Recruiting is susceptible of an easy, indeed an obvious explanation, which doubtless that officer would have given, had you applied to him." If the explanation were so easy, why did he not give it, instead of referring us to another official? The taunt that Sir Lintorn Simmons "must be bracketed with the faithless and disloyal," falls quite harmless. That experienced soldier and able writer is open to conviction, and when he has changed his opinions, he does not hesitate to avow the change. That he once believed in the advantages of some of our so-called reforms adds much to the weight of his testimony, when he tells us plainly that they have signally failed. None now write in favour of "Army Reform," except a few who hold good appointments, or have fair prospects of getting them. It is, indeed, satisfactory to find that they are so very few, and that the officers of the Army, resisting great temptations, have remained loyal to their convictions. The speeches made, and the articles and letters written, with the object of bolstering up those schemes, the failure of which is so evident, are among the strongest proofs of that failure. In the true interest of the Army, therefore, we wish to see something more from the pens of Sir P. MacDougall and certain others. In the article of March 24, Sir Patrick MacDougall was more than once mentioned as General MacDougall, not with the intention of withholding from that officer his due honours, but solely to save awkward and, as we thought, unnecessary repetitions. As Sir Patrick takes exception to the abbreviation, we carefully avoid wounding his sensitiveness in the matter. Sir Lintorn Simmons was, in some places in the same article, styled "General Simmons," also for brevity. He has not signified any objection to our innocent omission of his title.

Towards the end of the Crimean War, an Irish Militia Regiment, the Fermanagh Light Infantry, was asked to give volunteers for the Line. A large number at once responded to the call, but a difficulty arose about accepting their services. When they were asked what regiments they would join, they all named either the 6th Inniskilling Dragoons or the 27th Inniskilling Infantry. They declined to join other corps in which men were much wanted, and eventually a considerable number were transferred to their own county regiments. Can the present strained system of localisation, devised with little regard to old associations and carried out in opposition to the wishes of the bulk of the officers of the Army, show an instance of real "territorial" attachment like that? In these days of short service and limited terms of command, it seems scarcely credible that in October next year, the Earl of Enniskillen will have completed fifty years as Colonel of his county regiment!

The following letter has appeared day by day for the past fortnight in the advertisement of Drury Lane Theatre:—"War Office, May 3, 1883. DEAR SIR,—You are quite at liberty to announce my entire approval of the military scenes in 'Youth,' which were represented with a vividness and reality quite startling.—Faithfully yours, WOLSELEY. Augustus Harris, Esq." "How are the mighty fallen!"

The following, from the Times of India, fully confirms our statements as to the prevalence of glanders among the horses of the Indian Contingent in Egypt:—"During the Egyptian campaign a number of the horses suffered very much from glanders and other affections, so much so that a number of animals on arrival in Bombay had to be sent to Elephanta, to prevent the risk of spreading the contagion. All these animals have now recovered, and were brought to Bombay on Friday last, for despatch to their destinations. The following are the details of the little contingent:—One man, 19 followers, and 35 ponies of the 2nd Bengal Cavalry; 57 men, 70 followers, 64 horses, and 33 ponies, 6th Bengal Cavalry; and 14 followers and 26 ponies of the Transport Department. The troops will disembark at the Sassoon Dock, and encamp on the Esplanade, pending their despatch up-country." An endeavour was made in Parliament to hush-up the matter, and over and over again it was asserted that the reports as to the presence of glanders were exaggerated, but here are facts which place the matter quite beyond dispute. We readily admit that we in no way blame the Indian Veterinary Staff for the presence of the disease. The Veterinary service in India are so shamefully treated by the Government, that it is only surprising that officers should be able to do as much as they do.

It is no use denying any longer, as we showed last week, that the vaunted schemes of Army reform, inaugurated on July 1, 1881, have undoubtedly failed. That fact being acknowledged with regard to recruiting, it is difficult to find any justification for the terms in which Mr. Childers and his friends so boldly advertised the success of their reforms little more than twelve months since. Mr. Childers stated in a speech to his constituents that, "thanks to the widespread knowledge of the advantages of the Army, and, to some extent, to the abolishment of flogging, we have been able to raise the ages from eighteen to nineteen years. We are now getting every week more men and better men, and are able to allow a number of men of less than six years' service to go to the Reserve." Sir John Adye, at the Mansion House, alluding to short service, said,—"These changes are producing striking beneficial effects. In the first place, service in the Army is now becoming so acceptable to the people at large, that we find that we can practically obtain as many good recruits as we require. That scarcity of recruits which has so long affected the British Army is, we may hope, a thing of the past." The striking beneficial results are as follows:—Recruits joined in 1881 were 26,258; in 1882, 23,082; per-centage of deserters in both years the same, 17. Present War-Office Instructions:—"In the Infantry, recruits can be taken 5 ft. 3 in., and, for all branches, between eighteen and nineteen years." Lord Wolseley, some time ago, denied that politics ever entered into these reforms, but any one acquainted with the history of the Army since 1870 and the use made of the Royal Warrant, might possibly differ from his lordship's views. On one point of Lord Wolseley's speech, made some time ago at a dinner of the Institute of Civil Engineers, all must agree, viz., "that these reforms have made the Army what it is." They have, indeed.

Under the title of "Heaven-born Generals," a correspondent addresses to us the following letter, which certainly offers considerable food for reflection:—"It may be possible, as our authorities, by their new regulations, seem to think, that Generals, like poets, are born, and not made. But is it not trusting rather too much to Providence to act as if it were really so, trespassing, in fact, somewhat on the doctrine of the 'Peculiar People'? I was led to reflect on this point from hearing professional friends lamenting on the state of our Army, and discussing the various reasons for it, and, as it is a matter which concerns us all, I have been trying, as an outsider, to get an idea of how we should fare, in the event of our shores being invaded. Doubtless, the Volunteers would greatly make amends for the alarming deficit in our Line and other regiments. But how about Generals? On consulting the Army List, I see, for instance, on the Retired List the name of Sir H. de Bathe, a comparatively young General, who has seen service, and whose abilities as a General in command have called forth much praise. I also see on the Active List the name of Sir F. A. Campbell, K.C.B., a General who has gained all his laurels in a semi-military capacity in or about the War Office and Woolwich Arsenal for 25 years, and who has never been under fire. Now, suppose our shores to be invaded, and our principal Generals, say, in India or elsewhere, and suppose it fell to the lot of General Campbell, for lack of others, to have command-in-chief of the Army of Defence. Are we to believe that good generalship is a matter of inspiration? and if not, how should we feel, knowing that the defence of our hearths and altars was entrusted to this possibly doughty, but certainly inexperienced warrior? This is only one instance. I take it up at random from the Army List, for it must naturally create in the minds of reasoning men a doubt as to whether, after all, recent Army reforms have produced that efficiency which some would have us believe. The object of Retirement Warrants, &c., surely should be to retire the inexperienced, and retain the services of those more fitted for command. But as matters now stand, those are kept in the service who have experience of offices, and the Generals—fighting-men—are turned adrift. Is this a good system? I leave the service to answer for itself."

It has been decided that the next Army examination in Part II. for troop and company musketry certificates will be held at the several stations on the 18th prox., under a syllabus, dated the 9th inst. Nominal rolls of officers and serjeants for examination were forwarded to the Deputy-Assistant-Adjutant-General for Musketry on Wednesday last. The examinations of the candidates in Part I. will be held early in the ensuing month. The examination will be conducted generally in accordance with Section IV., paragraph 36, Queen's Regulations, and will be in two parts. The first part will be oral and vivâ voce. The second part will be written from questions prepared by the Inspector-General of Musketry. Cavalry will not be required to answer questions relating to Infantry only, and vice versâ. Serjeants will be required to undergo the same vivâ voce and written examination as the officers, with the following exceptions:—They will not be required to lecture, but must be acquainted with the information contained in the lectures, and be catechised thereon by the Board; but questions on the information contained in the lectures will be included in the examination-papers. In addition to the requirements of a "2nd-class educational certificate" prior to April, 1882, the serjeants must also possess a knowledge of simple decimals. Each officer and serjeant must be examined in Part I. before he can be examined in Part II. On the completion of the examinations in the second part, the president of the Board will forward the proceedings to the Inspector-General of Musketry at Hythe. The printed or written questions and answers must be transmitted with the proceedings, accompanied by a certificate from each candidate that he has not received any assistance from books or other sources.

At Colonel Brackenbury's lecture on "The Development of Modern Tactics," lately delivered at the Royal United Service Institution, General Lord Wolseley, who presided, in the course of his speech remarked that in regard to machine-guns, a matter not referred to by the lecturer, he believed that a great future awaited them, and that the General who knew how to develop and make use of machine-guns would have an opportunity not offered to any one before him. We have ourselves always opposed the idea of those who have closed their eyes to the march of events, and condemned the machine-gun as a useless toy. It certainly is a remarkable fact that both of our best-known military leaders, Lord Wolseley and Sir F. Roberts, as well as our most prominent Naval Commander, Lord Alcester, have given their opinion unhesitatingly in favour of the machine-gun as a service arm, whilst a few narrow-minded artillerymen are doing all in their power to prevent the gun obtaining even a fair trial, only on account of that class prejudice which renders it impossible for them to recognise in it any merit.

We fear that the officers of the Army Pay Department, and those in the Army generally who were looking favourably on the prospect of a probation in that service, will be more than disappointed when they learn the extent of the concessions made by the Secretary of State for War to remedy the grievances which have militated against the popularity of the Department since its birth. From all we can learn, the Warrant, or addenda to the existing one, which we soon expect to see in print, is framed on the most economical principles, and ingeniously designed to create the greatest dissatisfaction at the least possible cost. The improvement in the pay and position of the Chief Paymasters, by the addition of 2s. 6d. per diem, and the rank of Colonel, after five years' service, can only benefit one-sixth of those now serving. The Staff Paymasters are left out in the cold altogether, although many have had the rank of Major over 13 years. The Paymasters, if serving before June, 1881, are to get the rank of Major, and the remainder after 10 years' service, with servants' allowances. No mention is made of the vexed question of lodging allowance or forage for Chief Paymasters; and lastly—but which is of primary importance, and repeatedly urged in these columns—no provision has been made for an officer of their own Department to represent them at the War Office. In our opinion, the unpopularity of the service is mainly due to an absence of harmony between the officers and the clerks at the War Office to whom is entrusted the personnel, and the former will never be satisfied until an alteration is made in this respect. Viewed as a whole, there is but little to attract officers into the service. Those that are serving can certainly look forward to a depletion of the higher ranks by a distrust in War-Office administration, the expenses attending frequent removals, and the hard work and increased responsibility of their office, without even a fair remuneration,—a state of things the authorities appear desirous of accomplishing, to the detriment of many old and valuable Army Pay Officers.

The following special Army Circular, dated War Office, May 10, 1883, has been issued during the last few days:—"Allowance Regulations, 1881. Servant's allowance. The following will be added after para. 743 of the Allowance Regulations, 1881.—'734, A. Officers of the Army Pay Department will have the option of employing a soldier servant, or of drawing the money allowance in lieu.' (2.) In the third line of paragraph 737 of the above-mentioned Regulations, after the word 'officer,' add, 'or an officer of the Army Pay Department.'—(Signed) Ralph Thompson." We trust that the issue of the above indicates that the Pay Department Warrant will be issued without loss of time.

A correspondent suggests that the proposed alteration in the colour of the uniform in our Line regiments is, perhaps, a device of our enemies, as a first step towards the introduction of Socialism into the Army, by stripping our soldiers of the Royal livery. What says Citizen Labouchere?

We would again call attention to the different treatment which is awarded to Commissariat officers and War-office clerks on reduction of establishment or compulsory removal. To these officers the Government allows the pensions of the next highest rank, and the same principle was recognised in the compulsory removal of General officers. The Colonels were compulsorily removed on pensions granted for voluntary retirement, instead of being awarded the minimum pension of General officers (the next highest rank to Colonel), viz., £600 a year. Moreover, the combatant officer's commission, under purchase regulations, had to be purchased, and had a money value; whereas the Commissariat and War-office officials never paid a shilling, and their commissions and appointments had no money value whatever. We trust that these singular inequalities of pensions will be carefully considered when the Army Estimates come on for discussion in Committee, a few days hence.

The 7th Dragoon Guards have not yet been clothed in their orthodox pantaloons, but swagger about in the unsightly drab breeches. It is supposed that the Clothing Department are in the throes of a contemplated revolution in the matter of Army dress, which accounts for our soldiers being kept in a field-service dress in times of profound peace.

Sir Joseph M'Kenna will, on Monday, May 28, ask the Secretary of State for War whether it is his intention to recommend for some recognition, distinction, or honour, Lieutenant-Colonel Campbell Walker, who first and so far back as 1865, recommended and specified a system of armour-plated trains for use in war, such as were recently made effective use of in the Egyptian Campaign.

While our rulers profess to be quite happy in their minds as to the state of affairs in South Africa, it would be as well to remind them that storms very often follow calms. Affairs in Zululand and thereabouts are by no means of as rosy a hue as they would wish the public to believe, and they would do well not to trust to the telegraph between Africa and Europe viâ Aden, but to at once construct alternative lines by way of St. Helena and St. Vincent. "Two strings to one bow" might not always be considered a superfluity.

We think it only right to allude again to the case of Lieutenant-General Wilby, C.B., who was removed from the Ceylon command at the end of three years, although that officer was appointed to the command under the then existing Warrant for five years. General Wilby was put to considerable expense in going to Ceylon and taking up so important a command, and on his summary removal from the Staff, under the Childers Warrant of June 25, 1881, he applied to the War Minister for compensation (laid at £1,200); but although a whole year has elapsed, the War Office have been fencing with him ever since on this claim, and no money whatever has yet been paid. The claim will have to be met in the end, and doubtless the War Office will then allow interest on the money.

The following Memorandum was issued on Thursday last by the Assistant-Adjutant-General of the Aldershot Division, for the guidance of commanding officers in carrying out the second part of the annual course of musketry:—(1.) No man should be practised in the second part, till he has been exercised in the first part of the annual course of musketry. (2.) Fifty rounds of ammunition should, as a rule, be fired annually by each trained soldier in the second part, exclusive of any rounds that may be expended in field-firing, for which a special allowance of ammunition will be made. The 50 rounds will be expended in the following manner:—(3.) Each man is to fire ten rounds annually, in match-shooting or private practice. (4.) The commanding officer having determined who shall be considered "worst shots" in his battalion (the standard being fixed annually by the commanding officer), all men who, in the first part, fail to attain that standard will be exercised in "a." practice in the second part, firing, if necessary, the whole 40 rounds in repeating portions of the first part. Should any of the "worst shots" in firing in "a." practice have not made, in the opinion of the commanding officer, sufficient improvement, their case will be specially reported to the General commanding, the registers accompanying the report in each case. The remainder of the company will fire ten rounds in "b." practice at 200 yards, and ten rounds in "c." practice. (5.) The following method of conducting "c." practice will be observed:—The ranges having been accurately marked out, the men should be placed opposite their targets at 285 yards (260 for carbine), between this and 240 yards (220 for carbine), three short advances should be made, one round being fired at each halt. "Cease fire" should then be sounded, and an officer should credit each man with the number of hits (fair hits or ricochets), on the black part of the target representing the "legs." All hits should then be washed out. Between 240 yards (220 for carbine), and 180 yards, four short advances should be made, one round, as before, being fired at each halt. "Cease fire," count hits on "body," and wash out as above. Between 180 yards and 140, three rounds should be fired, the hits on the head being counted and credited as before. The total number of hits obtained by each man should then be multiplied by three, and the result credited to the man in the column "total points" in the register. (6.) The remaining 20 rounds per man will be reserved till the winter months, when ten rounds per man will be expended in company field-firing on a down-hill range, and ten rounds per man in long-range volley-firing. Special instructions will be issued regarding the expenditure of this ammunition hereafter.

The Russian Minister of Marine issued an order last week fixing the amount officers are to receive while on shore ill in foreign ports. Superior officers are to be granted 10s. a day in English money, and staff officers 15s. In American ports, and in the Pacific, this amount is to be increased respectively to 15s. and £1.

The Army.

1st King's Dragoon Guards. Lieut.-Col. Thompson has proceeded home from India in H.M.S. Crocodile. Capt. Alexander has been granted leave from India to England for twelve months, on urgent private affairs. Lieut. Pennell is a candidate for the Indian S.C.

6th Dragoon Guards. Lieut. Cradock has arrived home from India in H.M.S. Crocodile.

3rd Hussars. Brevet Major Beckett, late Brigade-Major of Cavalry in Egypt, is returning to the Staff College at Sandhurst, to complete his course of study.

9th Lancers. A private of the regiment has published, in the form of a diary, an account of the Afghan War of 1879-80, or, to speak more correctly, of all the affairs in which his regiment was engaged, from taking the field at Kohat to the march to Candahar.

13th Hussars. Major Knox will remain in England until September next, on leave from India.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

The Pioneer of Allahabad lately contained the following paragraph:—"No intimation has, we understand, been received officially regarding the formation of a full-pay unemployed list for colonels and lieutenant-colonels of the late Indian Artillery; but there is no reason to doubt the correctness of a statement to the effect that such a list was about to be formed. As, however, the India Office declines to interfere with the Henley clause on the one hand—that is to say, declines to introduce any limitation of commands —and on the other hand, will grant no extra promotion, the concession is not a very important one." With regard to this, the Bombay Gazette says:—"We shall be glad to learn why this squeamishness on the part of the India Office 'to interfere with the Henley clause,' and disinclination to 'introduce any limitation of command' as regards the Indian Artillery, when the Secretary of State for India had no hesitation in ousting present commandants of native regiments from their regiments under the order limiting tenure of commands, these officers being men who entered the service of the East India Company, and being as much protected by the Henley clause as the officers of the Indian Artillery. Is it because the latter have a Royal Duke as their commandant, whereas the Staff Corps is no one's child? Perhaps some of our readers can explain why 'sauce for the goose is not sauce for the gander;' or Mr. Alison, the indefatigable secretary to the Staff Corps Defence Committee, might get some M.P. to ask the question in his place in the House. We are not aware that officers who have been removed from their commands of native regiments have been granted any 'extra promotion.'"

Now that the Heavy Battery has been removed from Peshawur to Campbellpore, the former station ceases to be an artillery command.

"It seems probable," the Times of India says, "that there will be no change in the office of Inspector-General of Ordnance at present; that is, supposing that Major-Gen. Napier-Campbell should comply with the flattering request made him by the Government that he will give the department the benefit of his services until, at any rate, the beginning of next cold season."

Lieut.-Col. A. H. Davidson has been granted leave from India to England for six months, on private affairs, and Lieut. E. H. S. Calder for twelve months.

Majors M. A. Caldecott and W. H. Wright, Capts. C. H. Mayne and F. F. Ditmas, and Lieuts. F. A. Curteis and J. F. Manifold have arrived home from India in H.M.S. Crocodile.

3rd Buffs (East Kent Regiment). Major Mackinnon, half-pay, Assist.-Adjt.-Gen. for Musketry in India, will retain his appointment for another year, subject to the sanction of the Secretary of State. "D. G. G." writes:—"Having just read in the Army and Navy Gazette, May 12, that permission has been granted to the 18th Hussars to bear on its appointments the motto, 'Pro rege, pro lege, pro patria, conamur,' may I ask why the same compliment may not also apply to 'The Buffs,' the oldest corps in the British Army, by allowing them to wear their old motto, 'Veteri frondescit honore,' on their colours and appointments; also by its appearing in the monthly Army List?"

5th Northumberland Fusiliers. Lieut. Brown, 2nd Batn., is a candidate for the Indian S.C., and has been appointed to the 8th Bombay N.I., on probation. Major Græme, 2nd Batn., is about to retire from the service.

7th Royal Fusiliers. Lieut. Moss, 2nd Batn., has arrived home from India in H.M.S. Crocodile.

12th Suffolk Regiment. Capt. Townley, 1st Batn., has arrived home from India in H.M.S. Crocodile.

18th Royal Irish Regiment. Capt. Morgan, 1st Batn., is ordered home from India to join the regimental depôt.

20th Lancashire Fusiliers. Lieut. Crawford, 2nd Batn., is a candidate for the S.C., and has been appointed to the 1st Bombay N.I., on probation. A point-to-point race, run on Saturday at Templemore, brought the season's paper-chases to a close. A race of so novel a description excited a great deal of interest. The course lay along the sides of a triangle, of which the barracks formed the starting and finishing point, and Loughmore and Knockgha Castles the outlying points. At each of the ruins officers were stationed, to ascertain that the competitors passed these points. The distance, as traced on ordnance map, is exactly seven miles. Twenty started, and the choice of course was left to competitors. Lance-Serjt. Fahy, Qrmr.-Serjt. Collins, and Serjt.-Major Boor took places, and each ran the distance in 51, 60, and 60·4 minutes respectively. These paper-chases have been the means of bringing out and developing physical capabilities that possibly might prove of great advantage on active service.

21st Royal Scots Fusiliers. Lieut.-Col. Bainbridge, 2nd Batn., has been granted leave from India to England for 12 months, on private affairs.

23rd Royal Welsh Fusiliers. Lieut. Lyde, 1st Batn., has been granted leave from India to England for six months, on private affairs.

24th South Wales Borderers. Lieut. Stewart has been granted leave from India to England for six months, on medical certificate.

28th Gloucestershire Regiment. Lieut. Stewart, a probationer for the Indian S.C., has been appointed to the 9th Bombay N.I., on probation.

33rd West Riding Regiment. Lieut. Gore has returned home from India in H.M.S. Crocodile.

38th South Staffordshire Regiment. The following battalion order was published by Lieut.-Col. P. H. Eyre, commanding, dated Abbassiyeh, near Cairo, Thursday, April 26:—"The commanding officer has much pleasure in notifying to the battalion that he has this day received a letter from Gen. C. Elmhirst, C.B. (colonel of the battalion), intimating that the Peninsular colours of the 38th Regiment, of which there has been no trace for many years, have been most kindly restored to the regiment by the Earl of Dartmouth, into whose possession they came on the purchase of property formerly belonging to the family of the late Gen. Sir George Pigot, Bart., whose nephew, Gen. Sir Henry Pigot, G.C.M.G., Colonel of the 38th Regiment, on February 13, 1839, caused to be presented to the regiment, the colours now in possession of the battalion, and which replaced those now restored by the Earl of Dartmouth. These colours are now in possession of the officer commanding the 38th Regimental District, Lichfield, to be eventually placed in the Lichfield Cathedral, where the commanding officer hopes a place will be given for them. Lieut.-Col. Eyre desires to place on record the thanks of the 1st Batn. South Staffordshire Regiment to the generous act of the Earl of Dartmouth in restoring to the battalion the colours of the 38th Regt., so highly valued by them. By order (signed), A. G. Chesney, Lieut.-Adjt., 1st Batn. South Staffordshire Regiment."

44th Essex Regiment. Capt. Powell has been granted leave from India to England for six months, on private affairs.

48th Northamptonshire Regiment. Capt. Rogers has applied for permission to retire from the service on a gratuity.

49th Berkshire Regiment. The brigade quartered at Abbassiyeh, near Cairo, consisting of the 19th Hussars, Royal Artillery, 1st Batn. Royal Sussex, 1st Batn. South Stafford, and 1st Batn. Berkshire Regts., paraded at an early hour on April 30, to witness the presentation, by Brigdr.-Gen. Arbuthnot, of Afghan medals to 40 men who had been transferred from the 2nd to the 1st Batn. of the Berkshire Regt. The weather was most unfavourable for a military display, the morning opening with a hot kamsin wind and clouds of dust, which reminded many of a day in a valley not far from Aldershot. The parade being formed up and the usual formalities gone through, the Brigadier made the following most flattering and appropriate address to the 1st Batn. Berkshire Regt.:—"Col. Corban, and 1st Batn. Berkshire Regt., it gives me sincere gratification to present these Afghan medals to the men whom I see before me. I look upon it as an honour to myself to distribute to brave men decorations awarded them by her Majesty. There is also much that to me is specially interesting in the circumstances attending the present distribution. Changes have recently taken place in regimental organisation, changes in which I know some find only what is detrimental to esprit de corps, but which may have, as we see to-day, some results which will in the long run be even favourable to it. I understand that most of you men who are to receive the medal to-day joined first the 49th Regt., were subsequently transferred to the 66th, and returned to the 1st Batn. Berkshire Regt., your old corps, under another name, in time to take part in the late successful campaign with your original battalion; you are thus a link between the 49th and 66th, between the 1st Batn. of the Berkshire Regt. and the 2nd Batn. of it; your breasts will show that you have belonged to and have deep interest in both battalions. Owing to your good-fortune in having served with both those regiments, which are now called the 1st and 2nd Batns. of the Berkshire Regt., you have had a double share in the late achievements of the British Army, and your career illustrates the fact that under the present system a soldier's chance of a brilliant career is doubled. Descended from two illustrious predecessors, the Berkshire Regiment will, I am sure, prove itself worthy of them. Its 1st Batn. has, indeed, already begun to make the history of the regiment by its conduct during the late campaign and the present occupation in Egypt; its 2nd Batn. has the satisfaction of knowing some of their late comrades in Afghanistan are helping in the work. Col. Corban, this is the first time I have seen a battalion of the Berkshire Regt. on parade, and in all probability it is the last time I shall ever so see one in Egypt, I therefore take the opportunity of expressing my satisfaction with its soldierlike appearance, and my good wishes for its future." Col. Corban then responded with a few appropriate remarks, in which he expressed his own satisfaction and that of all ranks with the kindly manner in which the General had spoken of the Berkshire Regt. The General then presented the medals, and the troops returned to barracks. The battalion is now under orders to return to Gibraltar, and is only awaiting the arrival of H.M.S. Jumna to embark. It is now ten months since it left the Rock, and though not as fortunate as some other corps, it has seen a variety of service,—first at Alexandria, where it was employed on police duties; then at Ramleh, where it took part in sundry skirmishes; and latterly, at Abbassiyeh. It has given much satisfaction that the services of Col. Corban have at last been recognised, by conferring on him the Order of the Medjidie, which he lately received at the hands of his Highness the Khedive. A few evenings since the officers of the battalion were entertained at a farewell banquet given to them by his Highness Ibrahim Pasha, who spared no trouble in order to afford his guests an enjoyable evening. During the time the 1st Batn. Berkshire Regt. has been in Egypt, 21 men have died in the country, and a tablet has been placed in All Saints' Church, Cairo, to their memory by their comrades, the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men.

ROYAL MARINES.

The general court-martial opened at Walmer on Tuesday for the trial of Capt. and Qrmr. Herring, Royal Marines, was closed on Wednesday. The court consisted of ten officers, naval and military, from Dover, Chatham, and Plymouth, Col. Francis W. Lomas, Royal Marines, being president. Capt. Herring was arraigned on two charges—first, with having allowed, and, secondly, with having neglected to report, the attachment of two pieces of metal to the meat side of the scales, thereby depriving each mess of their proper quantity of meat. The matter has occasioned considerable public interest. Mr. Lewis Glyn appeared as counsel for the defendant; Major-Gen. Forbes, formerly in command of the depôt, Lieut.-Col. Scott, and a considerable number of witnesses were called for the prosecution. For the accused it was urged that the weights were simply to give a draught to the scale to facilitate the weighing of the rations. Ultimately the court found the prisoner not guilty, and he was honourably acquitted. On receiving his sword the gallant officer was loudly cheered.

51st King's Own Light Infantry. The Bombay Gazette writes:—"The recent trial by general court-martial of Lieut. Fraser, of the 51st Regt., has resulted in a sentence which, as he was found guilty, was necessarily severe. The charges against this young officer were—fraudulent misapplication of money, both public and regimental; scandalous conduct, unbecoming an officer and gentleman; and desertion. To be cashiered and imprisoned for a year is a heavy punishment, but not a bit too heavy, under the circumstances. There are two ways of turning an officer out of the Army, by cashiering or dismissal. The former is far the more severe of the two, because an officer cashiered is ever after ineligible for employment under Government, whereas an officer dismissed can be so employed. It is, we believe, many years since an officer has been sentenced to imprisonment, and happily courts-martial on officers are now comparatively rare."

54th Dorsetshire Regiment. Brevet Lieut.-Col. Gosset has been appointed officiating military secretary to the Commander-in-Chief in India for six months, during the absence of Col. Chapman, C.B., R.A., in England.

57th Middlesex Regiment. The Bombay Gazette says:—"In the last batch of General Orders we see the name of Capt. Lyde, of the Middlesex Regiment, as admitted to the Staff Corps. Capt. Lyde's first commission is dated Jan., 1874, and he became a capt. in April, 1882, a little over eight years, while he was a probationer for the Staff Corps, which he thus enters as a Capt., instead of having to serve twelve years as a subaltern. This officer is no doubt exceptionally lucky, but we think Staff Corps subalterns generally have a good case in trying to get the period of twelve years shortened. If they are united in their demands, and reasonable as well, we imagine the authorities would give their petition a patient hearing. As things go now in the British service, Staff Corps subalterns would not go far wrong in asking that promotion to captain might be after ten years and to major after eighteen years. But if they ask for a captaincy after eight years and a majority after ten, as some of their letters to the papers hint, they will probably be thought to be asking too much, and get nothing, which would be a pity."

60th King's Royal Rifle Corps. Lieut.-Col. Kinloch, assist.-qrmr.-gen., Bengal, has reverted to regimental duty, his tour of service on the Staff having expired. The appointment of aide-de-camp to Mr. Des Vœux, C.M.G., Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Fiji Islands, has just fallen vacant, Lieut. E. W. Herbert, of the King's Royal Rifle Corps, who has held the post since September, 1880, having relinquished the appointment.

61st Gloucestershire Regiment. Lieut.-Col. Fane has been granted leave from India to England for twelve months, on urgent private affairs.

62nd Wiltshire Regiment. The Central News states that Gen. Sir William Knollys, K.C.B., Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod in the House of Lords, has for some days past been seriously indisposed, and has been attended by Sir Oscar Clayton. The gallant officer, although he is considerably improved, will not, it is feared, be able to resume his official duties for a short time. His condition, although not by any means critical, is such that his medical adviser considers it desirable that his patient should have a little rest. Sir William Knollys left town yesterday (Friday) for Blounts Court, Henley-on-Thames. Lieut. Fryer, a probationer, officiating wing officer, 22nd Bombay N.I., is about to be admitted to the Bombay S.C., from March 31, 1880.

63rd Manchester Regiment. Lieut. Wilson, a probationer for the Indian S.C., has been appointed to the 13th Bengal N.I., on probation.

65th York and Lancaster Regiment. Major Dalgety and Lieut. and Adjt. Plumer, and Lieuts. Ditmas, Broughton, and Carter, have returned home from India in H.M.S. Crocodile.

66th Berkshire Regiment. The court-martial for the trial of Capt. and Pymr. Mayers, on various charges of embezzlement, has proceeded at Gosport. The case for the prosecution was concluded on Saturday. Mr. Charles Bickman, senior clerk at the India Office, stated that several amounts were struck out on both sides of the account with the result that, instead of there being a balance due to the prisoner on the voyage pay-list of £567 7s. 5d., there was a balance owing by him of £328 6s. 9d., which amount he afterwards paid in settlement of the account. Major John Quarry, Berkshire Regiment, stated that on taking over the duties of paymaster he found that the balance at the bank agreed with the prisoner's book, and received a cheque for £146 11s. from the prisoner, which he got cashed by order of the president of the court of inquiry. Witness admitted that this amount was the same as the one which the prisoner was charged with embezzling under the 23rd count. In re-examination, however, he stated that the cheque was not drawn upon the same bank at which the public accounts were kept. He was asked whether he had ever heard of thieves disgorging their plunder, but the prisoner protested against the question as improper and as showing the animus of the prosecution, and it was expunged from the record. Capt. Hamley, of the district pay office, gave evidence as to the irregularities embodied in the remaining charges. Prisoner could not have sent in the charges referred to under the heads of "deferred pay," as they were not supported by vouchers. If the prisoner made an error his balance at his bank would enable him to rectify it when he balanced his books. It was the usual custom for paymasters to balance their books every two or three days, or at most every week. They would never allow them to run for a month. On application of the prisoner's solicitor, the Court adjourned until Wednesday to enable him to prepare his defence. The Court resumed its sittings on Wednesday morning. The prisoner complained of having been kept under close arrest for 77 days before the combined authorities of the War Office and Treasury were able to frame charges which they thought clear and concise enough to obtain a conviction against him. He complained that the charges were made to number 28, although ten of them clearly referred to the same subject matter. The charges substantially resolved themselves into two—one of embezzling the sum of £1,190 4s. 3d., and the other of embezzling the sum of £301 15s. 11d. He indignantly repelled both charges. Colonel Parson, the Deputy-Judge-Advocate, replying upon the whole case, said the number of the charges would not influence the Court in coming to a decision, and each would be decided on its merits. The first ten charges might be grouped as one. If the first was held to be proved, then the others followed in due course. The sum of £1,190 4s. 3d. was not received by the Indian Government, and when that Government refused to receive it, it became the prisoner's duty to credit the amount to the War Office. The Court concluded its proceedings on Thursday, but the finding will not be divulged until it has been confirmed.

68th Durham Light Infantry. Lieut. Robb has been granted leave from India to England for nine months, on urgent private affairs.

69th (the Welsh Regiment). Lieut. Coke, a probationer for the Indian S.C., has been appointed to the 14th Bombay N.I., on probation.

70th East Surrey Regiment. Lieut. Bolton has arrived home from India in H.M.S. Crocodile.

73rd Black Watch (Royal Highlanders). Lieut. Custance, a candidate for the Indian S.C., has been appointed to the 28th Bombay N.I., on probation.

78th Seaforth Highlanders. Lieut. Mackintosh has been granted leave from India to England for fifteen months on private affairs.

89th Royal Irish Fusiliers. Lieut. Cartwright is a candidate for the Indian S.C., and has been appointed to the 20th Bombay N.I., on probation.

93rd Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. "An Old 93rd Officer" writes:—"Referring to a complaint made by one of your correspondents, that the Highland regiments are unduly favoured in the matter of always getting the best stations, amongst which Edinburgh and Glasgow were named, I can vouch for such not being the case with one of them, the 93rd Sutherland Highlanders, now the 2nd Batn. Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. In the last 32 years they have only been stationed in Scotland for three years and four months, although by the present territorial system it is their proper quarter. Between 1872 and 1882, two years of which they were in the Mediterranean, they passed six years between the camps of Aldershot, Shorncliffe, and the Curragh, so they at least cannot be said to have had favouritism shown them in their quarters."

95th Sherwood Foresters (Derbyshire Regiment). Major Bowles and Lieut. Gifford have returned home from India in H.M.S. Crocodile.

99th Wiltshire Regiment. Lieut. Macdonald has returned home from India in H.M.S. Crocodile.

103rd Royal Dublin Fusiliers. Lieut. Dawes, a candidate for the Indian S.C., has been appointed to the 28th Madras N.I., on probation.

104th Royal Munster Fusiliers. Lieut. Bennett, a candidate for the Indian S.C., has been appointed to the 2nd Madras N.I., on probation.

106th Durham Light Infantry. The Bombay Gazette has the following:—"A correspondent recently addressed us upon the subject of the Nusseerabad Brigade, alleging that the appointment of Col. R. R. Gillespie, late of the 109th Foot, to be Brigadier-General there, is a breach of faith towards Indian officers, Nusseerabad being one of the brigades reserved for the Indian Army. But we are under the impression that Col. Gillespie is, to all intents and purposes, an Indian officer, and that he served in the old Bombay 2nd European Light Infantry Regt., of which he was for many years adjutant. Brigdr.-Gen. Gillespie entered the Bombay Army in 1849, in the days of the old Company; and though when the Company's European Infantry were handed over to the Crown he went with his old corps, we cannot, therefore, understand that he is to be classed as a Queen's officer pure and simple, and therefore to be held ineligible for an Indian brigade. On the contrary, we are bound to say that the appointment appears to us quite unexceptionable in this, as in every other respect."

1st West India Regiment. Lieut. Lewin, a candidate for the Indian S.C., has been appointed to the 14th Madras N.I., on probation.

Rifle Brigade. Lieut. Wegg-Prosser has been appointed interpreter to the 1st Batn.

Pay Department. The following changes of station have recently taken place:—Major C. D'O. Forbes, from England to Ceylon; Capts. H. W. Bateman, from District Office, York, to 39th Regimental District, Dorchester; H. M. Compigné, to Ceylon; W. L. Brockman, to Bermuda; J. H. Jackson, to District Office, Malta; R. M. Ireland, Malta to England; R. Wilson, from 1-9th Regt. to District Office, York; A. Stokes, Bermuda to England; T. C. Dempster, to Hong Kong; G. H. Singer, 96th Regt., to 1-9th Regt.; F. M. Maycock, to 96th Regt.; J. K. M'Causland, to 1st Dragoon Guards; W. H. Dennys, to 78th Regt. During the passed month two probationers have joined,—Capts. T. G. Lumsden and O. H. B. St. John. There are 39 vacancies in the Department, viz.:—Two cavalry regiments (7th and 19th Hussars), 27 infantry regiments, and five regimental districts,—Taunton, Clonmel, Berwick-on-Tweed, Reading, and Galway.

Medical Department. Brig.-Surg. P. B. Smith has been granted leave from India to England for six months, on private affairs; and Brig.-Surg. W. H. Corbett for six months, on medical certificate. Deputy-Surg.-Gen. E. J. Franklyn has been appointed Principal Medical Officer at Malta, in succession to Surg.-Gen. J. Clutterbuck, who will be placed on the Retired List on the 1st prox. "Justitia" writes:—"In your able advocacy of the claims of the Army Pay Department to a share of the decorations so liberally bestowed on other Departments, one sentence—viz., 'our duty is to watch the interests of all branches of her Majesty's service'—leaves me to hope that you may be induced to say a word on behalf of the much-abused Army Medical Department. Whatever may have been the faults of the system, all concur in stating that the medical officers, individually, worked hard during the recent campaign. Their duties exposed them to danger more than any other department, while their rewards were proportionately smaller, viz.:—Ordnance Store Department, 50 per cent.; Commissariat and Transport, 21 per cent.; Army Medical Department, 7 per cent. Common justice would seem to demand that, considering the nature of their duties, their proportion of rewards should be, at all events, not less than that of other Departments; but the Army Medical Department seems to have but few friends, and none to advocate their just claims."

The Auxiliary Forces.

MILITIA.

Royal Fusiliers. Capt. Cochrane Foster, 3rd Batn., has passed through the School of Musketry, Hythe, and been awarded a first-class certificate extra.

Royal Scots Fusiliers. There is an error in the General Orders of May 1, 1883. In paragraph 13, referring to the musketry practice of the Militia, it is stated:—"The figure of merit of the Royal Scots was good." The shooting of the Royal Scots compared very favourably with that of any other corps. In both these cases it should have been, not "the Royal Scots," but "the 3rd Batn. Royal Scots Fusiliers."

King's Royal Rifle Corps. "A General Officer" writes:—"Happening to be in Barnet at Whitsuntide, I was much struck by the friendly relations existing between the non-commissioned officers and men of the regiment and one of its affiliated Volunteer battalions. The recruits of the 7th Batn. were training in the town, and a very smart detachment of a London Volunteer battalion had marched down for two days' soldiering. Not a rupture of any kind occurred; both Militia and Volunteers evidently being most anxious to show that there existed a regimental brotherhood between them. There was only one point upon which the Militia erred. The officers showed themselves sadly ignorant of the usual rules of Military etiquette in not sending their band to play the Volunteers in and out of the town. This was of course an oversight, but the Militia should remember that no Line battalion would have treated them in the same way. It is for officers to set a good, not a bad, example to their men, and if they do not do this in small matters, what are we to think."

Shropshire Light Infantry. The annual report of the Inspector-General of Musketry on the musketry training of the Militia shows that the 4th Batn. has the highest figure of merit of any regiment in the Militia service, viz., 44·79. It also has the best shot in the Militia, Corpl. J. Price. The best shooting company is F, 49·28, and the best judge of distance, Serjt.-Major Verney. These results are highly satisfactory, and reflect no small credit upon the hard-working musketry-instructor, Capt. E. P. Clark.

The under-mentioned regiments are ordered to assemble on Monday for 27 days' training and exercise:—3rd Brig. Scottish Division (Edinburgh City Artillery), at Edinburgh; 4th Batn. Gloucestershire, Cirencester; 3rd Batn. Royal West Surrey, at Guildford, in camp; 3rd Batn. South Wales Borderers, at Brecon, in camp; and 3rd Batn. Wiltshire, at Devizes, in camp.

The following regiments, having completed their training, will be dismissed to-day:—2nd Brig. Eastern Division (Norfolk Artillery), at Yarmouth; 3rd Brig. Welsh Division (Carmarthen Artillery) at Carmarthen; 4th Brig. ditto (Pembroke Artillery), at Haverfordwest; 3rd and 4th Batns. East Kent, at Canterbury; 3rd Oxfordshire L.I., at High Wycombe; 4th Batn. South Wales Borderers, at Welshpool.

A General Order, just issued, shows the results of the musketry training of the various battalions of Militia of England, Scotland, and the Channel Islands, and of the Permanent Staff of the Militia of Ireland. The principal clauses show that the shooting of the battalions was "very unsatisfactory." This is to be attributed principally to "the issue for the first time to the force of a new arm, the Martini-Henry; to the short period in a training of 28 days only that can be devoted to musketry instruction, and to the want of sufficiently qualified instructors, both officers and non-commissioned officers. At the present time, there are several battalions without officer instructors of musketry, and a very large number of the non-commissioned officers of the permanent staff are still unqualified, not being in possession of a certificate from the School of Musketry." As several companies in a Militia battalion are under musketry instruction at the same time, it is suggested as most essential that there should be a qualified non-commissioned officer with each company. The shooting of the permanent staff, in the majority of the battalions, was very satisfactory; but in 58 battalions it was the reverse, attributable to "defective superintendence of the practice." The figures of merit of the permanent staff ranged from 176·92 in the 4th Batn. Royal Irish Rifles to 78·07 in the 5th Batn. Royal Munster Fusiliers. The shooting of the permanent staff of the 4th Batn. Royal Irish Rifles "was particularly good, and reflects great credit both on the non-commissioned officers themselves, and on the officers responsible for their instruction;" 2,304 of the permanent staff completed the course of individual firing, 718 qualified as marksmen, 219 of whom were awarded the prize of £1, leaving 499 in excess of the number allowed, who received the marksman's badge only. The best shot was Colour-Serjt. R. M'Coy, 4th Royal Irish Rifles, who has been awarded the prize of £5. The best judge of distance was Serjt.-Major Barton, 3rd Royal Highlanders; 2,221 were exercised in judging distance, 1,660 obtaining the qualifying number of points, 225 of whom received the prize of 10s.

"A Militia Colonel" writes:—"There are many anomalies in this world, but I know none as great as this. Common-sense would tell any one that the officer commanding a Militia regiment has the greatest interest of all in his regiment. Yet, strange to say, he only gets 27 days' pay—£41, with forage included. A subaltern can join for preliminary drill and the training, and thereby draws three months' pay. The serjeants on the staff draw £52 per annum, yet the colonel gets only £41. I have no control at all during the preliminary drill of my men, and, drawing no pay, living, as I do, 14 miles from head-quarters, and the wear and tear of horses and carriages being great, how can it be expected that I should attend, however interested I may be in my regiment? Now that the change of silver to gold has been ordered, an account of £75 has come in for new uniform,—this on pay of £41 per annum. It seems to me that there is something radically wrong here, and how can Militia regiments be really effective whilst such an anomaly exists?"

YEOMANRY CAVALRY.

Herts. The regiment assembled at Hertford on the 2nd inst. for its annual ten days' drill. The inspection took place in Hartham on the Friday, when there was a good muster of the troops. The inspecting officer was Col. Mussenden. Although the inspecting officer did not address the men on the ground, he congratulated the lieutenant-colonel upon the increased efficiency of the regiment and its increased strength over last year. He also considered the regiment better mounted. The prizes were subsequently distributed in the Town Hall by the lieutenant-colonel. The following officers were on duty:—Lieut.-Col. the Earl of Clarendon; Major Halsey; Capts. Villiers, Croft, Viscount Grimston, and Lord Lawrence; Lieuts. Dagg, Horn, Kelk, Smith, Paget, Viscount Cranbourne, and Ward; Capt. and Adjt. Archdale; Surg. Drage; and Vet.-Surg. Harrison.

Royal East Kent Mounted Rifles. The inspection took place at Dover on Wednesday, at the close of the annual inspection. The inspecting officer, Col. Mussenden, was accompanied by Major-Gen. Newdigate, C.B., commanding the South-Eastern District. The regiment, which was under the command of Lord Guilford, has considerably increased in numbers since last year. The troops were submitted to instruction for upwards of three hours, and the manœuvres concluded with a march-past in review order. The inspecting officer expressed himself very well pleased with the turn-out of the regiment, and its general efficiency.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

22nd Middlesex Rifles (Central London Rangers). A detachment, consisting of 12 officers and 150 men, with a properly equipped transport, left London on Saturday evening and proceeded by march-route to Barnet, where the men were billeted. On Sunday the detachment attended church-parade, and on Monday, after a morning drill for two hours, left Barnet at 3 o'clock for London, reaching head-quarters in Gray's Inn about 9. The conduct of the men was admirable, and their smart appearance when walking in the streets and punctilious observance of the rules as to saluting, earned for them golden opinions. The utmost attention had evidently been paid to every detail, and the Volunteers set an example to the recruits of the local Militia, training in the town, which the latter seemed only too ready to profit by.

There was a review of the Volunteers in the Newcastle District, under command of Col. Collingwood, C.M.G., on Tuesday, at which Major-Gen. Cameron, C.B., commanding the Northern District, was present. The following district order was issued by Col. Collingwood after the review:—"Orders by Col. Collingwood, C.M.G., commanding 5th Regimental District:—Col. Collingwood has much pleasure in publishing the accompanying order by the Major-Gen. commanding the Northern District, and in doing so thanks officers commanding the 'attacking' and 'defending' forces and the staff for their services. He wishes to express his gratification at the strong muster of corps at the review in Gosforth Park, and to thank officers commanding battalions and all ranks under their command for their hearty co-operation.—By order, F. E. Buchanan, Capt. and Garrison Adjt., Newcastle-on-Tyne, May 16, 1883." "[Memorandum.]—To the officers commanding the 5th Regimental District: Major-Gen. Cameron, C.B., commanding the Northern District, requests you will notify to the officers commanding corps present at the field-day and review, at Gosforth Park to-day, his satisfaction at the number of Volunteers who paraded, their very creditable appearance under arms, and the great zeal evinced by all ranks.—By order, C. B. Knowles, Col., A.Q.M.G., May 15, 1883."

The Czar signed a decree last week ordering the cruiser clipper Yaroslavl, recently acquired by the Admiralty from the Moscow Cruiser Committee, to be called the Pamiat Mercurie. The corvette of that name that has long figured on the list of men-of-war of the Black Sea Fleet is at the same time ordered to be withdrawn from service and broken up. Admiral Pestchouroff, Commander-in-Chief of the Black Sea Fleet, has gone on a cruise to inspect Batoum and Poti, where the Naval establishments are to be increased in consequence of the completion of the Transcaucasian Railway.

Army & Navy Gazette.
LONDON, SATURDAY, MAY 19, 1883.

THE predatory instinct of humanity, or that instinct in humanity which a distinguished politician has recently adverted to as worthy of culture and admiration, seems to be in the course of rapid development. As an instance of the deliberate folly of political crotchetmongers, there is, perhaps, nothing more calculated to injure the immediate interests which it is our duty to safeguard, namely, those of the Naval and Military services ; there is nothing, we say, more calculated to injure those interests and the health and well-being of our sailors and soldiers, the defenders of our country, than the encouragement given to the mischievous crotchet of Mr. Stansfeld, and that small section of the community of whom he is the mouthpiece. Even the most pronounced exponents of Liberal views, thoughts and opinions, condemn the attitude of the Government in regard to this vital question. The whole Medical profession of the country is opposed to it, and the gravest and most serious results are anticipated with regard to the health of the services, and a large portion of the population, if Mr. Stansfeld's resolution should be carried into practical effect by the repeal of the Contagious Diseases Acts. We have but recently seen the reports of the senior Medical Officers at several of our principal Naval and Military stations, which are unanimously in favour of the Acts. With the general opinion of the Medical profession supporting them, with the common-sense and humanity of all thinking and practical men recognising the benefits which are derived from their operation, it requires but slight political knowledge or foresight to demonstrate the wickedness of the encouragement given by the Government to Mr. Stansfeld and his crotchet. That it is a crotchet, and nothing more than a crotchet, is clearly shown by the action of the local authorities in every district in which the Acts have been in force, who have with one accord condemned the part played by the Government. We cannot bring ourselves to believe that this spontaneous vote in favour of the Acts will be entirely disregarded. Those who have thus recorded their opinion in support of the continuance of the Acts have been able to form a pretty fair estimate of their worth, after seeing them for years in operation, and they have come to the conclusion, after due deliberation, that the Acts have proved in every sense beneficial. And yet the good that they have done is to be set aside in order that the fanaticism of a few agitators may be allowed to carry the day. The opponents of the Acts have been able to adduce no single argument against them that could possibly hold good, in the eyes of any reasonable man. All they have been able to do has been to say that by recognising the principle of State interference to check the growth of disease among the unoffending, we have legalised vice. Could any more illogical argument be adduced? Still, Ministers have been found so wanting in all sense of duty as to countenance a movement the only effect of which will be to do incalculable harm, and no possible good. On no grounds can the action of the Government be defended. A more ill-judged act never was committed by any Ministry, and it is some consolation to know that so fully alive is the country at large to the evils which will result from Mr. Stansfeld's motion, that Conservatives and Liberals are alike condemning, in no measured language, the part played by the Government, to which the success of the party of repeal is mainly due. As evidence of the excellent results obtained by means of the Acts in protected districts, we need only point to the figures given in the report of the Assistant-Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police for 1880. From this it appears that during the period the Acts had been in force, there had been a decrease of no fewer than 460 beerhouses, 781 brothels, 129 public-houses used as brothels, and 257 beerhouses used as brothels; whilst in seven years — 1873-80 — 1,642 girls and women, who had been found in improper places and in bad company, had been induced to give up their mode of life and return to their friends. We agree with our contemporary the Lancet, no mean authority, that it is very much to be feared that in their repugnance to the principle involved in the Acts, "the advocates for their repeal, and the supporters of voluntary efforts, have not fairly considered what the nation has a right to demand from them; so that the increased efficiency of the Forces, the greater comfort and better health of the unfortunate women, the improvements in social order and decency, and the rescue and reclamation of the fallen, which have taken place during the operation of the Acts, and are directly or indirectly due to them, may not be lost, or even imperilled. We shall be glad to find that the task is within their power, and to see them seriously undertaking its fulfilment."

We have received an interesting letter from a General Officer who was a member of Lord Airey's Committee, expressing his entire concordance with the views and opinions expressed in our article of last week on the failure of Army Reform. Our correspondent informs up that he has, for several years, expressed similar opinions on every opportunity, and has persistently deprecated the changes which have lately been made in the organisation and administration of the Army.

A memorial brass will shortly be placed in All Saints' Church, Aldershot, by the officers of the 87th Royal Irish Fusiliers, to the memory of the late Colonel Beasley, who succumbed to disease while in command of the battalion in Egypt.

Major-General Sir Frederick FitzWygram made a most excellent and soldierlike speech, in replying to the toast of the Army at the annual banquet of the Royal College of Veterinary-Surgeons, held a few evenings ago at the Freemasons' Tavern. It is to be regretted that there were no reporters present to take down the General's remarks. In forcible language, Sir Frederick FitzWygram pointed out the duties of the nation. He did not disguise the fact that the arm of the service he immediately represents, is not now in that condition to justify us in resting satisfied with things as they are. When the war broke out in Egypt we were obliged, he said, to scour the whole continent of Europe, in order to provide for the wants of the transport. This was done at great expense, and yet a large proportion of the purchases made by the accredited agents arrived too late at the scene of operations to be of any practical value. Speaking as an authority, General FitzWygram drew attention to the waste that resulted from this want of preparedness, and hinted that more money was necessary, to enable the heads of the Army to place the defensive forces in a state of efficiency. The soundness of these these arguments must be patent to all those who know, as General FitzWygram of course does, what the requirements are of an army in the field, and we earnestly hope that those who have it in their power to lead public opinion will not shirk from their duty, but speak plainly, and endeavour to open the eyes of their fellow-countrymen to the dangers of the situation.

The Bowyers' Company of London have offered a prize of £25 to be shot for at the Army Rifle Meeting at Aldershot in July next, at a moving object, distances unknown. It is the intention of this Company to offer annually for rifle competition a similar sum. If other wealthy London Companies would do likewise, it would greatly help to bring about that much-talked-of and much-to-be-desired result, improved shooting in the Army.

The Committee appointed at Aldershot on March 30 last, under instructions from the Horse Guards, for the purpose of considering and revising the existing rules for playing the war-game, have been quietly at work since that date, and we may look for an early re-establishment of these interesting and valuable studies. The models in the Garrison Instruction Offices are certainly useful as a means of instructing officers in the minor operations of war; but more advanced practices have become a necessity, and the original Kriegs-spiel, strangely neglected of late years, will shortly again be to the front.

Major T. J. R. Mallock, 7th Fusiliers, has been granted an extension of his period of Staff service as Garrison Instructor of the Southern District for two years, from July 20 next.

It has been announced by our contemporaries that the colonelcies of the 67th, 87th, and 107th Regiments, now vacant by the deaths of Generals W. M. Wood, Sir Hastings Doyle, and the Hon. G. Upton, will be given to Generals T. S. Conway, A. F. Ansell, and Sir J. E. Alexander. We believe it will be found, however, that these three colencies will be absorbed, and that a similar course will be pursued whenever it comes to the turn of a General who has accepted the new rules, with a view of gradually reducing all the new regiments to one Colonel, as is at present the case with the first twenty-five regiments. The Generals who have accepted the old rules, preferring to remain on the pay of £450 per annum, will succeed to regiments in their turn, when vacancies occur. Generals Conway, Ansell, and Alexander have all retired on pension under the new rules. After these three come Generals J. A. Ewart, C.B., W. Parke, C.B., and H. E. Longden, C.B., C.S.I., who will all succeed to colonelcies. Then follows Sir James Airey, who has retired on pension, and, in his case, a fourth colonelcy will be absorbed.

Deserving as H.S.H. Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar is, we cannot think it possible that the Horse Guards would sanction his being allowed to retain his command of the Portsmouth District, in view of the serious injury which would be inflicted on many an unoffending General Officer by this one-sided arrangement. So long as the "five years' unemployed" rule continues in existence, an officer can only retain his appointment on the expiration of his term at the expense of some junior. There is no knowing the effect which may be produced on the prospects of others by any favour which is shown to a senior, and whilst the present Warrant continues in force, the Army has a right to demand that the extension of command in the case of General Officers shall be rigorously opposed.

As a result of the conclusion the Committee on Valise Equipment have arrived at regarding the relative merits of the old and new valises, four men of different heights, from two regiments of the 1st Brigade, Aldershot, two men wearing the old equipment and two the new, in marching order, with reduced kit, proceeded on Saturday last to the Horse Guards, to be inspected by the Commander-in-Chief and others. As evidence of the chaotic state of valise equipment affairs at present, it was announced in "Divisional Orders" that what was meant by "reduced kit" would be explained to the General Officer Commanding 1st Brigade, by Colonel Harrison, C.B., President of the Committee. This officer attended at the Horse Guards with the party. It is not necessary that one should have the gift of divination to know which equipment has been approved by the Committee. Why this valise-equipment farce should be kept on the boards from year to year is a mystery, The players may be changed, but it is the same old "business." No one is deceived by it. Can it be wondered at, if the report should prove correct that Brigade-Surgeon Oliver is about to retire from a service in which he has received such scurvy treatment?

In the following Regimental Districts the recruiting in 1882 shows a decrease, as compared with 1881:—8th (Warrington), 715 men; 63rd (Ashton-under-Lyne), 391; 83rd (Belfast), 233; 71st (Hamilton), 239; 20th (Bury), 232; 40th (Warrington), 215; 17th (Leicester), 156; 101st (Tralee), 113; 13th (Taunton), 96; 64th (Lichfield), 94; 2nd (Guildford), 90; 39th (Dorchester), 84; 18th (Clonmel), 83; 27th (Omagh), 72; 49th (Reading), 69; 23rd (Wrexham), 68; 53rd (Shrewsbury), 64; 51st (Pontefract), 62; 15th (Beverley), 61; 34th (Carlisle), 60; 30th (Burnley), 59; 102nd (Naas), 59; 38th (Lichfield), 48; 9th (Yarmouth), 46; 14th (York), 46; 68th (Sunderland), 44; 6th (Warwick), 42; 65th (Pontefract), 41; 62nd (Devizes), 40; 87th (Armagh), 40; 19th (Richmond), 31; 41st (Cardiff), 22; 16th (Bedford), 15; 22nd (Chester), 13; 88th (Galway), 12; 25th (Berwick), 12; 75th (Aberdeen), 9.

The recruiting in the under-mentioned Regimental Districts shows an increase of the following numbers in 1882 over 1881:—71st (Hamilton), 239; 29th (Worcester), 138; 48th (Northampton), 119; 45th (Derby), 113; 31st (Kingston), 110; 42nd (Perth), 106; 91st (Stirling), 103; 26th (Hamilton), 102; 10th (Lincoln), 80; 35th (Chichester), 79; 33rd (Halifax), 60; 21st (Ayr), 60; 44th (Warley), 60; 100th (Birr), 55; 3rd (Canterbury), 56; 47th (Preston), 42; 28th (Bristol), 39; 11th (Exeter), 38; 43rd (Oxford), 38; 72nd and 79th (Fort George), 28; 37th (Winchester), 23; 5th (Newcastle), 23; 4th (Lancaster), 20; 32nd (Bodmin), 20; 12th (Bury St. Edmund's), 18; 50th (Maidstone), 7; 1st (Glencorse), 7; 57th (Hounslow), 4.

From the above two paragraphs, it appears that recruiting has fallen off in 37 Regimental Districts, to the number of 3,776; while it has increased in 28 Districts, but only to the number of 1,786. Deducting the increase, there remains a balance of 1,990 recruits less in 1882 than in 1881. The 60th and the Rifle Brigade (the only regiments which have any fair claim to the special title of "Rifles") are not included in the above statement, as they are recruited under somewhat different conditions, and are not similarly localised.

It appears from a recent official return that the number of men in the Army on January 1, 1883, who can neither read nor write are, in the Household Cavalry, 2; Cavalry of Line, 93; Royal Artillery, 323; Engineers, 2; Foot Guards, 14; Infantry, 2,411. Of those who read and cannot write there are, Cavalry of Line, 64; Royal Artillery, 444; Engineers, 24; Foot Guards, 26; Infantry, 1,940. While of those who can only read and write there are, Household Cavalry, 71; Cavalry of Line, 1,100; Royal Artillery, 2,443; Engineers, 133; Foot Guards, 1,010; and Infantry, 14,105.

A return gives the number of men in the Army professing the Roman Catholic and Presbyterian religions. Of Roman Catholics, there are, in the Household Cavalry, 38; Cavalry of the Line, 1,054; Royal Artillery, 2,580; Engineers, 384; Foot Guards, 383; Infantry, 13,694. Of Presbyterians, there are, Household Cavalry, 119; Cavalry of the Line, 674; Royal Artillery, 1,010; Engineers, 250; Foot Guards, 785; and Infantry, 4,460.

Conscription or ballot, or by whatever name we choose to call enforced military service, is merely a tax in kind, from which no class of society should be legally and morally exempt. To defend his home and hearth, and to uphold his country's honour, is the duty of every free citizen, no matter what his rank or position. But with singular inconsistency, the middle and upper classes of this country have hitherto considered that their wealth and position exempted them from this duty, and that it devolved on the working-man, who in reality has no more right to fight for his country than his superiors, and certainly has less reason, as, in the event of national disaster he has little to lose. By doing away with the soldier's pension, the country has brought itself face to face with conscription, for as they will not pay their substitutes in the battle-field, they must serve themselves. This is the end of Mr. Cardwell's "harmonious whole," re-arranged by Mr. Childers.

The Army reformers seem to have placed the country on the horns of a dilemma, as regards keeping up a fighting and foreign-service army for the offensive and defensive requirements of this vast Empire. The Short-enlistment Act and the unintelligent and unstatesmanlike attempt to get a fighting army drawn from the poorest classes to serve in all parts of the world and in all climates for nothing, or next to nothing, will now cost the State a great deal deal of money, for it is not at all certain that even the restoration of the 1s. pension for 21 years' service will be sufficient, and it may be necessary to give the same pension for 14 years' service, and more for 21 years' service. The "blood-tax" must be paid for in money or by conscription.

Amethyst, Capt. Bowden Smith, senior officer on the South-east Coast of America, left Stanley, Falkland Islands, on March 4, and on March 6 was caught in a heavy gale, the tremendous sea smashing in the captain's gig and the first cutter, tearing the gunwales out, and nearly carrying the boats away altogether. The ship was also struck at times very heavily. Her head-rail was smashed in two, and the hull was strained to such an extent as to cause the decks to leak badly. However, she behaved remarkably well, and proved herself a good seaboat. On the 27th, the Amethyst had a full-speed trial of her engines for eight hours. She made an average run of 12·25 knots per hour, with a much less consumption of coal than she did during the trial at Plymouth. It was blowing a fresh breeze with a cross sea during the trial. The ship arrived at Monte Video on March 29, and after coaling, was to proceed to Colonia for a week's stay. During the Amethyst's stay at Stanley, a fatal accident occurred to the sick-berth steward, Robert H. Clutterbuck. Whilst waiting on the pier for a boat, it is supposed the poor fellow overstepped the edge and fell on a heap of stones. At any rate, he was picked up on the following day with his skull severely fractured and quite dead. During the ship's passage, a subscription was raised in behalf of the widow. The Rifleman and Firefly were at Monte Video; the Rambler at Port Stanley, and would probably arrive at Monte Video on April 14.

Beacon, Com. A. W. Moore, was at Gibraltar on May 15, on passage home to pay off. Will leave on May 20.

Boadicea, Capt. Church, flagship of Rear-Admiral Salmon, V.C., Commanding-in-Chief on the Cape of Good Hope and West Coast of Africa station, was at Simon's Bay up to May 15, having been docked on April 19. The Briton was detained on the 14th inst. at Simon's Bay, being disabled by defects, and will sail 23rd inst. The Sapphire sails from Simon's Bay on May 19.

Cockchafer, Lieut.-Com. H. W. Hill, arrived at Colombo on May 18, and would leave for Singapore on May 25.

Constance, Capt. Doughty, was at Coquimbo on March 31, intending to leave for Callao.

Duncan, Capt. John D'Arcy, flagship of Vice-Admiral Edward Bridges Rice, C.B., Commander-in-Chief at the Nore. A court-martial has been held on board for the trial of Henry Hunt, a private in the Royal Marine Light Infantry, who was arraigned upon three charges, viz.:—first, with unlawfully absenting himself from H.M.S. Pembroke; secondly, with breaking out of Chatham Dockyard; thirdly, with desertion. The prisoner, who was captured at Stonehouse, Devonport, after eluding the Naval police for three months, pleaded guilty to all the charges, and was sentenced to 18 months' hard labour, and to be dismissed the service.

Euryalus, Capt. Hastings, C.B., flagship of Rear-Admiral Sir William Hewett, V.C., Commanding-in-Chief on the East Indies station, was at Bombay up to April 27; would leave for Trincomalee May 1, calling at Colombo; was at Colombo on May 8. The Eclipse was at Bushire on March 30, would leave on April 11 for Bahrein Linga, Bunder Abbas, and Jask; was at Jask on April 25, and has since left for Aden, to take over duties of senior officer's ship until the arrival of Briton on the station; has since arrived at Aden. Tourmaline, Ranger, and Osprey were cruising off the coast of Arabia for the suppression of the slave-trade. When the south-west monsoon breaks, will proceed to rejoin the flag at Trincomalee. Woodlark was at Bombay on April 21, and has left for Muscat to take over duties of senior officer's ship. Dryad was at Tamatave, Island of Madagascar. Arab was in the Persian Gulf; left Bushire for Busreh on April 6, and expected to return on April 21. Dragon was at Aden on April 21, and left on April 21 for Zanzibar. Philomel was at Bombay on April 27, preparing for service in the Persian Gulf. Departure from Bombay delayed, owing to discovery of further defects. Harrier and Undine were cruising in the Mozambique Channel and neighbourhood of Comoro Islands, for the suppression of the slave-trade.

Humber, Com. Cæsar H. Hawkins, arrived at Sheerness on Wednesday afternoon from Portsmouth. She is to await orders, and it is understood that she will be docked, to be overhauled and repaired. She brought home the crew of the unfortunate vessel Fantôme, who were paid off on Thursday morning, and granted the usual leave of absence.

Lily, Com. Richard Evans, which has been ordered home to pay off, arrived at Gibraltar on the 11th inst., from Hong Kong, where she was recommissioned in June, 1879. Sailed on May 17.

Neptune, Capt. W. H. Maxwell, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral J. C. Wilson, second-in-command of the Channel Squadron, arrived in Plymouth Sound on Monday, and exchanged the usual salutes. Rear-Admiral Wilson visited Sir W. Houston Stewart, and left in the afternoon for Gibraltar to join the Channel Fleet. Admiral Wilson will then transfer his flag to the Agincourt.

Northampton, Capt. Digby, flagship of Vice-Admiral Sir John Commerell, V.C., Commanding-in-Chief on the North America and West Indies station, was at Bermuda up to April 26, in dock, refitting; would proceed to Halifax towards end of May. The Garnet, at Bermuda, will leave about May 25 to relieve the Dido at Barbadoes. The Fantôme, recommissioned at Bermuda on April 25, will proceed to Jamaica about May 26. The Griffon is at Bermuda. Satellite, Capt. C. B. Theobald, is lying at Sheerness, waiting orders when to leave for the Pacific station. She has not been inspected by the Commander-in-Chief at the Nore, or her date of departure postponed by the Admiralty, as has been reported, in many of the London papers.

Swiftsure, Capt. Tracey, flagship of Rear-Admiral Lyons, Commanding-in-Chief on the Pacific station, was at Esquimault up to April 19; left Honolulu on March 22, and reached Esquimault on April 12. Comus was at Payta on April 16, and would leave for Callao about April 22. Constance was on the coasts of Chili and Peru on April 19. Heroine was on coast of Peru on April 16, would relieve Sappho at Guayaquil, and eventually proceed to Vancouver. Mutine arrived at Esquimault on March 27, and will remain until Heroine arrives. Sappho was at Guayaquil on April 16, and would proceed to Esquimault on relief by Heroine. Kingfisher visiting the Islands.

The vessel steamed into harbour early on Monday, when the drafts for this port were discharged to the Royal Adelaide.

NAVAL NOTES.

Vice-Admiral the Lord John Hay left Malta on May 7 in the Alexandra for Corfu, with the Superb, Monarch, Temeraire, Inflexible, Carysfort, and Decoy in company, for the summer cruise of the Mediterranean Fleet.

The Iris and Falcon remain at Port Said. The Falcon is to leave for Constantinople, on relief by the Bittern. The Helicon has taken Lord Dufferin to Varna, and returns to Constantinople, where she remains for the present in lieu of the Antelope as Embassy yacht, until relieved by the Falcon, when she will rejoin the Mediterranean Fleet.

The Canada, corvette, which has been commissioned by Capt. Durrant for the North American station, and in which Prince George of Wales will serve as a midshipman, will remain longer at Portsmouth than was expected. The alterations which are being made in the interior fittings of the ship are considerable, and besides these one of the sponson guns remains to be fitted. It will take about a month to mount it upon its central pivotting carriage. Prince George of Wales will, in consequence, not join the Canada until the end of June, at the earliest.

The Chinese man-of-war Ting Yuen, which has been built at Stettin for the Imperial Government, is at Kiel, taking on board the Krupp guns with which the Chinese fleet will in future be armed. Several Chinese officials have recently visited the German arsenals, in order to acquaint themselves with the most modern and effective weapons of war, and have made large purchases. The arms have been consigned to China from North German ports.

A committee has been formed at Portsmouth, of which Rear-Admiral Herbert is the president, and Mr. W. M. Richards, cashier of Portsmouth Yard, is the secretary, to raise subscriptions for a memorial to be erected to the memory of the late Admiral John Dobree McCrea, an officer whose urbanity and great kindness to all who ever served under him gained for him the goodwill of the Navy, and of all who were at any time brought into contact with him, either at home or abroad.

A survey of the Warrior at Portsmouth has revealed the fact that the heels of the mainmast and foremast are so rotten, that it is doubtful whether she will be ready to join the Reserve Squadron in time for the summer cruise. In some parts of the masts dry-rot has set in to a depth of 6 in. or 8 in. They will have to be replaced.

The first piece of heavy ordnance for the armament of the Conqueror has arrived at Chatham from the Royal Arsenal. The gun is one of the new-pattern, 43-ton breech-loaders. It is 27 ft. long, and measures 14 ft. in circumference at the breech.

The new boilers with which the Polyphemus is ordered to be fitted have arrived at Chatham, and the vessel is shortly expected at that yard, to have them put on board.

Mr. W. Willis, Accountant-General of the Navy and Controller of Navy Pay, arrived at Portsmouth on Thursday morning, for the purpose of inspecting the Paymasters' accounts of the ships in harbour.

The Naval service will be sorry to hear of the death of Mr. J. G. Hoare, retired paymaster R.N., late manager of "The Junior." He will long be remembered in connection with the formation of the Naval Club at Portsmouth, of which, when assistant-paymaster of the Royal Yacht, he was honorary secretary, and on retirement, after promotion, became secretary. In 1873 he was elected secretary and manager of "The Junior," which post he retained until Dec. 1882, when, much to the regret of his friends, he was obliged to resign. At the time of his death he was manager of the Vine Club, and his loss will be felt by the majority of the officers of the service, by whom he was well known and highly respected.

The under-named men have been awarded the medal for long service and good conduct:—Frederick J. Stock, coxswain of the launch, of the Excellent; Henry Ballard, engine-room artificer, of the Serapis; Charles Burgess, captain's steward, of the Sapphire; John T. Martin, acting chief yeoman of the signals, of the Hibernia; John W. May, writer, of the Swiftsure; George Axtell, gunner's mate, of the Belleisle; William Shire Drummer, R.M.L.I., of the Lion; George Dykes, private R.M.L.I., of the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert; John Rhodes, private R.M.L.I., of the Lord Warden; Tadys Conlan, commissioned boatman, James Baker and Charles Exeter, boatmen, of the Coastguard.

Staff Capt. Balliston, who has served in the Royal yacht for 34 years, was summoned to Windsor on Wednesday last, where he received the honour of knighthood at the hands of her Majesty. Sir Alfred Balliston, who is a native of Gosport, was educated at Greenwich School, and entered the Navy in 1838. He was employed, in the early part of his career, in the Falmouth mail packets, which proved so valuable a training-school to many navigating officers who have since risen to the highest grades in their profession, and after spending three years in this employment he went to a foreign station. On his return the Irish famine was engaging public attention, and the command of the Myrtle, the Admiral's tender, was given him. While so employed some angry disputes arose among the fishermen in the neighbourhood of Folkestone, and Mr. Balliston, who was then acting master of the Myrtle, was sent there, and succeeded in settling the dispute so amicably as to receive the thanks of the Admiralty. On his return to Portsmouth he was appointed to the Kite, which he took to Bermuda, and brought home the Gleaner, which had a large number of convicts on board. In spite of the crew being of a naturally turbulent disposition, the greatest order prevailed, although the convicts were without warders, and again he received the thanks of the Admiralty. In 1849 the Elfin was built by Oliver Lang, at Chatham, and Mr. Balliston was sent to bring her round to Portsmouth, being placed in command of her. He retained that post for 29 years, and on April 1, 1878, he was promoted to the Alberta. During the time he has been serving in the Royal yacht, her Majesty has already signified her approval of Capt. Balliston's conduct by appointing him a serjeant-at-arms of the Royal household. Throughout the whole of the 34 years in which he has been in the direct service of her Majesty, Sir Alfred Balliston has been exceedingly fortunate, inasmuch as no accident of any kind has ever occurred for which he was responsible. There are at present only two other staff officers who have been knighted, and the honour conferred upon Sir Alfred is regarded in the service as an honour to the class, while in Gosport, where he has lived ever since he was appointed to the Royal yacht, the announcement was received with unqualified pleasure, for there are few men in that town who have done so much to deserve popularity. The dates of his commissions were:—Master's mate, May 26, 1847; master, Jan. 10, 1853; staff com., Aug. 20, 1867; staff capt., Sept. 15, 1877.

The Admiralty have ordered the Curlew and Porcupine, lying at Chatham, to be sold out of the service.

The Repulse, Capt. Sulivan, from Hull; the Lord Warden, Capt. Kennedy, from Queensferry; and the Warrior, Capt. Adeane, from Greenock, have arrived at Portsmouth to make good defects and prepare for the annual cruise of the Coastguard Squadron.

Rear-Admiral Wilson hoisted his flag on Friday last on board the Neptune at Spithead as second-in-command of the Channel Squadron. It was found necessary, however, to repair many of the backing bolts of this ship, as they admitted water. Everything at last having been got ready, Rear-Admiral Wilson determined to leave Spithead on Saturday last to join the Channel Squadron. When, however, the engines were started, the condensers entirely gave out, and signal had to be made to the dockyard for assistance to make good defects. The unfortunate Neptune had consequently to remain a day at Spithead until her condensers were patched up sufficiently to enable her to proceed to join the Channel Squadron.

On Thursday, the 17th inst., a General Officer's sword, a large silver bowl, and a complimentary address were presented by Sir Alexander Galt, G.C.M.G., on behalf of the Volunteer Militia of Nova Scotia, to Major-General J. W. Laurie, on his promotion, and the consequent severance of his connection with that force. The interesting ceremony, which was attended by a large number of members of the Colonial Institute and others connected with the Canadian portion of our Empire, took place in the ancient hall of the Saddlers' Company in Cheapside. From Sir Alexander Galt's speech, and from the warm greetings with which the proceedings terminated, it was evident that General Laurie has won the respect and esteem of the Nova Scotians during his twenty years' sojourn among them. In the course of his speech in acknowledgment of the gifts he had received, General Laurie said that the report of Major-General Luard and the inferences that had been drawn from it were calculated to produce a more unfavourable impression as to the state of the Canadian Militia than he thought was warranted, for that force had proved ready and able to defend its frontiers during the Fenian attacks.

Mr. Bellingham will, on Monday next, ask the Secretary of State for War whether, in the event of any Militia regiments being obliged to make any change in their uniform, he will take into consideration the propriety of giving some compensation to the officers of such regiments for the expenses to which they may be put. Can it be the intention of the authorities to change their uniforms to grey or smock frocks?

Those who are responsible for the carrying-out of musketry instruction in the Army, in accordance with the new "Regulations" (?), are having a hard time of it just now. G.O. 51 and 52 are not remarkable for their lucidity, and since their publication copious amendments, additions, and alterations have been found necessary; these again, in their turn, are being amended and altered, till the ordinary mortal, not being in the secret of the compilers of these very original documents, is compelled to give it up, as one of those things that "no fellah can understand."

The following Horse Guards Memorandum relative to musketry matters has been circulated during the week, for general information and guidance:—G. O. 51, para. III., lines 18 and 19, dele the words "for . . . . . . musketry," and insert, "who will forward it, accompanied by their remarks, to the Commandant of the School of Musketry." The following will be substituted for the insertion to para. III., promulgated in Horse Guards Memorandum of the 6th ult.:—"The annual 'musketry return' (revised), i.e., first and second parts, will be prepared and forwarded by the officer commanding each regiment, battalion, regimental district, and company of Royal Engineers, to the General Officer commanding the district or station, not later than April 15, to be transmitted, with his remarks, to the Commandant, School of Musketry, for the information of H.R.H. the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief." Para. VI., add the following:—"Individual firing, 100 yards standing, 150 yards standing, 200 yards kneeling, at 3rd-class target; 300 yards kneeling, 400 yards any military position, 2nd-class target; 500 yards any military position, 600 yards any military position, 1st-class target. Volley firing, 300 yards in close order, 400 yards in extended order, six targets; 600 yards in extended order, eight targets. Independent firing, 300 yards, in close order, six targets." The following addition will be made to para. III. of the Memoranda furnished to General Officers commanding, by circular letter, dated Horse Guards, 25th ult.:—After last line, i.e., after "under 150 points, 2nd class," add, "under 120 points, 3rd class." (a.) Serjeants, corporals, and paid lance-corporals will not compete for the prizes for the "best shot," and "second best shot" in each regiment and battalion, these prizes being restricted to privates and unpaid lance-corporals. This will shortly be promulgated by Royal Warrant. (b.) With reference to the further training of the worse shots of a regiment or battalion in practice (a), it rests with the General Officer commanding to order the training of these worse shots to any extent he may think fit, as far as the ammunition "2nd part" of the annual course will admit. (c.) In G. O. 51, the distances for practice at the "figure" target are detailed for the Martini-Henry rifle. The distances for Martini-Henry carbine are as follows:—Between 260 and 220 yards, the legs should be struck; between 220 and 180 yards, the body; and between 180 and 140 yards, the head.

The famous yacht Livadia is to be known no more by that name. The Czar has decreed this week that it is to be called henceforth the "Opeet," or "Experiment." Surely there is hidden sarcasm conveyed in this title which, should cut Admiral Popoff to the heart.

On the recommendation of the Government of India, her Majesty's Government has been pleased to confer a good-service pension on Deputy-Surg.-Gen. J. J. Clarke, M.D., Bengal Medical Service, from Dec. 9, 1882, in room of Deputy-Surg.-Gen. A. C. C. De Renzy, C.B., retired. Dr. Clarke entered the service May 14, 1853; became surg., June 15, 1864; surg.-major, May 14, 1873; deputy-surg.-gen., April 20, 1879. Served throughout the Mutiny. Escaped as a refugee across Central Provinces to Benares. Joined Gen. Havelock's column in medical charge of a field battery of artillery. Present at the penetration, defence of garrison, and capture of Lucknow. Joined the column in the subjugation of Oude. In medical charge 1st Sikh Cavalry. (Medal and two clasps, mentioned in despatches.)

The Bombay Army List for April shows the following as the number of officers in the Staff Corps of this Presidency:—Lieutenant-generals, 4; major-generals, 3; lieutenant-colonels with colonel's allowances, 7; lieutenant-colonels, effective, 97; majors, 76; captains, 90; lieutenants, 78; total, 355 officers, of whom 13 are in receipt of colonel's allowances. To this number must be added 75 lieutenants in the Staff Corps on probation, and this will give us 153 subalterns for duty, or over four to each regiment of cavalry and infantry in the Bombay Army. This statement sounds so satisfactory that we wish we could leave it as it stands, but unfortunately a goodly proportion of these young gentlemen are absorbed by the civil and semi-civil departments, and the number actually doing duty with regiments is much smaller than it ought to be. Still, the number of subalterns in the Bombay Staff Corps shows a satisfactory increase over past years, and the fact of there only being twenty more field officers than there are lieutenants on its rolls is a decided gain. A few years ago it seemed as if the subaltern of the Indian Army would become as extinct as the dodo.

The 40-pounder battery hitherto stationed at Peshawur has moved to Campbellpore. The artillery commands in the Punjab will probably be recast, owing to the new distribution of the batteries.

Gen. Lord Wolseley went to Windsor on Sunday, for the purpose of paying a visit to the Queen, previous to his departure for Moscow, to attend the Czar's coronation. Lord Wolseley returned to town later in the evening.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. CHLORODYNE.
From SYMES and Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Medical Hall, Simla, January 5, 1881.
To J. T. DAVENPORT, Esq., 33 Great Russell Street, Bloomsbury, London.
Dear Sir,—We embrace this opportunity of congratulating you upon the wide-spread reputation this justly esteemed medicine, Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne, has earned for itself, not only in Hindostan, but all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported into the country, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of Dr. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike. We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES and Co., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.
DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a Liquid Medicine which assuages Pain of every kind, affords a calm, refreshing sleep without Headache, and invigorates the Nervous System when exhausted.
DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.
Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff), discovered a remedy to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE.
The General Board of Health, London, report that it acts as a charm, one dose generally sufficient.
Dr. Gibbon, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states:—"Two doses completely cured me of Diarrhœa."
DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of COUGHS, ASTHMA, COLDS, BRONCHITIS,
EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC,
PALPITATION, HYSTERIA, and is the true Palliative in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER,
TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.
GREAT SPECIFIC for DIARRHŒA,
CHOLERA, DYSENTERY.
IMPORTANT CAUTION.
The immense sale of this remedy has given rise to many unscrupulous imitations.
N.B.—Every bottle of genuine Chlorodyne bears on the Government stamp the name of the inventor,
DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE.
Sold in Bottles, 1s 1½d, 2s 9d, 4s 6d, by all Chemists.

EGYPTIAN NOTES.

Cairo, May 7, 1883.

For reasons not clearly apparent to lay minds, the Head-Quarters Staff have decided to withhold from correspondents all news as to the health or reverse of the troops, and those gentlemen are left to the resources of their own imagination on a subject which is, nevertheless, of some interest at home. As it has already produced sensational rumours of small-pox, it may be as well to state that I have no reason to suppose that the order is issued with the object of concealing any serious sickness, nor, obvious as must be the result, with any desire to cause apprehension to those at home.

Leave of absence is granted to Major Disney-Roebuck, Duke of Cornwall's L.I., from May 3 to May 17; Lieutenant H. Murray Dunlop, R.A., from May 10 to August 25; Lieutenant-Colonel K. Coghill, 19th Hussars, from May 8 to August 17; Lieutenants R. Bower, King's Royal Rifles, from May 1 to July 31; A. G. Thomson, R.E., from May 4 to August 10; Cuthbertson, Royal Highlanders, from April 25 to May 9; H. W. Jackson and J. S. Henderson, 1st Battalion, Gordon Highlanders, from May 1 to August 15.

Lieutenant-Colonel Blood, R.E., returns to England.

Lieutenant Salmon is transferred from the Berkshire Regiment to the 3rd Battalion, King's Royal Rifles.

Brigade-Surgeon Lofthouse, A.M.D., has returned to duty from leave of absence.

Lieutenant E. Gilpin Brown, Gordon Highlanders, resigns the appointment of A.D.C. to Major-General Graham, V.C., K.C.B., at his own request.

A complaint having been made that soldiers of the Army of Occupation do not salute officers of the Egyptian Army and Constabulary, attention has been drawn to Sec. 3, par. 1 to 15, Queen's Regulations.

The following extract from letter of Lord Dufferin to Sir Archibald Alison has been placed in General Orders:—"Before quitting Egypt there is one more duty which I feel it incumbent on me to perform, namely, to acquaint you with the pride and satisfaction with which I have observed the bearing of the officers and men of the British Army of Occupation in Cairo during the last six months. Their sobriety, their unobtrusive and orderly behaviour, and the good humoured and friendly manner in which they treat the natives, has done more than anything else to convince the Egyptian people of the amicable feelings with which we are actuated towards them. If it were not too presumptuous a request, I should be very much obliged if you would make known to the officers and men under your distinguished command the deep sense of obligation which I feel towards them."

(FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.)

Lord Dufferin's departure of Thursday, May 3, closed a great chapter of recent history in Egypt. All the papers have had their say about it by this time, but there are not many, journalists or others, who know what the special Ambassador had to do or what he has done, just as no one lives who can at all say what will be the course pursued by Turkey in reference to the arrangement, or by our own or foreign Powers in future adjustments of it. But be sure the British Ambassador has built a solid work, even though it may appear to some that the foundations are not secure or strong enough for the superstructure. Those who felt most the pressure of his hand and looked forward to unwholesome emancipation from his control, acknowledge and admire the honesty, the sagacity, and the force which enabled him to carry out his generous conceptions, and to endow Egypt with a Magna Charta such as no Mussulman state has ever enjoyed. In Sir E. Malet, as long as he remains, the British Government will have a minister well adapted to preside over the machinery which has been started on this new field. It is to be regretted that the changes in the Military administration have not been effected with tact, delicacy, or consideration. When Sir A. Alison's health rendered it desirable, and indeed essential, that he should have leave of absence to Europe during the hot months, there was no great good-taste, and there was no feeling shown in communicating to one who had done such invaluable service the news that his successor was already named, and that his command was taken from him. No doubt, the authorities at the War Office and the Horse Guards were moved solely by solicitude for the health of the General, and summoned him home in order that they might give him something better; but, certainly, they ought to have left no doubt on the point, especially when they were dealing with a man in a position which needed much delicacy and kindness. Doubtless, they have made a very good selection in the officer who is to succeed the General, but it would have been quite possible to have handled the subject with more care and deliberation. The gallant and accomplished soldier, on whose labours in the office and in the field so much depended, who, in preparation and execution was the foremost man in the Egyptian Expedition, is too high-minded to complain of, if he is not thick-skinned enough to feel indifferent to, the heroic treatment of Mr. Childers; but his friends and those who are acquainted with the circumstances think that the proceedings connected with the appointment of Lieutenant-General Stephenson have been characterised by a great deal of coarseness, which possibly was not at all intentional. It remains to be seen whether the same fine style will be displayed at home, or if there is to be some pleasant surprise in store for the General. These official pachyderms are occasionally of much intelligence.

(FROM AN OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENT.)

The first sham-fight of the season took place on Tuesday, among the hills, and dales, and woods in the vicinity of the Long Valley, and was specially ordered for the instruction of the 6th Lancashire R.V. attached to the 1st Brigade. The Division, over 5,000 strong, with 15 rounds of blank ammunition per man, was exercised as opposing forces, under the following general idea. The special ideas, if any such existed, were not made known:—"A small force marching from Portsmouth to join an army at Wimbledon, unexpectedly finds a portion of an enemy's force (number unknown), which has landed at Torbay, and is marching on London, on its flank, and is obliged to attack before moving on. After the fight, the troops were concentrated in the Long Valley, and marched past the General commanding, who considerately allowed the 6th Lancashire R.V., after marching past, to be detached from their brigade and take up a position whence they could observe the march past of the mounted corps. Just as the massed bands of the Division commenced to play for the march-past, the charger ridden by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught (who was present in command of his brigade) became restive, and made many determined, but happily ineffectual, attempts to throw his rider. Several times it was feared that the spirited animal would come over, but he had his master; and the incident was proof to the whole Division, who witnessed it, that his Royal Highness is a most accomplished horseman. The troops were back in quarters by 2 o'clock. The following Staff College officers were attached to the personal Staff of the General commanding the Division during the operations:—Major Morris, 58th; Captain Stephenson, 56th; Lieutenant Hutton, 52nd. A meeting was held at the Cavalry Brigade office on Wednesday, to consider the advisability of keeping up the pack of Divisional Drag-hounds till next season. This pack is almost wholly maintained by subscription from officers of the mounted corps, and has precariously existed during recent years. A concert will be given by the officers and ladies of the Division, on Monday next, in the Assembly Rooms, Aldershot, under the patronage of Lady Lysons, and other ladies, in aid of the destitute and sick poor of Aldershot. Much distress and sickness exists in Aldershot town at the present time, among the very poor, too many of whom are the wives and children, and in not a few cases the widows and orphans of soldiers. While serving, soldiers are, as a rule, the most generous of men, and I am quite certain that few men in the garrison would think twice before giving a day's pay to assist in alleviating the sufferings of the poor of this place. If a general subscription were permitted, and lists sent round all corps, I am confident there would be a hearty response, provided always that no sectarianism lurked in the matter, and it was well understood that the funds would be judiciously administered, irrespective of creed. The athletic sports of the 26th Cameronians took place on the athletic-sports ground, on Wednesday last, when an excellent programme of 22 events was carried out. Many officers and men from other corps in garrison were present during the afternoon. The Queen's Birthday will be kept at Aldershot on Saturday, the 26th inst. Owing to next week being the Derby week, this will be a more convenient day than if held on the 24th, as originally intended. The 6th Lancashire R.V., an exceptionally smart corps, will leave the Camp to-day (Saturday) for Manchester, after a week's hard, but healthful work, during splendid weather. Their temporary sojourn at Aldershot, remarkable for its salubrity at this time of the year, must have been most beneficial to them; not to mention the soldierly experiences they have gained by being brigaded with the Regulars, between whom and the Lancashire men the utmost cordiality existed. It is hoped they will return to Aldershot next year, nothing daunted by their week's experience of the rotten old huts and their teeming insect life. As habitations for human beings, these huts are certainly a disgrace to the nineteenth century, and it is well that our citizen soldiers should occasionally know what they are like. On Thursday, at 9.30 a.m., the regiment under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel R. Bridgford, marched out of Camp, with advance and rear guards, and observing all precautions as if in an enemy's country, to the elevated ground beyond the Long Valley, where outpost duty was practised for an hour or two; after which, the men dined on the ground, the dinners, already cooked, having been conveyed to the spot in waggons. In the afternoon, the right wing operated against the left wing, each man having been supplied with fifteen rounds of blank ammunition, and interesting minor operations were carried out. The battalion did not return to quarters till late in the evening, having been out over eight hours, during the hottest day experienced this season. Yesterday (Friday) the Infantry Brigades (Lancashire R.V. attached to 1st Brigade) formed up in the Long Valley at 10.30 a.m. in field-day order, in line of quarter-columns, facing west, and for two hours, under Sir Daniel Lysons, were exercised in extended divisional formation and the new system of attack, returning to quarters about 1 o'clock. The following Staff College officers, in conformity with regulations, were attached to the Staff of the General commanding during the morning:—Lieutenant Codrington, Coldstream Guards; Captain Macdonald, R.E.; Major James, 2nd Dragoons; Captain Leepe, R.M.A.; Lieutenant H. de H. Haig, R.E.; Major Allen, 1st Batn. 15th Regiment. Twenty-five men of the Army Hospital Corps proceeded to York on Wednesday for duty. A serjeant and 31 men of the same corps will proceed on Friday next to Dublin for duty. K Battery 1st Brigade, Royal Artillery, will arrive here from Dublin in a few days. Twenty-five recruits of the 63rd Regiment, from the Tower of London, arrived on Wednesday for musketry practice, and are quartered in the North Camp. Deputy-Commissary-General H. A. Russell, C.B., is under orders to proceed to Cairo. This officer served during the recent campaign, and is not long home from Egypt. Captain J. H. Spurgin, 21st Royal Scots Fusiliers, having ceased to act as Aide-de-Camp to the General Officer commanding 1st Brigade, will shortly rejoin his regiment, on completion, of a course of garrison instruction. Brigade-Surgeon R. W. Carter, having arrived at the Camp, has taken up the duties of Sanitary Officer of the Division, vice Surgeon-General Ekin, C.B. Major Dolphin, R.A., has been ordered to Spike Island, for duty. Captain Tillotson, R.A., will shortly arrive here for duty. Major A. R. Puzey and Lieutenant J. E. Blackburn, R.E., on arrival from Egypt, will be posted to Aldershot. Vet.-Surgeon W. Gladstone has been ordered to Aldershot for duty. H and P Batteries, 4th Brigade, R.A., will proceed to Shoeburyness early next week for annual target practice. General Officers commanding brigades and officers commanding separate corps have been authorised to grant leave of absence, at their discretion, to a certain number of officers under their command, to enable them to attend the Derby and regimental dinners.

Major-Gen. Sir F. Goldsmid, K.C.S.I., C.B., who recently retired from the post of Commissioner of the Daira Sanieh, has returned to England.

SHORT-SERVICE ENLISTMENT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—In your paper of March 24, referring to my recent pamphlet on "Short-service Enlistment," you have used the following words:—"There is another statement of Gen. MacDougall's which calls for remark. He observes that the general result, as shown by the Inspector-General of Recruiting, is that during 1881 rather more than half of the recruits raised within the territorial districts were for the Territorial regiments, and the proportion has increased yearly." Respecting this statement of mine, you proceed, —"Has it? Then how will he account for the particulars which he will find in the General Annual Return for 1882, under the head of 'Recruits raised in Regimental Districts and Sub-Districts during 1881,' which give the numbers as follows:—Total obtained for the Army (in infantry regimental districts), 18,227; total enlisted for regiment or brigade, 5,506. These figures show conclusively that not a third of the men obtained passed into the service in the several regimental districts and for the local brigades. We should like to hear Gen. MacDougall's explanation of his statement that more than half of the men are passed into the local regiments, 'and the number has increased yearly.' We simply quote a few passages from Gen. MacDougall's pamphlet to show what his statements are worth, and guard the uninitiated against being led by such rash assertions." The explanation you have expressed a desire to hear, I now supply. In the report of the Inspector-General of Recruiting, the ultimate authority in this matter, dated March, 1882, you will find the following, being the fifth paragraph on the first page:—"The return annexed, Appendix A, shows the number of recruits raised last year in each regimental district, specifying those appointed to the territorial regiments and those appointed to other corps. Including the men raised in the London and Dublin districts, there were 17,747 recruits enlisted in the purely regimental districts, of which 9,029, or 51 per cent., were appointed to their territorial regiments." And that the per-centage has increased yearly, is shown by the reports of the Inspector-General of Recruiting, dated February, 1881, March, 1882, and March, 1883, which give the per-centage for the last four years as 34, 45, 51, and 56·8 respectively. The discrepancy between the figures of the "General Annual Return" and of the Inspector-General of Recruiting is susceptible of an easy, indeed an obvious explanation, which doubtless that officer would have given, had you applied to him. There is one other paragraph in your article so unusual in tone as to call for remark. You observe,—"It is the one consoling reflection at the present time, to those who wish to see the Army of Great Britain rise again from the ashes to which it has been reduced, that throughout the great struggle that has taken place over the vexed question of long versus short service, the regimental officers and a few men like Sir Lintorn Simmons have remained loyal to themselves and the service." The italics are mine, the deduction to be drawn by the "uninitiated" being apparently that those who have advocated short service have not "remained loyal to themselves and the service." In this matter, however, I fear Sir Lintorn Simmons must be bracketed with the faithless and disloyal, since he has consistently advocated a considerably shorter period of service with the colours than even six years, as set forth in the Report of Lord Airey's Committee, which you have quoted in support of your views. I request you will do me the favour of publishing these remarks, which seem to show that rashness of assertion is not exclusively an attribute of "Gen. Macdougall."—I am, &c.,

RETIRED QUARTERMASTERS AND RIDING-MASTERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—You have so successfully called attention to the grievances of different bodies of officers in time past, that I venture to ask you to insert the following few lines. The Quartermasters and Ridingmasters who retired in fullness of time from the service before July 1, 1881, were only granted the honorary rank of Captain. Now-a-days, officers who fill those very important appointments very justly receive promotion on retirement to the honorary rank of Major. Do you not think it would be a very graceful act of the authorities, who are anxious to be just to all, if they called to mind the old soldiers who helped to win the Crimean War and save us from disaster in the Indian Mutiny, &c.? If the rank of Major were granted to those who retired before the fortunate July 1, 1881, it would cost nothing, and be highly appreciated.—I am, &c.,

FUSILIER.

[We quite agree with our correspondent's suggestion. Quartermasters and Ridingmasters are a most deserving body of old soldiers, and any steps taken by the Secretary of State for War to mark his sense of their services to the state would be highly approved of by the Army. Our correspondent is in no way interested himself; he simply pleads the cause of a body of men who ought not to be overlooked because they are friendless. That the higher honorary rank will eventually be given, we have no doubt. Why, therefore, not grant the concession at once?—ED. A. & N. G.]

We (Times of India) hear that an officer from England will succeed Brigdr.-Gen. Hughes in the command of the Calcutta district.

NAVAL EDUCATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—No doubt there may be a great deal to be said on both sides about the education of our junior Naval officers, but there seems to be very little thought about their education in seamanship. At the end of four years' service as midshipman, and when he has attained the age of 19, he is eligible to pass for lieutenant, his first examination is in seamanship. If he has been in a corvette or sailing-ship, doubtless he will pass well, but if he has been in an iron-clad, his knowledge of practical seamanship amounts to almost nothing; but, nevertheless, he has to pass the same examination as a midshipman who has been in a corvette. Of course, one would suppose that, that being the case, midshipmen would try and get in corvettes for part of their time, and I believe the greater number of them do. But in some cases they are not able to. For instance, I know of a case of a midshipman who will shortly be eligible to pass for lieutenant, and who for a year and a half has been trying to get a sailing-ship, all his applications being forwarded with very favourable comment by his captains, and he has not got a sailing-ship yet. Doubtless, when he tries to pass in seamanship he will fail, on account of having had no opportunity for practically learning it. Surely the Admiralty might send more midshipmen to corvettes, to give them a chance of passing, or do something.—I am, &c.,

OBSERVER.

THE BESTOWAL OF DECORATIONS IN THE NAVY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—I have read with much interest your article of the 12th inst. on the bestowal of decorations by the Admiralty, supplementing, as it does, a leading article which appeared in the Army and Navy Gazette about the end of 1873. The War Office admit the Medical, Ordnance, and Commissariat Departments to a fair participation in the decorations bestowed for a campaign, as if they had some claims in common with the Army, but exclude the Army Pay Department from sharing in the distribution of honours. The Admiralty have had their hands forced by the Naval medical officers, but the Navigating officers, Paymasters, and Engineers, having no one to represent them at Whitehall, are treated with high-handed indifference and neglect, as if they had no claim in common with the Navy.—I am, &c.,

JUSTICIA.

The members of the Navy Club dined together at Willis's Rooms, King Street, St. James's, on Tuesday evening. Admiral the Hon. J. W. Spencer presided, and Gen. Dowie, R.A., was the guest.

The keel of a new unarmoured composite sloop, to be named the Pylades, has been laid down upon the building-slip at Sheerness Dockyard. The vessel will be of a similar description to the Caroline, which was recently launched from the slip. She will carry 12 guns (80-cwt. breech-loading rifled guns, mounted on Vavasseur carriages), together with five Nordenfelt machine-guns. Her principal dimensions are as follows:—Length between perpendiculars, 200 ft.; breadth (extreme), 38 ft.; breadth (moulded), 37 ft.; draught of water—forward, 12 ft. 9 in.; aft, 15 ft. 9 in.; displacement in tons, 1,420. Her engines will be of 1,000 indicated horse-power, and the total cost of the vessel is estimated at £75,000.

The Controller of the Navy, Rear-Admiral T. Brandreth, visited Chatham Dockyard last week, and made an inspection of the Conqueror, which will shortly be ready for commission. Other vessels in various stages of completion were also visited by the Controller.

Vice-Admiral E. B. Rice, C.B., Commander-in-Chief at the Nore, has been engaged in the inspection of the vessels-of-war attached to the Chatham Steam Reserve and the armour-plated ships preparing for sea. On Thursday he arrived at Chatham in the Wildfire, and proceeded to the extension works, where he inspected the Ajax, which is waiting the order for being commissioned, and the Conqueror, which is waiting to receive the 43-ton guns with which she is to be armed. Before leaving Chatham Dockyard, Vice-Admiral Rice inspected the entrance works at the large steam basin, which will shortly be ready for opening.

The centenary of the Danish naval hero, Peter Wilmoes, was everywhere celebrated throughout Denmark last Monday. It was Wilmoes who, at the battle of Copenhagen, on April 2, 1801, placed his small prame so close under Nelson's flagship that he nearly destroyed it; and when Nelson, a few days later, attended a banquet at the Palace, he asked that Wilmoes should be presented to him, when he embraced him as a brother, and turning to the Crown Prince, delicately intimated that he ought to be made an admiral, to which the Crown Prince replied, "If, my lord, I were to make all my brave officers admirals, I should have no captains or lieutenants in my service." A few years afterwards Wilmoes was killed in the gallant fight between the Danish man-of-war Prince Christian and three English frigates.

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL.—ITS UNEQUALLED EFFICACY IN CONSUMPTION AND WASTING DISEASES.—Dr. Hardwicke, Coroner for Central Middlesex, writes:—"I have great pleasure in adding my testimony to the already well-recognised virtues of Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil, having prescribed it many years, and being satisfied that it is a pure oil, very palatable, and more easily digested than the Pale Oils. It possesses medicinal properties which also render it more efficacious than other kinds of fatty oils. In the class of tubercular diseases, including consumption, so prevalent in our great centres of population, the use of Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil is attended with manifold advantages; and I know of no therapeutic agent which, in connection with judicious sanitary measures, is better calculated to stay the ravages of these great consuming plagues of the British Islands. The iodine, bromine, and phosphorus in Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Oil are undoubtedly efficacious, and being naturally combined with the most assimilated fatty substances, make it act both as food and medicine for many invalids who take it periodically with great benefit to health." Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil is sold only in capsuled imperial half-pints, 2s 6d; pints, 4s 9d; quarts, 9s with his stamp and signature and the signature of his sole Consignees on the capsule and the label under wrapper, by all chemists. Sole Consignees, Ansar, Harford, and Co., 77 Strand, London.

Reviews.

Through Siberia. By Henry Lansdell, D.D. (Sampson Low and Co.)—Although we noticed Mr. Lansdell's Through Siberia when it first appeared, the subject is one of such interest and importance as to render it unnecessary to offer any excuse for returning to it in its form of a "fourth edition." The author's speciality in Siberia was the visitation of its prisons and penal institutions, considered, however, not so much from an economic or administrative, as from a philanthropic and religious, point of view. In the early edition, the author claimed to be the first foreigner ever allowed to go through the Siberian prisons and mines. In the preface to the second edition, he refers to a statement made by a contemporary that official orders were sent before him to the prisons to make things wear a favourable aspect for his visit. Mr. Lansdell deals with this statement in the only manner open to him,—namely, an explicit denial, accompanied by an offer to discuss the question in the public press, provided only that his opponent gives facts, dates, names, and places, and does not hide behind general statements and impersonalities. A perusal of this work is not likely to lead the reader to an impression that the author has written "with a bias," nor would it be easy to find any reason why this should be supposed to be the case, as he states:—"I had no reason to be other than impartial. Of politics, I know nothing, and so was not prejudiced in this direction; nor had I anything to gain by withholding or to fear from telling the whole of the truth. I did not travel as the agent or representative of any religious body. I could not, of course, see matters as a prisoner would, but I wish to state that, having visited prisons in nearly every country in Europe, I have given here an unprejudiced statement of what I saw and heard in the prisons and mines of Siberia." The fourth edition of Through Siberia is bound in one volume, and printed on thinner paper, with some fewer illustrations. In other respects, there is no difference which requires any notice, except, indeed, the very material one, that the price of this remarkably interesting book has been reduced so much as to bring it within the scope of all readers.

The contents of the May number of Blackwood are varied and interesting. If we were to exercise the privilege of selection from the various articles which make up the number, we should name, with one exception, "The Ladies Lindores," which, in almost every respect, is equal to any of Mrs. Oliphant's previous works. It is a powerfully-written tale, and although there may be some readers who will quarrel with its surprising sequel, it cannot fail to please all who delight in such masterly sketches of character as those of the conscientious "Rolls," his admiring sister Bauby, and "Miss Barbara." The other characters are handled with skill, quite sufficient to compensate for trifling shortcomings which seem to be inherent to every work of fiction. The second part of "The Millionaire" fully justifies the expectation that we are commencing another story of fiction which will reach that high standard of excellence with which the readers of this periodical have long since become so familiar. "Spiritualists" and many others will be attracted by "Unfathomed Mysteries," in which some very strange experiences are detailed by a writer "whose good-faith is unimpeachable, whose powers of observation are of a very high order, and who most positively affirms that every detail therein related is accurately described, without any exaggeration." The great attraction, however, of the present number of Blackwood is the article on the letters of Mrs. Carlyle, recently published by Mr. Froude. It would be as difficult to overrate the interesting nature of these letters as it would be to overestimate their literary quality. The writer in Blackwood pronounces them to be "instinct with life and passion, brilliantly direct, bitterly contemptuous, the scorn and the pathos alike original and unborrowed, while there is not an alien or artificial note in one of them, every word coming straight from the heart." The usual political article is entitled "May-day Politics."

The present number of Cornhill contains a carefully prepared sketch of six years' residence in the backwoods of Canada. It is replete with interest, and full of useful suggestions.

The Times of India says:—"In addition to the reliefs for 1883-84, published a short time since, the following movements are directed to take place:—A battery Royal Artillery, from England to Dinapore; 8th Mountain Baty., Eastern Division, from Khyra Gully to Aden; a garrison battery, from England to Fort William; 8th Baty. Garrison Artillery, from Aden to England. The 7th Garrison Baty., London Division, will move from Fort William to Aden, and not from Agra to Aden, as was stated. The 8th Baty., Scottish Division, will move from Aden to England. No battery will move from England to Agra. A regiment of British infantry will be transferred from England to the Madras Presidency, and a squadron of the 6th Bengal Cavalry will move from Calcutta to Segowlie, changing places with another squadron of the same regiment. In most cases, the reliefs in India will be made by route march. The H Baty. 1st Brig., R.A., from Jullundur to England will be railed to Bombay from Allahabad, and the battery from England to Dinapore will rail from Bombay to Allahabad. The 9th Mountain Baty., from Bombay to Rawul Pindee, will be railed from Bombay to Allahabad, and the 5th Garrison Baty., Lancashire Division, from Lahore to Gwalior, will travel by rail. The 8th Baty., London Division, from Delhi to Burmah, and the 9th Baty., Eastern Division, from Tonghoo to Delhi, will travel by river, sea, and rail. The 2nd Batn. North Lancashire Regt., from Allahabad to England, will be railed to Bombay, and the regiment from England to Rawul Pindee and Murree Hills will travel by rail from Bombay. The five companies of the Sappers and Miners from Roorkee to the Bolan Pass will be conveyed by rail. The heavy stores of all corps will, as far as practicable, be sent by rail; also the sick and families of British troops moving by route march."

ARMY NOTES.

Lieut.-Gen. Sir Archibald Alison left Egypt on Saturday in H.M.S. Jumna. Major-Gen. Earle will take command of the Army of Occupation pending the arrival of Lieut.-Gen. Stephenson.

The Bombay Gazette says:—"Among the officers who went home in the Serapis the other day, were about a dozen captains and lieutenants belonging to the Indian Staff Corps. It is, no doubt, a great boon to subalterns, and to captains also, to get a passage home by a trooper, but we cannot see any good reason why this privilege should not be extended to field officers of the Indian Army as well. The theory in regard to field officers seems to be that because a lieutenant-colonel or a major has reached a certain rank and draws a certain amount of pay, he should therefore be made to pay his passage by P. and O., if he wants to go home, and should not be allowed to travel by a troopship at a comparatively cheap rate. But this reasoning cannot be held to count for much. As an officer rises in the service, he frequently finds his expenses more than keep pace with his income, and the cost of the passage to England often prevents him going home. We think that subalterns of the Indian Staff Corps have the first claim to a passage by a troopship; then captains; and then, if there be still vacancies, we cannot see why field officers of the Staff Corps should not be allowed to fill them up. To refuse an officer a passage by a troopship simply because he is a field officer appears unreasonable."

Military readers will have been surprised to see a recent announcement to the effect that Col. Sir O. V. Tanner is coming out at once to take the command of the Quetta District, as Gen. Edwardes's term of office has not expired. Our Simla correspondent, in reporting the appointment to us, omitted to mention that it is only temporary. We now learn that Gen. Edwardes goes to England on medical certificate, and that Sir Oriel Tanner has been nominated to act during the former's absence. This will, of course, give Col. Tanner an additional claim for the next vacant brigade in the Bombay Presidency, and the chances of his returning to the command of his old regiment, the 2nd Beloochees, are, we should imagine, very remote. Gen. Edwardes, we hear, was to leave Quetta on Sunday, en route for Bombay, to catch the steamer on the 4th prox.

The names of the under-mentioned officers of the Indian Staff Corps have been placed on the Indian Gradation List as specified, viz.:—Major-Gen. C. T. Aitchison, C.B., Bombay, is placed on the list of lieut.-gens.; and Col. R. H. Keatinge, C.S.I., V.C., Bombay, is placed on the list of major-gens., in consequence of the transfer to the Unemployed Supernumerary List of Lieut.-Gen. J. G. Halliday, Madras Infantry, on Jan. 8, 1883. Col. J. Doran, C.B., Bengal, is placed on the list of major-gens.; Major C. A. Baylay, Bengal, is placed on the list of lieut.-cols., in consequence of the death of Major-Gen. C. R. Stainforth, Madras Cavalry, on Feb. 4, 1883.

The London correspondent of the Western Morning News says:—"Our two Egyptian heroes ought to thank the foes of hereditary pensions for doing them a service. Both of them are to be paid for what they did in Egypt a lump sum down, not only on behalf of their own pensions, but the pensions which might be bestowed on heirs male of their body lawfully begotten, who are never likely to have any existence. They get that and something over. Lord Alcester gets £25,000, Lord Wolseley £30,000. Either of them can go and buy a pension for the two lives out of the grant as intended in the original bill, and may then put a thousand pounds into his own pocket as a symbol of the liberal spirit of the Advanced Liberals. There is nothing like having a principle; their lordships, perhaps, think that there is nothing like having the principle."

"Hope" writes:—"There are gentlemen's sons serving in the ranks fully qualified for commissions, whose families have served the country for centuries in the highest capacity, both military and political, looking forward with keen expectation to the Queen's Birthday Gazette. Will they be remembered?"

Brigdr.-Gen. R. J. Hughes, C.B., half-pay, late 63rd Foot, has vacated the command of the troops stationed in the Calcutta Presidency district, and has been succeeded by Brigd.r-Gen. H. C. Wilkinson, C.B., half-pay, late 16th Lancers. The command of the Saugor district, which has fallen vacant by Brig.-Gen. Wilkinson's transfer, has been conferred on Brig.-Gen. A. H. Murray.

A correspondent writes:—"Noticing a paragraph in your paper which requires correction, I venture to send you these lines:—Section 94 of the Army Act has been altered by the Army (Annual) Act, 1883. An officer if authorised under regulations of a Secretary of State, is now allowed to attest recruits, being deemed to be a justice of peace for enlistment. Sub-section 2 of Section 94 is cancelled."

The Queen has approved of Saturday, the 26th inst., being kept by the troops in all commands of England, Ireland, and Scotland, as her Majesty's birthday, instead of the 24th, as originally notified in the Gazette. The troops in the latter command will assist at the opening ceremonial of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland at Edinburgh on that date.

An "Ex-Australian Minister" writes:—"England has ships in armour, railway trains in armour, ships with rams to ram the enemy—as in ancient times—and why not men in armour? Read the account in the Melbourne and Sydney papers of about August, 1880, of the engagement between the Victorian Police and the Kelly gang, and also examine the illustrated journals of those two towns; and there you will see depicted the nature of the armour worn by Ned Kelly, the notorious scoundrel who led the gang of brigands that took his name. This man came out in the open and stood for some time single-handed the fire of all the police, some 30 or 40, the bullets glancing from his armour in all directions, and it was not till it was discovered that the armour did not protect him below his knees, that they could by hitting him in the foot bring him down. Now this armour was made out of portions of ploughs, was exceedingly heavy and clumsy, but seeing how effectual it was to protect this man, could not armour-clad men be used in the British Army for some special services. I am not a military man, but I might suggest where I think they could be used. Say where two armies were in an entrenched position, and one sent out a party to make rifle pits, as soon as the men took possession of the pits and the covering party retired, then the armour-clad men from opposing army to advance and clear out the rifle pits of the occupants, &c. But I leave the idea in your hands, better qualified to judge if there is anything in it than mine."

Her Majesty the Queen has conferred the decoration of the "Albert Medal of the Second Class" upon Mr. Henry Hood, coxswain of the lifeboat belonging to the Royal National Lifeboat Institution, stationed at Seaton Carew, for his gallantry in saving life on the occasion of the wreck of the Norwegian schooner Atlas, on the Long Scar Rocks, on March 11 last.

"Khaki" writes:—"Now that the destroying hand of this Radical Government is going to sweep away our national scarlet, it would be as well to suggest, in the hope of staying it, that a light brown or grey cotton drill jumper, to be worn over the red coat would both render it invisible and preserve it from wear, besides providing a thin coat for wear in a hot climate. This plan was adopted with great success by many corps in Afghanistan. Another consideration is that the absence of a scarlet coat, which might be shown at a critical moment, would cause great confusion in a war against grey-coated Russians and the like."

The distribution of the medal for the late operations in Egypt is now completed. The number of medals issued has been 44,000, and the whole of these, amounting to a ton and a half of silver, have been engraved with the names of the recipients by the Arsenal workmen at Woolwich, and sent from thence to all parts of the world. Not only has every officer and man engaged in Egypt received his medal, but the same honour has been bestowed upon the captains of all the merchant ships employed as transports during the prevalence of hostilities, and many others who assisted during the campaign, though not actually belonging to the services, have been in like manner rewarded. The soldiers and sailors still remaining in Egypt, as well as those sent to other stations since the war terminated, have all been presented with their medals; every man of the Reserve Forces, now disbanded, has had his medal sent to his place of residence, and in numerous instances the claims of relatives of deceased men have been satisfied, though some of these are still under consideration, and more are yet expected. To meet such cases as these, about 2,000, unengraved, are kept in the Ordnance Store Department, at Woolwich Dockyard. The medals were supplied by the Mint, but were partly made under contract by a firm at Birmingham, and the distribution has been superintended directly by Lord Wolseley. The preparation and issues at Woolwich have been carried out by Mr. W. Musquin, conductor of stores, under the orders of Comy. Le Geyt, and it is worthy of note that of the whole 44,000, not a medal has been lost nor a mistake made.

"Company Commander" writes:—"It was to be expected that the late Regimental Instructors of Musketry would feel aggrieved at their abolition under G.O. 51-53 of 1883. Many of them may have had an inner consciousness that their appointments were out of date, for it has been for some time obvious that any centralised system of instruction is incompatible with the short-service system. It is not through any reasons of economy that their fall has been brought about, but by a desire to improve the shooting efficiency of 'Tommy Atkins.' This, the authorities think, can be done by abolishing musketry as a separate department, and intrusting this all-important duty to the company officers. In this, I believe, the authorities are right; there will be a quickening of zeal all round, and the shooting will improve. The old system of placing the musketry training of a battalion under the charge of a staff subaltern had the distinct effect of stifling all energy on the part of the company officers, who, as they were not permitted to take any part in the instruction of their men, were mere non-entities in the matter. Our thanks are due to the late Musketry Instructors and their staffs, who have for more than a quarter of a century so honestly superintended the shooting of our companies and battalions; but we hail with gratitude the G.O. 51-53 of 1883, conferring upon us more responsibility and a more honourable rôle. It is fervently to be hoped that, in taking their departure, the old musketry staff will carry with them many needlessly complicated musketry returns, and that the new system will bring with it forms of a much simpler character."

The following movements of troops from Egypt have been officially notified, viz.:—38th Regt., from Egypt to Malta, and the 49th Regt., from Egypt to Gibraltar, left on May 12. By the withdrawal of these two battalions, the force under Sir A. Alison's command is now reduced to one regiment of cavalry, five batteries of artillery, two companies of engineers, two companies of Commissariat and Transport, one company of the Ordnance Store Corps, and six and a half battalions of infantry.

A correspondent sends us particulars of his case as a warning to others. He says:—"I was retired as a captain, on account of age, on Dec. 29, 1882. My regiment left a hill station on Nov. 15, 1882, to march to a plains one, arriving there Jan. 18, 1883. By advice, I applied for leave pending retirement, and I sent in a special application for passage in the troopship sailing Dec. 28. Of the latter no notice was taken. The order for my retirement having arrived, I was told I might leave the hill station, and I started for Bombay Dec. 19, 1882. The regimental paymaster had paid me up to Nov. 30, 1882. On arrival at Bombay, I was given a passage in the Serapis, sailing Jan. 18. The district paymaster, Bombay, sent in claims for me, which were disallowed by the inspector of accounts at Poona, and I was paid Rs.321 and a few annas. This included some detention allowance up to Jan. 16, and pay at the English rate from Dec. 1 to Dec. 28. The Serapis was delayed till Jan. 22, to take in some more men. We were not allowed to go on board till the 21st. My application for some more detention allowance was refused. I need hardly say I was considerably out of pocket."

THE COAST DEFENCES OF RUSSIA.

A lecture was recently given at the Marine Assembly Rooms, at Cronstadt, on the Coast Defences of Russia, by Major-Gen. Boriskoff, from which we extract the following interesting data:—"Russia has no easy task to defend her littoral, possessing, as her empire does, a coast line of over 20,000 miles. For her to put this coast line in the same condition of defence as that of Great Britain, she would need 2,000 powerfully fortified points,—or, in other words, 2,000 Portsmouths; the construction of which would occasion an outlay of 20,000,000,000 roubles, or £2,000,000,000, and require, reckoning a garrison of 2,000 men to each, a total force of five million troops to man them. It is physically impossible, therefore, for Russia to defend the whole of such an extensive coast line, and all she does in consequence is to protect those points which lead to such centres at St. Petersburg, Moscow, Kieff, &c. Luckily for her, King Frost does what she cannot do for at least half the year, and effectually prevents foreign navies from meddling with her shores. It is difficult to forecast which part of the Russian coast would experience attack in the event of another war. In 1854, our enemies selected the Black Sea, the Baltic, and the North Pacific; in all probability they would again become the theatre of operations. The Baltic is not well adapted for the enemy's attack, its coasts being difficult of access. In it we have only four defensive points,—Cronstadt, Wiborg, Sveaborg, and Dünamund. The importance of Cronstadt is well known; it prevents an enemy reaching St. Petersburg, and restrains his movements till the winter. A great, living writer has said that the modern idea of establishing outlying forts to defend a fortress ought, by rights, to be ascribed to Peter the Great, who fortified Cronstadt to protect St. Petersburg, and made it the forerunner in this respect of Portsmouth. Recently German artillerists have agreed that although a gun may penetrate 10½ kilomètres, it does very little damage after 6 or 7. Furnished, as Cronstadt is, with outlying forts, and having its channels artificially narrowed and placed under their immediate control, the place may be accepted as impregnable to an enemy's fleet. At present a commission is sitting to draw up a plan of torpedo defences for these channels in time of war, and there is reason to believe that its recommendations will result in a carefully devised scheme for blocking them effectually in a single day. Wiborg is defended by forts, which guard the channel to the town, and further, is well protected with torpedo appliances. The splendid roadstead of Sveaborg, so well adapted to operate against the enemy's flank and rear, is well defended with forts and torpedoes. Dünamund has, in excess of these, a 16-foot bar, which does not allow men-of-war to approach nearer than 1,200 yards. The stationary torpedoes, divided into three groups, still further increase this distance. In the Black Sea we have six fortified points, Odessa, Otchakoff, Sebastopol, Kertch, Poti, and Batoum. Until a decision is arrived at as to the powerful fortresses to be erected at Odessa, the defence of the place must be effected with torpedoes. The coast here is well adapted for torpedo operations against the enemy, and further, Odessa being an open port, is guaranteed against a bombardment. Otchakoff serves as the forepost of Nicolaeff, and protects the estuary of the Dnieper; it is protected by three groups of mines. Sebastopol is rapidly rising from its ashes, and, there is every reason to believe, will early recover its former significance. The entrance to the harbour is defended by torpedoes, and the place further contains stores of mines for the defence of the neighbouring harbours. Kertch is an extremely powerful fortress, and is admirably protected with mines. Poti is intended to guard the mouth of the Rion, which is navigable for 40 miles, and further protects the Black Sea outlet of the Transcaucasian Railway. It is not well adapted for torpedo defence, and a special kind of mine has to be made exclusively for it and Batoum. At Batoum the depth of the water is an impediment, and we are, besides, bound by treaty not to erect forts about the place. In the defence of all these points in the Baltic and Black Sea, from two to four lines of submarine mines are employed. The first line runs at a distance of about two miles from the forts, the second line 120 to 240 yards further out, and the third and fourth at intervals of the same distance. Galvanic batteries are used, and the mines consist of from 200 to 2,100 lb. of gunpowder, or 90 lb. of pyroxoline. On an average, fifteen mines are attached to one wire; even wealthy England only gives one wire to seven mines, and in America one wire to twenty-one is the custom." Describing the Lay torpedo, the lecturer spoke of it as being superior in many respects to the Whitehead torpedo. He then dwelt upon the panic which Russian torpedoes had produced in 1878 on the part of the ironclad fleets of Europe, and noting the immense progress England had made in torpedo warfare of late, expressed a hope that Russia would not be left behind in the race.

The Rev. A. Malim, Chaplain to the Forces, writes from Aldershot:—"A meeting is to be held at 19 Delahay Street, Westminster, on Tuesday, the 22nd inst., at 3 p.m. when the Right Rev. Bishop Piers Claughton will take the chair, for the purpose of forming an Army Missionary Association, the objects of which are to assist the general work of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts,—(1), by systematic prayer and almsgiving; (2), by circulating, where practicable, the Society's periodicals; (3), by making known to others the work of the Society, and urging them to take their share in it. Doubtless there are many earnest Churchmen in the Army who will be willing to take their part in this good work. All such are invited to be present at the meeting. Should there be any who, though wishing to attend, are prevented doing so, I should be very glad if they will kindly send me a letter, to say that they will give their hearty support and co-operation to the work we are taking in hand."

"SAPO CARBONIS DETERGENS" is a physician's name for a remedy prescribed for the past quarter of a century for every variety of skin disease. The public have found that as a preventive of small-pox, scarlet fever, and measles, it is unequalled. See that the Latin name described above, and the words "WRIGHT, SOUTHWARK," are on each wrapper, and branded on each tablet, without which none is genuine.

Obituary.

Lieut.-Col. McArthur, R.M.A., died at his residence at Southsea on Friday last. The deceased officer entered the service as second lieutenant on Sept. 20, 1847, and retired, after having acted as paymaster to the division at Eastney, in 1870. He took part in the attack and destruction of the piratical stockades at Lagos, Western Africa, in December, 1851, and was also present at the bombardment of Odessa in 1854. After being employed in making observations on the coast of Georgia, he participated in the batteries which resulted in the expulsion of the Russian garrison from Redoubt Kaleh on May 19. His war services also include the shelling of the Russian camp in the Bay of Katcha during the landing of the allied armies, the combined attack on the outer forts and works of Sebastopol, the blockade of the port during the siege (medal with clasp, fifth class of the Medjidie, and Turkish medal), the expedition up the Gambia, including the storming and capture of Saba, and the bombardment and destruction of Porto Novo, near Lagos, in 1861.

The death is announced of Lieut.-Col. C. B. Roche, for many years paymaster at the Cavalry Depôt at Canterbury. Col. Roche, who was 78 years of age, began his military career as a 1st-class volunteer in the Sherwood Foresters, afterwards joining the Regular Army. He was one of the three officers who had charge of the military detachment sent to Bosenden Wood, near Canterbury, in the year 1839, to disperse the followers of the impostor William Courtenay. The three were Lieut. Bennett (whom Courtenay shot), Ensign Roche, and Ensign Crawley, who afterwards became Gen. Crawley, and died about six months ago. When the struggle in Bosenden Wood was over, Ensign Roche was left in command of the soldiers who mounted guard over Courtenay's body. He afterwards served with the English Army in America and in the Crimea. He was in India at the time of the Mutiny, and was present at the relief of Lucknow.

Capt. John Liebenrood, R.N., died at his residence, Prospect Hill Park, near Reading, on May 11, aged 70. The deceased officer was the eldest son of Admiral John Hyet Hancock, C.B., and assumed the name of Liebenrood by Royal sign-manual in 1865. He entered the Navy in 1827, and served in the Druid during the Chinese War, 1840-1841; was favourably mentioned in despatches for the capture of a Chinese battery and the destruction of war junks at Macoa; he was present also at the capture of the Bogue forts and subsequent operations in the advance upon Canton, for which the China medal was awarded. He subsequently served upon the Gulf of St. Lawrence survey, from 1845 to 1862. In 1847 he married Eliza, eldest daughter of Mr. Lemuel Cambridge, and leaves issue five sons and two daughters.

The Berlin newspapers publish the following interesting notice concerning Count Moltke, who is now in his 83rd year:—"On Ascension Day Field-Marshal Count von Moltke entered upon a lengthy leave of absence. Accompanied by his adjutant, Captain von Moltke, of the Grand General Staff, he will first visit Switzerland, and then go to reside on his Silesian estate. Count von Moltke, according to his own statement, is in excellent health, having now completely recovered from his late slight illness, which has not at all interfered with his usual habits. The Field-Marshal gets up every morning very early, takes a cold bath, and then sits down to work till the arrival of the morning papers, which he carefully reads, smoking a cigar the while, and then returns to his desk. It is a curious coincidence that for the last four years the Field-Marshal has always begun his furlough on Ascension Day."

"Time Tries all Things."—Of the numerous preparations announced for promoting the growth of the hair few survive, even in name beyond a limited period, whilst Rowland's Macassar Oil, with an unparalleled reputation of more than 80 years, is still considered by the public to be the best and safest preserver and beautifier of the hair ever yet produced. They who prefer it can now have the oil of a golden colour, without in any way losing its beneficial effects. Sold everywhere. Sizes, 3s 6d, 7s, 10s 6d, and 21s.

Amusements.

Whitsuntide is not now remarkable for theatrical activity, and this year the novelties produced have no claim to be commemorated in the dramatic calendar. A large influx of provincial visitors encourages metropolitan managers at this season to prolong the run of pieces already well established in public favour, and strangers in town naturally select those places of amusement proving most capable of attracting public patronage for the longest period.

At the Royal Italian Opera, Covent Garden, Madame Sembrich reappeared on Saturday night, after an absence of two years, in her famous impersonation of Lucia di Lammermoor, in Donizetti's opera of that name. On Tuesday evening, Madame Pauline Lucca, in "Il Trovatore," represented with marked success the heroine, Leonora, for the first time on the English stage. Verdi's opera of "Aida" on Thursday, "L'Africaine" on Friday, and "Rigoletto" for this evening (Saturday), when Madame Albani makes her first appearance this season, should secure for all lovers of musical art adequate gratification.

At Her Majesty's Theatre the brilliant operatic spectacle of "A Trip to the Moon," with its effective choregraphic episode of "The Snow Ballet," proved attractive. "Youth," at Drury Lane, has drawn large assemblages. Mr. Henry Irving has considerately reproduced "The Bells" for Saturday night audiences, to the delight of all wishing to see this esteemed actor once more in the impersonation first giving him a distinctive position on the Lyceum stage. "The Silver King" has triumphantly passed its 150th representation at the Princess's. Mr. Herman Merivale's version of "Fédora" will continue its career at the Haymarket till the close of the season. The Adelphi is prospering with Mr. Robert Buchanan's drama of "Storm-Beaten," though it is understood Mr. Edgar Bruce will occupy the theatre in June, when Mr. Wilkie Collins's new play will be produced. At the Olympic Miss Geneviève Ward repeated Mr. Grundy's drama of "Rachel," which is likely to accompany this accomplished actress to the Antipodes. "Lady Clare" at the Globe and "The Danischeffs" at the Court Theatre satisfied playgoers in need of emotional excitement. Laughter-lovers sought Mr. F. C. Burnand's merry burlesque of "Bluebeard" at the Gaiety. The comic opera of "Cymbia" is, with this week, withdrawn from the Strand, to make way for the reappearance of that mirthful comedian, Mr. John S. Clarke. At the Vaudeville, the comedy of "The Rivals" has attained the longest consecutive run on record. The comic opera of "Lurette" has passed its 50th representation at the Avenue. "Rip Van Winkle" is on the verge of its 200th night at the Comedy Theatre. The Royalty, rebuilt and refashioned, has found a substantial success in "The Merry Duchess;" and "Iolanthe" at the Savoy, "Artful Cards" at Toole's Theatre, and "The Colonel" at the afternoon performances of the Imperial, received abundant patronage.

It is pleasant to record that the benefit for the disabled actor, Mr. Edward Royce, given under the personal patronage of the Prince of Wales at the Gaiety on Tuesday afternoon, will realise, with the subscriptions, about £1,300.

We understand that "The Queen's Favourite," a translation of Scribe's comedy, "Un Verre d'Eau," is in preparation, and will shortly be produced by Miss Genevieve Ward, in which she will play the imperious Sarah Churchill, Duchess of Marlborough; and Mr. W. H. Vernon, Bolingbroke, a part particularly suited to his style. This will be the last piece given under Miss Ward's present management at the Olympic.

"D. S.," Author of "Eighteen Months' Imprisonment," writes:—"You are in error, in your otherwise impartial criticism, in imputing anything like a desire on my part to pose as a martyr. If you will refer to my book you will find that I distinctly state that I am equally indifferent to abuse or patronage, and absolutely impervious to criticism. As a constant reader of your paper, I trust you will, in fairness to me, insert this; and if any proof is required of my identity, or my writing, you may receive it by inquiry at my publishers."

The Allahabad Pioneer hears, "on very good authority," that his Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught will be posted on duty to India during the current year. The Meerut Division, it is expected, will probably be entrusted to his charge for a time.

"A" writes:—"Among the advertisements of regimental dinners in your last number appears one headed 'The old 53rd Light Infantry.' Pray, Sir, what regiment is that?"

SPECTACLES v. BLINDNESS.—"Spectacles can only be perfectly adjusted by those having a thorough knowledge of the anatomy of the eye, combined with optical experience."—We have the highest medical authorities confirmed by daily experience, that imperfect glasses, together with the haphazard plan of selection generally employed by the mere vendor, is the cause of most cases of blindness and defective vision. Sir Julius Benedict writes:—"I have tried the principal opticians in London without success, but the spectacles you have adapted suit admirably. The clearness of your glasses as compared with others is really surprising." The Rev. Professor W. A. Hales, M.A. Cantab., 2 Minford Gardens, West Kensington Park, writes:—"The spectacles are perfect, and a most decided boon. I had occasion on Monday to write to Lord ——, and took the opportunity to mention your name and the wonderful power of your spectacles." Dr. Bird, Chelmsford, writes:—"I could not have believed it possible that my sight could have been so much improved and relieved at my age (82). I can now read the smallest type, although suffering from cataract on the right eye." Testimonials from Earl and Countess Lindsay; F. D. Dixon Hartland, Esq., M.P.; the Venerable Archdeacon Palmer, Clifton; Rev. Mother Abbess, St. Mary's Abbey, Mill Hill, Hendon; C. J. Alford, Esq., Gas Light and Coke Company, Horseferry Road, Westminster, &c. Mr. HENRY LAURANCE, F.S.S., Oculist Optician, 39 OLD BOND STREET, W. (late 3 Endsleigh Gardens, Euston Square), personally adapts his Improved Spectacles daily (Saturdays excepted), from 10 to 5. WE have been endeavouring for some years past to open the eyes of those in authority at the War Office to the state of the Medical Services of the Army, and to induce them to institute drastic measures of reform, or rather restoration, in order to place these services in a condition which would enable them to bear the strain of active warfare. We have all along contended that the system upon which our hospital arrangements are based is faulty in the extreme, and that great limitations would have to take place in the principle of unification, before it could be made to work smoothly for the good of the Army, either in peace time or in war. It was not until the Egyptian Campaign broke out that the new organisation was put to a really practical test. That campaign, short as it was, tried the medical machinery for the first time, and the experience gained in face of the enemy was sufficient to establish the truth of all our allegations. In plain language, the whole Medical fabric collapsed. Attempts were made at the time by those immediately concerned to gull the public, who were naturally indignant; but so complete was the failure, so heartrending were the stories which reached England, that no amount of whitewashing was of any avail in removing the uncomfortable impression that our sick and wounded in Egypt were not receiving that care and attention which they ought to have done, considering the vast sum of money expended annually in maintaining the Army Medical Department. A Committee having been assembled at the War Office, under the presidency of Lord Morley, to inquire into the charges brought against the Medical officers, the report of that body has been eagerly awaited. Through the favour of a well-known official of the War Office, a summary of the report of the Committee was published in the Times on Saturday last, and it is no exaggeration to say that a more unsatisfactory document has rarely, if ever, seen the light. Not only are all the statements published on the authority of the special correspondents fully borne out, but it would seem as though matters were even worse than they were at first represented as being; that instead of drawing too gloomy a picture, the representatives of the Press, actuated, no doubt, by a desire not to wound the susceptibilities of individuals unnecessarily, had withheld many details which they might have given in support of their indictment. Among the witnesses called before the Committee was General Lord Wolseley, the Commander-in-Chief of the Expedition. His Lordship's evidence constitutes a most sweeping charge, not only against the system, but also against himself and the principal members of his Staff. Lord Wolseley does not mince matters. He tells us, in the plainest possible language, what he saw, and he makes no attempt to disguise the fact that he holds the system, the system which he, as Commander-in-Chief, was administering, wholly responsible for the discomforts which were suffered by those whose ill-luck it was to find themselves temporarily incapacitated and in need of medical advice. Referring to the hospital arrangements at Cairo, Lord Wolseley says:—

"I found very great fault indeed. I found much greater fault at Cairo than at Ismailia, because at Ismailia I made great allowances for the medical officers. I have described the Ismailia Hospital in the gloomiest possible way to you. I have not told you anything that I found was well done in it. I have only picked out the weak points in it and described what I thought was wrong, but even as regards what I thought was wrong I made considerable allowances, owing to the great difficulties that the medical officers were under. I knew that they had not an efficient staff about them to do what was required to be done, and I knew they were working at high pressure, and I made great allowances for them; and besides, it was a very small town, where they had not the same means of purchasing that they would have in a big city. But in Cairo I think there was no excuse whatever, after the second or third day that we were in Cairo, why a hospital in Cairo should not have been as well supplied as a hospital in London. The population is about 330,000, and you can get any quantity of servants, and you can get any quantity of food of any description you like, and any quantity of materials that you require to fit up a hospital with. I found very great fault the first day I went to the hospital in Cairo, and I found there again every man lying on the ground. At the same time, I went to see Lady Strangford's hospital. . . . . . I am not quite certain as to how many days she may have been there. At all events I found her hospital all ready to be opened, and I found in every room, for the number of patients in the room, a very neat, nice little bedstead allotted to each. I asked her where she got them, and she said, 'I bought them in the town, and I can get you any quantity you like.' I said, 'How much did you pay for them?' and she told me it was three francs apiece—or 2s. 6d. for each bedstead. It was made out of the stalk of a palm leaf, and a charming bed it was. I cannot fancy a sick and wounded man wishing for a better bed. . . . . . I was very angry with a hospital doctor the first day I went over the hospital at Cairo. It was on a Saturday, and I found the hospital very dirty. I found the men, as I have already said, lying on the ground, and lying in those filthy dirty clothes that they had fought the campaign in. They had no change of clothes, and they seemed to have very little opportunity of washing themselves. There was a washing-room, but it was very imperfectly provided with basins. The ophthalmic cases, too, were put in a tent outside the hospital in a garden, I think about as bad a place as it could possibly be for them, on account of the flies, which were so troublesome that I cannot give you any description of them, except that they were like the plagues of Egypt. They were in myriads and myriads, and they covered everything."

These certainly are strong words, but they are not stronger than the occasion demands. There was, as we have all along contended, the most shameful mismanagement throughout. Yet this result was anticipated by all who have studied the present system of Army administration. No one with any knowledge at all of the requirements of an army in the field could ever have supposed that the system would produce any other result. The word "unification," to the uninitiated, is, of course, an attractive one, and in theory the system may, no doubt, look well enough. But in these matters, something more is wanted than an attractive title. Time after time in our columns has it been shown how unfitted the new system is to meet the wants of even a small campaign. Those who have held the reins of office have, however, refused to listen to the voice of reason. All who have objected to their crotchets have been pronounced grumblers, and each successive War Minister has assured the House of Commons that the system was working admirably. Change—eh! even the slightest modification—has been resisted. We take credit to ourselves for having been all along among the persistent opponents of the existing organisation. We have opposed it because we have recognised from the first that the organisation would break down signally directly a strain was put upon it. We have been accused by the Doctors themselves of being their enemies, because we have not shrunk from doing what we considered to be our duty. The Medical Press, expressing the views of Whitehall Yard, has with one accord condemned us, and ridiculed our idea that the much-vaunted system would crumble to pieces under the pressure of war. And yet what do we find? Failure even more complete than we had expected in a short campaign, in which there were few wounded, and which certainly cannot be considered in any way to have strained our Military resources. That such things should have happened, in face of the constant appeals we, as exponents of the views and ideas of the service at large, have made to the War Office, is not consoling, for it shows how thoroughly the Secretary of State for War is under the control of that bane of our army, the permanent civil officials of the War Office. If, as we have been told year after year, the Medical organisation has been so complete in every detail, and the Military authorities have been so satisfied with its working, how comes it that it has been admitted to have been quite incapable of providing for the wants of the sick and wounded in Egypt? It might be said that no time was given for preparation. Very true; but will time ever be given in future? We must expect wars now-a-days to come upon us suddenly, and it is that nation which is best prepared which will gain the day, assuredly. The British taxpayer certainly has a right to demand an explanation as to why responsible Ministers have systematically thrown dust in his eyes, by telling him that all was in order, when it clearly was not. After our experiences in Egypt, the country, we hope, will not in future place too much reliance on the statements of Secretaries and Under-Secretaries in Parliament, as it is only too evident that in some cases these statements are calculated to mislead, if, indeed, they are not actually made with a view of misleading. But to return to the Report under notice. We repeat that a more damnatory document has rarely, if ever, seen the light. We do not think that anybody will question this assertion; if so, all we can say is, let him peruse its pages carefully, and judge for himself. Here we find a body of officers and officials, all men of experience, meeting to discuss a question of the most vital importance. They sit for some months, have the benefit of the advice and assistance of all those who are qualified to express an opinion on the matter under consideration, and yet they cannot themselves agree as to the steps it is desirable to take to remove the evil which has been the chief, if not the sole immediate cause of all the mischief. The Committee consisted of a president and seven members. Of seven members, only four agree with the recommendations; three others dissent from a portion of the Report, and two recommend an entire change of system. And it is for this that the public has been so anxiously waiting, for a report which is for all practical purposes not worth the paper it is printed upon. What a commentary on our Military administration! The recommendations of the Committee as they stand would, if carried out, leave us, to all intents and purposes, as we were. The one great blot in our present Medical organisation is undoubtedly the fact that under existing regulations the regiment is not, as it should be, a complete unit in itself. If the Army was polled to-morrow, ninety-nine out of every hundred combatant officers would give their votes unhesitatingly in favour of the old arrangement, by which a doctor was gazetted to a regiment, and made to feel himself a part and parcel of the corps with which his lot was cast. And yet this is a point upon which the Committee disagree. The reason for their disagreement is not far to seek, but the fact of there being any difference of opinion upon a question which has long been settled by the common-sense of the Army at large, only shows the length to which bias will be carried. Certain Government officials some years ago started the cry of "Perish, the Regimental System!" It has been the great aim and object of these gentlemen to try and do away, if they can, with all that is regimental. They have been woefully disappointed in their previous efforts, but they still maintain their position, though they see the Army gradually falling to pieces before their eyes and under their hands. The same obstinacy which has been displayed in other quarters has shown itself among some of Lord Morley's colleagues. The only thing that will save the Army Medical Department, and restore it to the position it once enjoyed, is a return, in a modified form, to the old regulations, which gave to each regiment in the service its one doctor or more, who was not only the medical adviser, but the friend of the officers and men. The demon reform has, however, laid it down as an axiom that a regimental system means a weakening of central authority, and because the heads in Whitehall Yard would lose some of their authority, and, possibly, some patronage, were the old regimental medical system reverted to, they set their faces against the change. It is, nevertheless, the one thing wanted to place the Medical arrangements of the Army on a sound basis again, and without it no amount of detail reform will prove of the slightest avail in promoting the smooth working of our hospital system in the field. The regimental system should be the axle on which the wheel should revolve, and until it is made such, we may look in our future campaigns for a repetition of the discreditable episodes which occurred in Egypt, and have brought so much opprobrium on all concerned in the conduct of a campaign, the succesful termination of which must be attributed to a continued run of good-luck. The space at our disposal does not admit of our going more fully into the subject of this interesting Report this week, but we shall recur to it on an early date, and criticise it more in detail.

THE statistics of crime in the Army published in the Times of the 19th inst. are startling in the extreme, and must be very disappointing to those who thought that short service, and the many blessings lately bestowed upon the British soldier, would induce a better class of recruit to enter the Army, and consequently diminish crime. The Times seems to have a difficulty in accounting for the difference in this respect between the mounted and dismounted branches of the Household Troops. "The fact," it says, "that one of these bodies should have five times more crime in its ranks than the other does not seem capable of ready explanation." We think it is easily to be accounted for. Wherever we see intelligence and respectability, there we also expect to find comparative freedom from crime, and in this opinion we are supported by the fact that the next in order of merit to the Household Cavalry are the Royal Engineers. The Household Cavalry are recruited from a different class to the rest of the Army, the men being much more intelligent and much more respectable. For a Household Cavalryman to be drunk in the streets would be felt to be such a disgrace as scarcely to need any punishment. With the Foot Guards, it is different. They are drawn, for the most part, from the same class of society that furnishes recruits for the rest of the Army, and drunkenness amongst its members is not looked upon with very great abhorrence. No doubt, the Household Troops, being principally quartered in London, have more temptation than the rest of the Army, and the fact that the mounted branch can withstand it and the dismounted cannot, only goes to prove what we have already said. The men of the Household Cavalry, we believe, not only distinguished themselves by their bravery in the recent campaign in Egypt, but they were also remarkable for a freedom from crime, and for a discipline not always found in the other branches of the service which took part in the expedition. We fail to see how the Army Discipline Act of 1882 can have had anything whatever to do with the increase of crime in the Army, and we think that to follow the advice of the Times would be pernicious in the extreme, for, unless we are very much mistaken, it recommends less severity as to punishments. It says:—"The general tenour of the Returns for 1882 seems to show that severe punishments are not the best remedy, and to suggest that more judicious supervision and management in another direction might accomplish more satisfactory results." What does this mean? We should like to be told the direction which this judicious supervision is to take. We trust it would not be to screen crime. It is all very well to assign a reason, which may or may not be true. For our part, we merely wish to look facts in the face, and if there is an increase of crime in the Army, we must have recourse to the same means for putting a stop to it as we should have, if there was an increase of any particular crime in civil life, for the principle is the same in both cases. Instead of any relaxation, we should make the penalty so severe as to act as a deterrent. When the garrotter infested our suburbs, we did not mitigate his punishment when we caught him; on the contrary, in addition to sending him to prison, we thrashed him; and if crime is on the increase in the Army, instead of diminishing the severity of the Army Discipline Act, we must increase it. We do not think that the Act of 1882 is any more severe than others that have been in force before. It was found that a thriving, though pernicious trade, was being carried on by the blackguard who, to prevent himself from being obliged to get an honest living by work, enlisted, only to serve a few months, deserted, made away with his necessaries, then, when crime in civil life failed to supply his daily bread, enlisted again, and so on, until at length Justice found him out. To such an extent was this "trade in fraudulent enlistment" carried on, that it was found absolutely necessary to try and prevent it by the penalty of penal servitude. This became a necessity, when sentimentalism abolished branding. If the Times will review the past history of the Army, it will find that recent Discipline Acts have become less severe because it was thought that it would be unfair and injudicious to punish the lad, who might sin through ignorance, with the same severity as the matured soldier, who committed crime with his eyes open. Take the last twenty years, and it will be found that crime was more severely dealt with in the first ten years than in the last. Insubordination, unfortunately, is much more prevalent now than it used to be, minor cases especially. When we had a fair sprinkling of old soldiers in the ranks, they helped to support authority, but now they are so few that they dare not speak, for a word quickly brings a blow. Another reason why insubordination is more prevalent than formerly is the extreme youth and inexperience of our Non-commissioned officers. The ignorance of the Times in matters relating to the Army is something too appalling, for the injury that is done by such reckless criticism must be great. Why does not the "leading journal" try to be consistent. The days have gone by when any soldier can be gulled by such one-sided support of a system which everybody, who knows anything at all about the Army, is fully aware, has proved a miserable failure.

WESTERN AFRICA has at different times attracted public attention, principally in those parts where Native tribes have, by belligerent acts, required us to exercise force, either Naval or Military, to obtain satisfaction. Excepting the cession in 1872 of the Dutch possessions at Elmina, it has hitherto been unnecessary for us to negotiate with an European Power for acquisition, or exchange, of territory; but now we find that the Government are doing so with Portugal, in order that we may acquire Whydah from her, on condition that we allow her to take the Congo territory. What right has Portugal to Whydah? It has not been recognised hitherto by England, and we must be enacting peculiar diplomacy to recognise it now. While the slave-trade existed, we maintained a strict blockade of the Bight of Benin, especially Whydah, the seaport of Dahomey, and the great shipping-place for slaves. Visits were made by Englishmen to the King to induce him to stop the traffic; but as his revenue depended thereon, it was not likely he would conform to our wishes while Portuguese subjects were his best customers, and the crime in that country was fostered by its officials, who winked at the infringement of treaties, and allowed slavers to be fitted out in home-ports. During the slave-trade, Portugal's claim to Whydah was unheard of, and would have been laughed at had it been advanced; but now, when that "open sore of the world" has been healed in Western Africa, we find that the nation who cost us such immense sacrifices, actually considered the rightful owner of what never was hers. Whydah is historical; though never the possession of a civilised nation, forts were built in different parts of it which, though now unfit for defensive purposes, are still known by the names of the respective nationalities who erected them,—French, Brazilian, English, and Portuguese; honeycombed guns still remain, indicative that the places were meant for fighting, and each is surrounded by a moat. The English fort was built by the Royal African Company in 1672. At that time Whydah did not belong to Dahomey, but had always been coveted by the King as a seaport for direct trade with Europeans. Eventually his ambition was gratified, by the aid of Governor Goodson, in 1725, when we were as much interested in the slave trade as any other country. After the abolition of the traffic in 1807, official occupation of the English fort fell into disuse, and Portugal, with little conscience in regard to treaties, became the dominant nation at Whydah, and from the number of her resident representatives there as "slave consumers," was high in Dahomian estimation, and countenanced before any other. But whatever trading and social advantages were accorded her, territorial possession was never granted, and could not be claimed, as we, with other nations, had, and even now can assert, equal rights. Admitting that the Portuguese flag is hoisted over their fort, and trumpery official notices posted about, that constitutes no right of possession, as in 1861 it was given up to the Vicariat Apostolique de Dahomé by permission of the King of Dahomey. If Whydah is Portuguese territory, why has not protest been made against English commanders firing on the town? Why were our Commodores allowed to place it under strict blockade to prevent the subjects of Portugal shipping slaves; and, years after the suppression of the traffic, why was not objection taken at the action of our Government in allowing a close blockade and suspension of trade in 1876, which were not removed until the following year, when a fine was inflicted on the King, with other necessary stipulations? If any country has a right to Whydah, it is Great Britain, and our Government has been short-sighted heretofore in not acquiring that portion of the Coast which lies between the Avon and Denham waters, thus securing to the Gold Coast Colony the whole of the seaboard of the Bight of Benin as far east as Leckie; this should have been done immediately after the Ashanti Campaign. Hitherto, Portugal has, by right of discovery, claimed the Congo territory, which we have stoutly resisted, not from any right of ours thereto, but from her failing to occupy it in her early period of African colonisation, as well as a necessity in the days of the slave-trade, and our opposition has never been relaxed. Her claim to Whydah is only of to-day's growth, unless, like her Congo claim, it has been reserved for our benefit! Therefore, our Government cannot accept from the Portuguese what does not belong to them, nor allow them to take what we have so persistently refused to admit was their territory, since the beginning of the present century. The other forts, or factories, Brazilian and French, have, as Whydah became less notorious, fallen into the hands of traders of their respective nationalities. The former is occupied by the De Souza family, who are the hereditary Chacas, or second dignitary of the King, at Whydah; while the French fort was given to M. Regis for free emigration purposes, who turned it into a slave-yard, and with abominable hypocrisy, lodged "emigrants" and "free labourers" there until he could ship them; this discreditable system was ended in 1859 by the case of the "Charles et Georges." It would be a very stultifying principle to admit the claim of Portugal to Whydah, when she is mainly responsible for the abominable traffic which was carried on from it by her people; if the place was hers, we ought to have held her responsible, and driven her out, if it was not stopped, or made her repay us the vast sums we expended in suppressing it. With regard to the Congo, the Portuguese discovered the country to the south of Cape Lopez in 1484, and claim to have possessed it without dispute until the seventeenth century, when the Dutch appear to have committed what the Portuguese termed piratical acts; there was some fighting, and it seems that, besides the Dutch, both England and France rather roughly handled them. Portugal claims to have expelled the Dutch in 1648, and the English in 1723 from Cabinda. After such successes, which are questionable, she rested on her glory until 1783, when it was deemed advisable to build a fort at Cabinda, which the French knocked down, and drove the Portuguese back to Loanda, as France did not recognise their right to the territory. In 1815 and 1817 we made treaties with Portugal for the suppression of the slave-trade, but our Government in no way recognised her claim to the country northward of 8° south latitude. As far as Portugal was concerned, the Treaties were worthless. The slave-trade increased every year, and was notoriously brisk in those very parts, notably in Cabinda and Ambriz, which she so strongly asserted were her possessions. Various notes passed between the respective Governments, but nothing of importance occurred until 1852, when the Portuguese mind was largely disturbed. The Commander of the Harlequin, as senior officer of the Southern Division of the West African Squadron, made treaties with the tribal chiefs of Cape Lopez, Zanga Tanga, Cabinda, and Ambriz, in the name of her Majesty, for suppressing the slave traffic, and developing legitimate trade. The ire of the Portuguese Government was unbounded at their alleged subjects being thus "tampered" with. The correspondence on the subject was considerable, and the bitter tone of the Portuguese despatches showed how much they were stung by the proceedings of British Naval officers in endeavouring to check the abominable traffic. The Commander of the Harlequin was accused of intimidating and intoxicating the King of Cabinda, for the purpose of signing the treaty in January, 1853, and the Portuguese Government demanded due reparation for the acts of that officer against the subjects of his Most Faithful Majesty, committed within the possessions of the Crown of Portugal. Not only in Cabinda was it asserted that the dignity of Portugal had suffered, but that at their town of Ambriz the Commander was equally criminal, "in attempting to corrupt the fidelity of the inhabitants; but he found there the worthy Commander of the Corimba, who, with the dignity of an officer of the glorious Portuguese Navy, protested against such acts, which were opposed to the rights of the Crown of Portugal." "Truth is stranger than fiction," but the former did not come to the surface. The Commander of the Harlequin had been informed that he would be justified in using force if the Portuguese attempted to land at Ambriz. On the appearance of two of their war-vessels for the purpose, the Harlequin was hauled close in shore, and the Portuguese senior officer informed that, if a landing was attempted, she would open fire. The representatives of the "glorious Navy" thereon discreetly returned to Loanda. Subsequently, the Commander of the Harlequin was denounced in the Portuguese Parliament in most unmeasured terms, and punishment was demanded. Lord Clarendon, who was then Foreign Secretary, replied to the Portuguese Ambassador that the accused officer had fully exonerated himself from the charges made by his Government; that the treaties concluded by him were valid, and that punctual fulfilment would be enforced; that, in their the interests of commerce, it was imperative on her Majesty's Government to maintain the right of unrestricted intercourse with that portion of the West Coast of Africa which lies between 5° 12′ and 8° south latitude; and that no claim of Portugal to a right of sovereignty over that part could be admitted. Subsequently, Lord Clarendon directed our Ambassador at Lisbon to inform the Portuguese Government that their charges against British officers in Western Africa were unfounded, and that the success of the latter in checking the infamous traffic which existed to such a disgraceful extent, in territory claimed by Portugal, should have entitled them to the approbation of the Portuguese Government; but the complaints of the latter had encouraged the slave-trade party, and her Majesty's Government were determined to put it down. At that time—December, 1853—the Governor-General of Angola was actually protecting a notorious slave-dealer, Flores, who shipped several cargoes from the very places claimed by Portugal. After such unmistakable language from our Government, the Portuguese allowed the territorial question to remain in abeyance, and directed their energies to the slave-trade. Every official in Angola lent a helping hand, frequent shipments being made, with their connivance, from the part of the province between Loanda and Mossamedes. After the foreign slave-trade received its death-blow, the territorial claim was spasmodically renewed, but without success, as our Government held to the policy of the past. It has lately been stated in Parliament that the instructions of 1866 and 1876 to the Commanders of cruisers still hold good. In the latter year, the Lieutenant-Commander of the gunboat at the Congo district had authority to prevent any encroachment of Portugal beyond the prescribed boundary, the southern bank of the River Loge being considered the northern limit of Portuguese territory, and we should much like to know whether similar instructions are now in force. For, in tracing the history of Portugal's claims to the Congo territory, we place our readers in possession of facts which prove how strenously previous Governments have opposed that nation's pretensions; but it appears that, in this enlightened age, the policy of the past will undergo revulsion, although the ill-effect of allowing the independence of the native tribes to be interfered with by Portugal can hardly be understood, excepting by those who possess local knowledge. Portuguese officials in Angola are generally half-castes of the most objectionable type, remarkable for their presumption, interference, extortion, in fact, for every vice, without a single virtue. Little else can be expected of them, as they live in an atmosphere of immorality at Loanda, the capital, where men lead unnatural lives, and honesty has no resting-place. Convicts are deported from Lisbon for capital offences, and allowed at large. A Consul once remarked that he had an excellent cook, but he was sent from Europe for killing his wife! After a time their misdeeds are forgotten, and the greatest criminal, if an European, may become entitled to the privileges of a respectable citizen Domestic slavery was abolished in Angola in 1876, but having been so long part of the social system, it is impossible to believe that such people would allow emancipation in its integrity. This national characteristic, which we battled against for more than half a century, is still an inherent quality, and will ever live in future generations. It is, therefore, impossible to believe that, possessing neither honour nor morality, they are fit to hold jurisdiction over native tribes, who imitate the white man, and eagerly acquire his vices. Even now in the Congo district the abominations of Portuguese slave-dealers have left their demoralising mark, and but for their vile influence, the expeditions which have been undertaken by different Commodores for the punishment of outrages would have been unnecessary. It is an unpleasant reflection that a nation, merely on sufferance in the European fraternity of monarchies, and whose existence would, but for England's support, have been wiped out, should have caused such brutal misery and suffering, and checked the advance of civilisation. We can point to no part of Portugal's possessions where satisfactory colonisation exists. At St. Thomas, Africa, the slaves were freed in 1876, and the authorities induced numbers of Sierra Leone people to emigrate, on favourable conditions, many being mechanics; the statement of an eye-witness was "that they were disgracefully treated, never paid for their work, and that there was no British Consul for appeal." Even Madeira is no exception, as people there are free in name only; they work hard, and their small earnings are drained to swell the revenue which finds its way to Lisbon to support impotent grandeur. In Angola, Portugal is unable to repress the turbulence of the inland native population, and every expedition against them returns virtually defeated. One point on the Congo is of great importance to us. Banana, at the northern entrance, is principally occupied by a Dutch house, whose services to British Naval officers are well known, and were recognised by our Government in 1864. This firm has for many years past contracted to supply our squadrons with coal, and is always most willing to aid our Commanders. At this place, Portugal has established a quarantine, postal and pilot station, which are unnecessary, and for which she has no authority. Considering that all African places are unhealthy, quarantine is farcical. Such an establishment is the insertion of the "thin end of the wedge," which the Portuguese are only "biding their time" to drive in. Cabinda, the old bone of contention, ten miles by water and four by land from Banana, is their aim; they have long coveted it, and were it once in their hands, only the sword would make them relinquish it. In the present uncertainty of affairs on the Congo, it must be remembered that the nation who holds the river, from the mouth upwards to Boma, will command everything. At Puerta da Lenha, the stream is so narrow as to place the opposite shore within pistol-shot, thus giving a force in possession of it the power of stopping all traffic. It is false sentiment to suppose that it would be advantageous to grant Portugal this territory. She is incapable of maintaining order even in her own possessions. Therefore, it is useless to add to her responsibilities. A distinguished officer, who has commanded the West-African Squadron, remarks that "if the Portuguese are allowed to reign supreme on the Congo, &c., God help the natives and the country!" It is to be hoped that Members of the Lower House will, irrespective of party feeling, array themselves strongly against such unconstitutional negotiations. In the national interests they are objectionable, and to those of commerce would be highly detrimental. Now that legitimade trade has taken its hold in South-western Africa, and the advantages of this particular district have opened up new and valuable fields for enterprising capitalists, it would be fatal if Portugal were allowed to occupy one inch of it. Once concede the right to her, and the position of merchants would be untenable. Customs dues, taxation, extortion, and constant irritation by officials, would far exceed what now exist in her ill-governed colonies, and the foreign trader would find himself in a land of corruption where justice to honest men is unknown. Naval officers who have served in Western Africa know the evils of Portuguese rule, and the firmness requisite in dealing with the unscrupulous officials of that nation. The gallant Commander of the Harlequin, now a retired Vice-Admiral, devoted many years of his life to the suppression of the slave-trade, and had the good-fortune to at last "stand over the grave of this abominable traffic," as it virtually came to an end in the last year of his command of the African Squadron, when her Majesty was graciously pleased to state to Parliament, in her opening Speech —"I have, at the same time, the satisfaction to inform you that the exertions and perseverance of my Naval Squadron have reduced the slave-trade on the West Coast of Africa within very narrow limits." This recognition was the only reward Admiral Eardley Wilmot ever received, excepting for the Crimean War; but he has the satisfaction of knowing that he faithfully did his work, and taught Portuguese officials that the honour of a British officer is above their unscrupulous accusations. We hope the Government will therefore not now undo what it has cost the country so much in the past to achieve, nor forget the valuable lives of gallant officers and good seamen that have been sacrificed on this coast in the cause of freedom and of England.

Vice-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, accompanied by General Lord Wolseley, will return to England immediately after the Coronation of the Czar of Russia. Her Royal and Imperial Highness the Duchess of Edinburgh will remain for the subsequent festivities at St. Petersburg, Vice-Admiral the Earl of Clanwilliam remaining in attendance.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales will attend the first amateur race meeting held under the flag of the Royal Thames Yacht Club, on June 14. On this occasion a large attendance of the best amateur yachtsmen is expected, as the competing yachts have to be manned entirely by gentlemen, a plan which has met with great success in Sydney, N.S.W., and should most assuredly become popular in this country. The first race meeting of the season of the Royal Thames yachts takes place on May 30, for which the following yachts have already entered:—Buttercup, Eulidia, Bonina, Virago, Kismet, Manola, Chiquita, Winnie, Wild Swan, Rifleman, and Maggie. Entries close at the club-house, at noon, May 28. A steamer has been specially engaged to accompany the races for members and their friends. The yachts start from Erith at 10 a.m. Naval and Military officers desiring to take part in the amateur race of June 14 should write to the secretary of the club.

A correspondent, writing on the subject of Naval education, advocates the Britannia being at once done away with, and replaced by a sea-going corvette, having full steam and sail power and an efficient staff of instructors. Such a vessel should be continually on the move, so that our young Nelsons might acquire a practical instead of a theoretical education. That a training ship is necessary, we admit, but we are not prepared to advocate doing away with the Britannia. She serves a useful purpose at present, but should be supplemented by a sea-going training-ship.

Fleet Circular No. 37 G is to be considered as cancelled, now that revised instructions for the stowage, management, and preservation of wet and dry gun-cotton have been inserted in the "Torpedo Manual." When no Torpedo Lieutenant is borne, the Gunnery Lieutenant will have special charge of the torpedoes, will superintend torpedo duties generally, and will be responsible for the efficient and serviceable state of all electrical as well as torpedo stores on board, including the arrangements for firing guns by electricity.

We regret to hear that a telegram has been received from India announcing the death of Lieutenant Edward D. Ormond, a probationer in the Indian Staff Corps, who has been killed at Madras, through a fall from his horse. Mr. Ormond was transferred to the Staff Corps from the Royal Marine Light Infantry in September last.

We are informed that the Chinese Government have entrusted Mr. G. Howaldt, Kiel, with the construction of two fast corvettes, each 270 feet long. It will be remembered that Mr. Howaldt was the builder of the mysterious steamers Diogenes and Socrates, recently reported to have been purchased by our Admiralty.

A Plymouth daily paper has noted that Colonel Commandant Mawbey, of the Royal Marine Artillery, will retire on completion of his period of command on the 3rd prox., and that he will be succeeded by Colonel E. H. Cox. Our contemporary is in error as to date, as Colonel Mawbey's time does not expire until July 3. It is Colonel Cox's birthright by seniority to succeed to the command, but in the present day of promotion by selection no man is certain of his step until safely gazetted. It was only recently that three officers of the Light Infantry branch of the corps were passed over for promotion to second commandant, each of whom, no doubt, felt himself entitled to his promotion. We hope, however, to see Colonel Cox succeed to the step.

At the Admiralty it is stated that the Treasury is the body chiefly responsible for the present starvation of the Navy, all attempts on the part of Lord Northbrook to obtain larger estimates having been resolutely discountenanced.

The Admiralty have received an application from the British Consul at Guayaquil, Ecuador, for a man-of-war at once to proceed to that place to protect British interests, as the town was in danger of being sacked by the native troops. Instructions have accordingly been forwarded to Rear-Admiral Lyons.

It must be from thoughtlessness, and not from deliberate "cussedness," that certain Naval chiefs, in piping times of peace, keep the intended movements of the ships under their orders a profound secret. The inconvenience caused to officers and crews is very great, and where there is needless inconvenience created there is sure to be discontent and bad feeling. The Admiral or Commodore lets "dear Lady Jane" or "the Countess" know where he is to be found, and his own wife and sisters are well posted as to the addresses to which they are to send letters to him or young Lord Noddy, but it sometimes happens that a vessel is detailed for duty on a station where it was certain she would be sent for weeks before her departure, and the senior officer keeps the fact quite dark till a few hours before she is ordered away. The result is that officers and men cannot communicate in time with their friends at home, and are left without news for weeks. It must be admitted that the Admiralty show consideration, now-a-days, in giving information respecting the movements of the Fleet, and it would be well if officers in command on distant stations were always equally communicative in cases where it can do no hurt to the Service to be so. We offer this remark and advice to the attention of those whom it may concern, as such reticence, though absolutely necessary in war time, becomes a vice when unnecessarily practised to the needless discomfort of others.

Portsmouth Dockyard presents a busy appearance just now, with the first-reserve ships in for their annual refit. The Warrior, by all accounts, stands in need of something more than a mere refit, her masts being rotten. This must be somewhat embarrassing to the authorities, for we believe the iron masts and tops, originally prepared to meet the present emergency, were "lent" last summer to the Duke of Wellington, on the understanding, perhaps, that the Naval barracks would be finished by the time the Warrior required her new masts; but wooden masts, unfortunately, like "time and tide," "wait for no man." The most obvious way out of the difficulty—and it was just as obvious eighteen months ago, when the Duke of Wellington's masts were first discovered to be dangerously rotten—is to give the flagship jury masts for signalling purposes. The idea of providing an obsolete old hulk with expensive iron masts, even as a temporary measure, is absurd in the extreme, and now the absurdity has been demonstrated to the satisfaction, let us hope, of all concerned. The Victoria and Albert, that bone of Parliamentary contention, is in dock for a long stay, with many of her outside timbers removed. The builders of the Osborne might have learnt something from this old craft, both as regards symmetry of form and good solid workmanship. In the great basin are the usual turret ships, large and small, among them the new Edinburgh, with her unusually uncouth superstructures, affording, however, some very comfortable accommodation. The Canada was taken out of the old steam basin on Tuesday. Her 6-in. guns, mounted on projecting sponsons, attract a good deal of attention. They are provided with large steel shields, which revolve with the gun, and thus protect the crew from small-arm and machine-gun fire. There is very much to be said in favour of this method of mounting, but surely it would be better to taper the sponson off at a smaller angle forward and aft, or at least to have stout beams to take the brunt of a glancing collision, which might sweep gun and all away, to say nothing of the inconvenience of being "hung up" by the sponson at the corner of a jetty. And how is it that the broadside 6-in. guns have no better means of checking the recoil than a somewhat modified edition of the Elswick compressor? Perhaps because Elswick is supreme at Whitehall, where Mr. Rendell is the master. We expect to hear of some mishaps with these, when it comes to action, or even prize-firing. The "hideous, misshapen monster" lies out in the stream, her principal office at present being to afford instruction and amusement to the half-pay torpedo class. The clearing-out of the boat pond for repairs and improvements has apparently decided the fate of a few score of old service boats, which are being disposed of wholesale to outsiders.

Acting on the dictum of Prince Bismarck, that "une nation qui cesse à prendre, et qui commence à rendre, est un pouvoir fini," the United States Government have sent their sloop-of-war Quinnebourg on special service to Liberia, to make inquiries concerning the tract of territory lately ceded to England by the Gallinas chiefs, the Republic of Liberia asserting a prior claim. It is fully expected that this cession will be the subject of negotiations between the United States and our Government, with a view to the territory being surrendered by England.

From the reply given on Thursday night by the Parliamentary Secretary of the Admiralty to Sir H. Wolff, in the House of Commons, it appears that the improvement of the condition of Warrant Officers of the Navy in respect of uniform, compassionate allowance, pay, and Greenwich-Hospital pensions is under the consideration of the Admiralty. We hope it will not remain long under such a dead-weight, or it may be crushed out of shape, and no improvement ensue.

The following is the official programme of the intended movements of the Mediterranean Squadron, under Vice-Admiral the Lord John Hay, consisting of the Alexandra, Inflexible, Superb, Monarch, Téméraire, Carysfort, and Decoy, which left Malta on May 17 for the summer cruise. The Helicon will shortly join the squadron from Constantinople:—Corfu, May 21 to 24; Cattaro and Ragusa or Gravosa, May 26 to 30; Spalatro, June 2 to 4; Zara, June 5 to 6; Lossini, June 7 to 8; Pola, June 8 to 10; Fiume, June 11 to 13; Malamoco and Trieste, June 15 to 25; Ancona, June 27 to 30; Termoli, July 2 to 3; Avlona, July 6 to 12; Corfu, July 13. Mails for these ships should be sent accordingly.

We regret to hear that yellow fever has broken out to a most alarming extent on board the Mallard, serving in the West Indies. By latest accounts, three officers and many of the crew had already succumbed to this fearful scourge, one-half the ship's company being prostrated by the disease. It is to be hoped that the Admiralty will take immediate steps to reinforce the Squadron on this station, as, since the loss of the Phœnix and the withdrawal of the Tourmaline, the remaining vessels have been much over-worked, and kept longer on the sickly parts of the station than they had any right to be, did a due regard for the health of their crews obtain at the Admiralty. It is in these details of administration and organisation that the present Board has most signally failed, and consequently lost the confidence of the service.

The following letter of thanks has been presented by the inhabitants of Port Said to the Captains and officers of the Iris and Falcon, for their services during the recent riots:—

> "Port Said, April 30, 1883.
> "SIR,—The under-signed inhabitants of Port Said desire sincerely to thank you for the prompt manner in which you landed a force in answer to the appeal for assistance which was made to you on Sunday afternoon, April 29. We are convinced that your resolute action in the matter saved the town from disastrous consequences, the extent of which it is difficult to foresee. At the same time, we desire to thank the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of H.M.S. Iris and H.M.S. Falcon for the orderly and efficient manner in which they performed the delicate task entrusted to them. Our particular thanks are also due to Captain Pringle, H.M.S. Falcon, for the able and energetic manner in which he personally superintended and carried out the arrangements for ensuring order and tranquillity during the night.—We have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servants,

> "To Captain ERNEST RICE, > Senior British Naval Officer, Port Said."

Gentlemen in the service of the Egyptian Government, or in the Consular Services, and people employed by the Canal Company, and other French subjects, were not asked to sign.

The officers and crews of the Iris and Falcon gave an assault-at-arms and athletic sports on May 10 at the Dutch House at Port Said. The prizes were subscribed for by the inhabitants, and were very keenly contested. The good people of Port Said turned out en masse for the occasion, and all were highly delighted with the entertainment, especially with the obstacle race, duck-hunt, greasy pole, and tug-of-war. The prizes, at the close of the sports, were gracefully presented by Mrs. George Royle, the wife of the popular Agent of the Peninsular and Oriental Company at Port Said. On May 11, the Falcon sailed for Beyrout, Smyrna, and Constantinople, having been relieved by the Bittern.

The Admiralty might well take advantage of the Queen's Birthday to reward the senior Lieutenants of the Mediterranean and Channel Fleets, who were left out in the cold after the Egyptian Campaign, notwithstanding all the good service rendered by them to their country. Lieutenants de Sausmarez, Wentworth Bailey, and Barlow specially distinguished themselves, and had the mortification of seeing juniors promoted, while their services remained unnoticed. But now that the Admiralty have the chance of doing a graceful act, we hope they will not miss the opportunity.

The Channel Squadron will probably leave Gibraltar early in the week. Vigo and Port Mahon have both been named as the next port of call, but it appears that Lisbon and Bantry are to be substituted. While at Gibraltar, forty-eight hours' leave has been granted to the men, who have also been put through their class-firing at the ranges. A grand bull-ring has been built just inside the Spanish lines, and is to be inaugurated to-morrow with great display.

An accident which might have cost the German Government one of its finest ironclads has just occurred at Wilhelmshaven, where the German Ironclad Squadron had anchored on May 9. During the night, while all hands were fast asleep, the cable of the Kaiser parted in the strong tide-way, and before there was time to let go a second anchor, she drifted down on to the Kronprinz anchored astern of her. The shock of the collision was fearful, and the cable of the Kronprinz parted. Orders were at once given to close the water-tight compartments in both ships, and all spare anchors were let go, when luckily, both ships were brought up in time to save them being swept on shore. Steam was then got up, and the ironclads were steamed clear of each other. Both lost all their boats on one side, spars, rigging, and upper works. The damage below water was found to be slight, but both ships will have to go into dock, and will thus miss a great part of this year's cruising season. We fear that a similar accident could easily happen to the large ironclads forming our Reserve Squadron, as their anchors and cables are most inadequate to the work expected of them. This was proved not long ago in the Defence, who twice parted her cables when anchored in the Mersey, and narrowly missed doing a vast amount of damage to shipping, besides being swept on shore. It is to be hoped, therefore, that before Sir Anthony Hopkins takes the Reserve Squadron to sea for its summer cruise, the ground tackle of each ship will be seen to. It would be cheaper in the long run to supply new anchors and cables to each ship, as the anxiety to officers and men when at anchor with tackle on which they place no reliance is great, and not only wears them out and fills the sick list, but, notwithstanding all their precautions and vigilance, may, when least expected, bring about the loss of the ship or serious injury to many.

The Admiralty are at present engaged in reconsidering the question of leave-granting in home ports and on foreign stations, and it is expected that a circular, embodying new rules on this all-important subject, will soon be issued. The question is one which should be treated in no narrow-minded spirit, as on its right solution hinge the health, welfare, and comfort of every seaman and marine in the service. How often has it not happened that, after a ship has been kept for months on some inhospitable coast, her crew has only been granted short-leave, not exceeding 48 hours, on arriving in a civilised port or in the harbour of one of our colonies, and that the men, with their pockets full of money, have been unable to refrain from remaining on shore until it is all spent, thereby breaking their leave, losing their class and ratings, and filling the defaulters' book? In such cases, latitude should be allowed to officers in command of her Majesty's ships, as they are, after all, the best judges of what is required to meet special circumstances.

By permission of the Admiralty, Messrs. Cammell and Co., of Sheffield, are sending up a number of unfinished iron, steel, and compound armour-plates, in various stages of manufacture, for trial on board the Nettle, at Portsmouth. These do not represent the make of armour-plate supplied by Messrs. Cammell and Co. to the Admiralty and to foreign Governments. They may or may not be penetrated or broken up, as they are manufactured solely for experimental purposes, to gain further experience in the development of armour-plate manufacture.

Vice-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh travelled through Germany, on his way to Moscow, in the uniform of a Prussian General Officer. At every station his Royal Highness was well received, the people who had assembled to witness the passage of the Royal party being most demonstrative in welcoming the English Admiral and his Imperial Russian bride. But, amidst the blaze of uniforms, a form was observed in civilian attire, wrapped in a modest grey ulster, which made this personage all the more conspicuous. The amazement of the spectators, officials, officers, and troops was indeed great when it became known that it was General Lord Wolseley of Cairo, who was thus travelling in mufti, in the suite of H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh. Such strange conduct gave rise to many questions, and we regret to find that in Germany "our only General" is accused of so travelling to purposely slight the German Army and people, and the Royal Admiral in whose suite he travelled. British officers travelling on the Continent in an official or semi-official capacity should remember, that although it is the custom for them when at home to lay by the uniform when not actually on duty, it is, nevertheless, the custom among foreigners to appear in uniform on all occasions; and when our officers go to Rome, it surely would be well for them to do as the Romans do, if only with the view of supporting the honour of their cloth.

The proprietors of the Creuzot Works are making a gigantic effort to introduce their steel-plates into the Navies of the world. In Europe and America the daily Press is teeming with articles in favour of the adoption of the Creuzot steel-plates to protect the sides of armour-clads. The result of the experiments in Italy and Russia are conveniently ignored, and those of the Danish trials are held up to prove the superiority of steel over compound armour. But it is not stated that, at the Danish trials, although the compound armour was penetrated, the steel-plate supplied by Creuzot was broken up and fell from its bolts, leaving the backing bare and fully exposed and unprotected. Had another shot been fired at the place where the Creuzot plate originally protected the ship's side, the projectile would, of course, have gone clean through. But no shot was fired. Hence the Creuzot firm claim that their plate was not pierced. They do not say it was annihilated.

The French Press has been much exercised by certain remarks which recently appeared in these columns, on the abortive attempts of France to found colonies in various parts of the world. Far from being unable to colonise, the Avenir Militaire assures us that France has all the requisites, and most assuredly the desire, to assist in the civilisation of mankind, and that it can only be our narrow-mindedness and jealousy which prevent our recognising the fact that the French flag is always welcomed far more heartily than the English, wherever it is planted. As to the want of surplus population wherewith to colonise the annexed territories, that is a mere bagatelle, "as fathers of families will very soon be equal to the occasion," once they feel assured that a bright future has been provided in the colonies by "La Grande Nation" for their unborn progeny.

The Birthday of Her Majesty the Queen will be celebrated this day throughout Her Majesty's Services, in all quarters of the globe, under all climes, ashore and afloat, with that enthusiasm which it has seldom been the fortune of any Sovereign to evoke. The Queen attained her sixty-fourth birthday on Thursday, an age which has been exceeded by only eleven of the Sovereigns of England, dating from the Norman Conquest, viz., Henry I., who lived to the age of 67 years; Henry III., 65 years; Edward I., 67 years; Edward III., 65 years; Queen Elizabeth, 69 years; James II., 68 years; George I., 67 years; George II., 77 years; George III., 82 years; George IV., 68 years; and William IV., 72 years. On June 20 next, her Majesty will have reigned for 46 years, a length of reign which has been exceeded by three of the Kings of England only, viz., Henry III., whose reign extended to 56 years; Edward III., who reigned 50 years; and George III., whose reign extended to nearly 60 years. The Queen has now been a widow for nearly 22 years, the Prince Consort having died on December 14, 1861. Nevertheless, the memory of Albert the Good is as fresh in the hearts of her Majesty's loyal subjects now as it was on the day which robbed our Queen of a loving husband and England of a staunch friend and benefactor. Still, on the present occasion, it is only right and proper to forget the sad memories of the past in hopes for the future, and to express our earnest desire that her Majesty may yet be spared "long to reign over us, happy and glorious." And so mote it be!

Elsewhere will be found a letter on "The Channel Tunnel" from a correspondent who resumes a former nom de plume of mysterious signification to most men who have not served in India. The latter deserves careful perusal.

In an article in the Times of the 23rd inst., an attemp is made to show that the sweeping changes of the last few years in the organisation and administration of the Army have been almost unmixed benefits. Such attempts, as we have said before, furnish by their feebleness strong arguments against the very changes they are intended to support. The article to which we now refer is remarkable as giving a thorough exposition of the weakness of the cause of "Army reform." Otherwise, it does not merit even a passing notice. It may be thus summarised. Since short service became an established institution in the Army, the chronic deficiency of recruits which marked the days of long service has been agreeably transformed into an almost invariable surplus. The present deficiency in the supply of recruits is due mainly to causes of an incidental and temporary nature. The requirements of the medical officers in the matter of physique had become needlessly exacting, and the minimum of age had been inexpediently increased from 18 to 19 years. But now that the authorities have given instructions "that a hard-and-fast line shall no longer be drawn as regards either age or physique," the supply has increased, and we may soon expect to have our ranks filled with immature lads, such as have proved worthless whenever and wherever they have been tried. The Guards are about 1,000, or 20 per cent., below their establishment; but that is of little consequence, for by lowering the standard the required numbers can be got. Any little uneasiness that may be felt, on account of the large deficiency of recruits, should be allayed by reflecting that it is caused by sending men to the Army Reserve, where their services are still available. It is rather startling to see the Commander-in-Chief called, in unmistakeable disparagement, not only the head, but the type of "the military school." We think that the military school comprises not only his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, but all officers with the feelings and aspirations of true soldiers. The writer in the Times, who clearly does not belong to that school, says that we cannot send a single Cavalry regiment into the field, because we have not extended to that arm of the service the organisation which did not produce a single battalion fit to go to Egypt. Lastly, we are told that bad commanding officers, severe punishments, and terrorism are strong deterrents to recruiting, and that a gentler and more discriminating course should be taken. If the "leading" daily paper, with all its official inspirations, can give us nothing better than such transparent fallacies as we have noticed, the defence of "Army reform" must be a hopeless task, though it will probably be rewarded with the same prodigality as the recent victories over the degenerate successors of Pharaoh's hosts.

Under the management of Mr. Eberle, who has earned for himself the title of "the king of hotel managers," the Army and Navy Hotel opened its doors on Monday. Situated in a central thoroughfare—Victoria Street—in close proximity to the clubs and public offices, the establishment ought to prove of great convenience to officers of the Services visiting London. The great object of the management will be to provide for the special wants of officers of all branches of the Naval and Military and Auxiliary Forces; but whilst doing so, the general public will very properly be received also. This is, we consider, a very wise step on the part of the directors, and we shall expect to hear very satisfactory accounts of the latest Service venture, as it is evidently the intention to conduct the hotel on broad principles, and to study the comfort and convenience of its patrons in every way. The want of such an establishment has long been felt, and we trust that the enterprise may prove a successful one.

We stated some weeks back that the German Government had ordered 2,000 magazine rifles of the Mauser pattern, and that these rifles would be issued to companies of various regiments for the purpose of testing the value of the arm in all parts of Germany, and in the hands of the different classes of men of which the Army is composed. The first batch of repeating rifles was distributed among some of the companies of the Guards, stationed in or about Berlin; some went to Prussian Poland and Silesia, and now another quantity of rifles (probably the last of the 2,000) has been forwarded to a Würtemberg regiment. The reports on the arm, which have been received up to the present, are far from satisfactory, as it is asserted that the lock-mechanism is far too complicated to render it reliable, and that the cartridge ejector often gets foul, and causes great delay. Although in an early stage, the experiments have already proved that the Mauser-repeater, in its present form, is useless for the German Army.

Provision has been made in the German Military Budget of 1883-84 for two new carrier-pigeon stations, at Posen and Thorn. The fortresses of the Russian western frontier have now all been provided with such stations, and, generally speaking, according to the Militär-Wochenblatt, the employment of carrier-pigeons for military purposes has been definitely adopted by Austria, France, Germany, Russia, Spain, and the United States. The Germans are now also intending to use them for maritime purposes, and it is thought probable that such stations will be established at Wilhelmshaven, Kiel, and Danzig.

Seven Captains of the General Staff employed at the French War Office have been relieved of their duties at Paris, and assigned to various regiments in the provinces. It is said that they had expressed their opinions somewhat too freely respecting General Thibaudin.

General Thibaudin, in the Bill proposing the formation of fortress artillery and the African Army, which has been submitted this week to the French Chamber, is asking, like his predecessor, General Billot, for the formation of sixteen battalions of fortress artillery; but on account of the financial straits of the public exchequer, he intends utilising the existing forty-five foot batteries and the fifty-seven companies of the artillery train. The latter are to be abolished, and incorporated with the existing artillery regiments. The sixteen fortress artillery battalions will then be formed of the latter. The African Army is to consist of men who have already served, who are to be enlisted. The annual cost of the African Army is estimated at 15,000,000 francs.

The Russian Army had an effective, on January 1, 1882, of 812,484 men, of which 612,082 were infantry, 70,064 cavalry, 107,601 artillery, and 22,737 engineers.

The manœuvres of the 11th German Army Corps will, it is stated, exceed, as regards numbers, anything in the shape of corps manœuvres that has hitherto taken place in Germany. That corps consists of three divisions, and there will participate in the operations 42 battalions of infantry, 30 squadrons of cavalry, 108 guns, besides the usual complement of train and pioneer columns, and provision, ammunition, and ambulance detachments.

The change in the uniforms of the French Army, which was first contemplated eight years ago, has been now carried out, at least so far as officers and adjutants are concerned. The Bill authorising the change was recently submitted to the French Chamber; but the latter declared that, as the proposed alteration did not involve any extra expense so far as officers are concerned, it did not require the consent of the Legislature. Whereupon the War Minister assured the Chamber that he had submitted the measure solely to show his devotion to Parliament. The wearing of the new uniforms becomes obligatory on January 1, 1884.

The same advice as that proffered by Mr. Punch to those about to marry, viz., "don't," is applicable to all who contemplate seeking an El Dorado in Natal. That country is completely played out, and many who would gladly return to England find that they cannot do so, but must perforce continue to eke out a hand-to-mouth existence where they are. Owing to the extremely happy manner in which Mr. Gladstone and his confrères have evaded their responsibilities in that unhappy country, it would be a suicidal policy for officers to venture out there for the purpose of settling. What the country may ultimately become under a Conservative Government remains to be seen.

It is rather pleasant to find M. Challemel-Lacour defending the expedition in the interest of the converts which the French Catholic missionaries have made, and who would inevitably be slaughtered if the French were to withdraw. When M. Challemel-Lacour was Ambassador here, his anti-Catholic antecedents were made the subject of a question on behalf of the Irish Members in the House of Commons, and how French Catholics have been persecuted at home by the French Minister for Foreign Affairs and his colleagues is well known. However, Catholics in Syria and the far East must be protected.

It was said that Prince Roland Bonaparte, who recently threw up his commission in the French Army, was going to devote himself to politics, and to bring forward a claim to represent a Corsican constituency. This appears not to be the case, the Prince being intent upon devoting himself to the pursuit of science and of imitating such peaceful and savant members of his family as Prince Lucien Bonaparte, his uncle.

The Germanisation of the Turkish Army may mean a great deal; indeed, it may lead to much. It may, on the other hand, end as the Americanisation of the Egyptian Army did. But it certainly strikes one that there is much significance in the development of the Teutonic element at Constantinople, and it is plain that the Turks will have better advisers and military leaders in their next war than they ever had. The increase in the batteries and armament of the Dardanelles is not so portentous and important as the effectiveness which has been given to the new works. These are now formidable. They are well placed, and the earthworks are exceedingly thick, the defect being the want of cover to the gunners. It would be impossible for the men to stand to their pieces if they were exposed to the fire of Nordenfelts and Gatlings, as they surely would be, unless they were able to destroy the ships which were attacking them. The guns are mounted on the overbank principle, with stout traverses between them, but there are no blinds or mantlets for the guns. The Turk can always find money to pay for guns and ammunition, and he is buying 10-in. and 11-in. Krupps as fast as he can, and investing largely in torpedoes.

The Duke of Connaught presided, on Saturday, over the thirty-second annual meeting of the Royal Cambridge Asylum for Soldiers' Widows, held at the Royal United Service Institution, Whitehall. The object of the Asylum is to provide a home for the widows of non-commissioned officers and privates of the Army of not less than 50 years of age, and there are at the present time receiving benefits 65 widows, making the total since the opening 188. The committee express their anxiety to carry out the original intention of the Institution of receiving one widow from every regiment and battalion, with which object additional rooms are now being built. The funded income of the Charity yields £930, with an additional £50 from the Princess Mary's Fund for Nurses, to meet an estimated expenditure of £3,000 a year.

No immediate reduction in the British force now in Egypt being contemplated, the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, after serious consideration, has approved, on the report being received that the necessary accommodation has been made, of the wives and families of soldiers now serving in that country being sent out to join them.

From the criminal statistics of the Army at home, for the year 1882, it appears that upon an average strength of some 90,000 non-commissioned officers and men, representing about one-half of the Army, there were no less than 8,319 courts-martial held and 131,434 minor punishments inflicted by order of commanding officers. The number of fines for drunkenness—for the most part included among the minor punishments—was 18,400. One of the most remarkable facts shown is the great increase in the number of cases of penal servitude as compared with former years, and also in the number of offences of magnitude committed. For several years preceding the passing of the Army Discipline Act, the annual average of sentences of penal servitude for the whole Army was about 50, of which the great majority occurred among the troops stationed abroad. The proportions of criminality existing in the different arms of the service present some remarkable contrasts. In classifying the offences tried by court-martial as serious and those punished by commanding officers as of a minor character, under both headings the Household Cavalry show an exceptional and honourable freedom from crime, their proportion per 1,000 men being 10 courts-martial and 450 minor punishments; while the Royal Engineers come next, and at no very great distance, with 18 of the former and 780 of the latter. As regards serious offences, the Cavalry of the Line and the Guards occupy a medium position, the proportion of courts-martial being about 60 per 1,000 in each case; the Artillery show 90, and the Infantry of the Line are distinctly the worst, with a proportion of 105; while in the matter of minor offences the Cavalry of the Line show 880 per 1,000 average strength, the Royal Artillery 1,160, the Infantry of the Line 1,660, and the Guards the very high figure of 2,270.

6th Dragoons. The Irish Times says:—"There seems no chance at all of the Inniskilling Dragoons being relieved in South Africa, and when their services are dispensed with, they will in all probability return to England, to be pulled together before proceeding on another tour of foreign service, as the rough work they have undergone since they went out to Natal two years ago has told very much upon them, notwithstanding the high state of efficiency they attained under Col. Gore's command."

19th Hussars. The Irish Times says:—"We understand that the present idea is to allow the 19th Hussars to remain in Egypt until they are sent on to India, to relieve the 10th Hussars. Strictly speaking, the 7th Dragoon Guards is the first regiment for Indian service, but there is a feeling against the employment of heavy cavalry out of Europe, and certainly experience has shown that heavy regiments deteriorate much sooner than light in a tropical climate."

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Capt. F. N. M. Skinner has been appointed to succeed Major G. A. French, C.M.G., as Inspector of Warlike Stores at Devonport, the period of Staff service of that officer having expired.

Capt. E. T. Browell, 1st Brig., London Division, has been appointed Staff officer of Artillery at Chatham during the instruction of the officers and men of the divisions of Royal Artillery in siege operations.

Orders received at Chatham direct V Baty. 1st Brig. to proceed to Shoeburyness on June 23, for the purpose of enabling the officers and men to go through their annual and competitive practice in gunnery with heavy guns.

Major J. F. Meiklejohn has been appointed to the command of A Troop Depôt, Royal Horse Artillery, at Woolwich.

Orders have been issued for a reduction in the standard of chest measurement of recruits for the Royal Artillery, the minimum chest measurement being reduced from 35 to 34 inches.

Col. Torriano, R.A., commandant of the Sheerness garrison, and the officers of the Royal Artillery stationed there, have decided to present Lieut. E. Dawson, R.A., who has just been promoted from the ranks, after 16 years' service, with a regulation sword and belt, bearing a suitable inscription.

Scots Guards. Capt. A. G. Gregory, formerly of the regiment, died at Styvechall Hall, Warwick, on the 17th inst., aged 48.

21st Royal Scots Fusiliers. Lieut. the Hon. A. S. Hardinge has been appointed aide-de-camp to Lieut.-Gen. the Hon. A. F. Hardinge, C.B., commander-in-chief of the Bombay Army.

42nd, Black Watch (Royal Highlanders). Capt. and Adjt. H. Lee died at Cairo on the 18th inst., of typhus fever, and was buried the same evening. The loss of this popular young officer is much felt throughout the regiment, and his funeral was largely attended. The deceased entered the Army April 30, 1873, and became capt. Sept. 29, 1882. He was appointed adjt. Jan. 15, 1879.

49th Berkshire Regiment. A correspondent writes:—"At 6 o'clock on the morning of the 12th inst. the 1st Berkshire Regt. entered a train which was drawn up outside the barrack gate at Abassayeh; at 6.20, the brigade-major gave the signal, and, to the farewell strains of the band of the 19th Hussars, the battalion steamed away from Cairo. I would wish to mention here the admirable way in which the different barracks in Egypt are connected by rail with the main lines, doing away with the necessity of marching men or carting baggage any distance. The journey to Alexandria occupied about seven hours, the train running up close alongside the ship. The embarkation was then carried out in that orderly and expeditious manner which marks a well-disciplined battalion, and within half an hour the men were comfortably berthed on board H.M.S. Jumna, where they met their old comrades of the campaign the 1st South Staffordshire, which had preceded them from Cairo. Sir Archibald and Lady Alison embarked during the afternoon, being received by Col. Corban, commanding the troops on board, and Capt. Singleton, R.N. About 4 o'clock, the ship sheered off, a guard of honour of the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry presenting arms, and the band of that regiment playing a farewell to the Commander-in-Chief. Great was the excitement and long the waving of handkerchiefs which were exchanged by those on board and the crowd of friends they left behind them. Wonderful order reigns on board this good ship, and both regiments pull together as one. On the evening of the 15th, the Negro Minstrels of the 1st Berkshire Regt. gave an entertainment on the quarter-deck, which, judging by the rounds of applause, was much appreciated by all hands, from our kind chief, Sir Archibald, to the youngest cabin-boy."

ROYAL MARINES.

The Admiralty have issued instructions that the non-commissioned officers and men of the Royal Marines doing police duty in Ireland, who may be recalled to the head-quarters of their various divisions to embark on foreign service, are not to be replaced in Ireland by other men of the corps. It is expected that the greater part of the Marines doing police duty in Ireland will shortly be withdrawn.

53rd King's (Shropshire Light Infantry). The bronze star given by the Khedive for the Egyptian campaign was presented to those men of the above regiment entitled to receive it on the 14th inst., by Major-Gen. the Hon. P. Feilding, C.B., at a full-dress parade in Fort Ricasoli, and a very brilliant assemblage of visitors witnessed the ceremony. The Major-General was received with the usual salute by the battalion in line, after which the men filed past to receive the decoration, and the ceremony concluded with a march-past and an address from the Major-General, who spoke as follows:—"I have had very great pleasure in presenting these medals, because I have reason to know that the men who have received them acted throughout the late campaign in such a manner as to uphold the high reputation which, for so many years, has been enjoyed by the Shropshire Regiment. The names emblazoned on the colour bear witness to the numerous instances in which the regiment has contributed to the renown of the British Army. It is just 90 years since the first of those names was inscribed, to commemorate the successful defence of the fortress of Nieuport by the 53rd Regiment, single-handed; and a year later, the same regiment was again brought into prominent notice, by the manner in which it covered the retreat of a British force at Tournay, at a sacrifice of nearly half their number, no fewer than five out of every eleven men having been left upon the field, an instance of devotion which caused it to be officially stated that 'there was perhaps not on record a single instance of greater gallantry and more soldier-like conduct than was exhibited on that occasion.' It is not surprising that a character, established by two such brilliant feats of arms, should have been maintained subsequently in the West Indies, in Spain, in Portugal, and in India, as we see also recorded upon the colours, but I allude to these bygone achievements now not only to remind you of what glorious traditions you possess, but also to impress upon you how careful you must be in all your dealings to avoid any action that might tend to sully the good name of a regiment that, for more than 100 years, has been honourably known as 'The Shropshire Regt.' It has been said that a war medal is, after all, only the mark of a lucky man, who has had the good-fortune to take part in a campaign without losing his life, but I hold it to be far more than that, viz., to be a badge of honourable distinction, which carries with it certain obligations upon the wearer, not the least of which is that he should conduct himself in such a manner as to show that he is worthy of honourable distinction. It is with no small satisfaction that I avail myself of this opportunity of congratulating Lieut.-Col. Truell upon the fact that he was able to send me a blank court-martial return for the month succeeding that of your arrival in Malta, where the facilities and temptations to drink are so unusually numerous; and, whilst I congratulate him, I thank you all for setting such a good example to the Army at large." After a suitable reply from Col. Truell, and a graceful allusion by the Major-General to the presence of Gen. Breton, who had commanded the regiment nearly half a century ago, the parade was dismissed, and, whilst the numerous visitors repaired to the mess-room to partake of refreshments and listen to the band, the men assembled outside the canteen, where beer was provided for each man; and it is worthy of remark that more than 300 elected to have tea or coffee instead of beer, a fact which points to one cause, at all events, of the general good behaviour of this battalion. The fact was not lost upon the Rev. Dr. Bullock, senior chaplain, who was present amongst the numerous visitors, and it was remarked that his countenance, always a cheerful one, literally beamed with delight. To those who knew him, it is needless to remark that his exertions in the cause of temperance have been as untiring at Malta as they have always been elsewhere, and he is well supported by Gen. Feilding and several other officers of high rank.

93rd Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. A correspondent writes:—"'An Old 93rd Officer' says, through the columns of your valuable Gazette, that the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders are not among 'the favoured ones as regards the best of the stations.' Now, I beg to differ from him. They were, not long ago, moved from Windsor to Glasgow. What is that but favouritism? He says,—'By the present territorial system, it is their proper quarter.' If we were all in our proper quarters, there would be few regiments in Ireland. My regiment's territorial county is Northumberland, and I can say with truth that, from the day the regiment was raised in 1674 to the present time, it has never seen its own county! And in the last 36 years they have passed 28 years in India,—viz., from 1847 to 1861, and from 1866 to 1880. They were through the Indian Mutiny and the Afghan Campaign of 1878-9-80. From Afghanistan they returned home in 1880, and after 12 months in England, they were transported to one of the worst stations in Ireland. After returning from the Mutiny in 1861, the regiment was stationed in England about three years, and in Ireland two years. Thence they returned to India in 1866. Now, 'An Old 93rd Officer' says the 93rd were two years in the Mediterranean out of a period of 10 years, viz., from 1872 to 1882, after which six years were spent between the Camps of Aldershot, Shorncliffe, and the Curragh.' I contend that the two former stations are to be preferred to any in Ireland."

MILITIA.

The Buffs (East Kent Regiment). The 3rd and 4th Batns. concluded their annual training at Shorncliffe on Saturday, and proceeded by special train to Canterbury, where they were dismissed. Before their departure an official inspection was made by Major-Gen. Newdigate, C.B., commanding the South-Eastern District. The General, who was accompanied by Col. Knight and Col. Buchanan, made a careful inspection of the men, who mustered between 800 and 900 strong, and afterwards expressed himself thoroughly satisfied with their drill and appearance.

South Wales Borderers. The 4th Batn. was inspected on Thursday, May 17, and Friday, May 18, by Col. Grogan, commanding 24th Regimental District. On Thursday morning, the battalion was inspected in marching-order. In the afternoon the inspecting officer saw the captains and subalterns in battalion and company drill. Two companies were also tested in their knowledge of outpost duty. On Friday morning, the battalion paraded in review order. At the close of the inspection, Col. Grogan addressed Lieut.-Col. Crewe Read and the battalion. He expressed the greatest satisfaction with all he had seen, and said he would have great pleasure in making a most favourable report of the high state of efficiency in which he had found the battalion. He said it showed that all the officers and non-commissioned officers must have worked hard. The officers present were:—Lieut.-Col. Crewe-Read; Majors Harrison and Lloyd; Capts. Agg Gardner, Hunter, Safe, and Gilbert Harrison; Lieuts. Pakenham, Pryce, Lloyd, Silber, Croft, Stanley, and Webber; Capt. and Adjt. Langlands; Qrmr. Dovaston; and Surg.-Major Harrison. Attached for duty:—Capt. Mansergh, 4th Batn. Royal Irish Regt.; Capt. Arrowsmith, 3rd Batn. Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers; and Lieut. Firman, Royal Welsh Fusiliers, musketry instructor.

The Black Watch (Royal Highlanders). The officers of the 3rd Batn. held their annual dinner at Limmer's Hotel, Conduit Street, on Thursday last. Viscount Stormont, lieut.-col. commandant, presided, and there were present Lord Charles Kerr, Capts. Hon. Alex. Hay, R. M. Alexander, Charles Dundas, Middleton, David Smythe, and J. C. Wylie; and Messrs. T. W. T. Dent, Victor S. Sandeman, Durrant-Steuart, and J. B. Brown-Morrison.

Duke of Cambridge's Own (Middlesex Regiment). The officers of the 4th Batn. held their annual dinner at St. James's Hall, on Tuesday. Amongst those present were,—Col. F. Robertson Aikman, V.C., Lieut.-Col. Robertson; Majors Thomson, Plummer, Tennant, Bowyer-Lane, and Stokes; Capts. Maclean, d'Albiac, Appleyard, Strange, and Pidcock; Lieuts. Rushbrooke, Elin, Cox, Mundey, Simpson, and C. A. Whyte; and Surg.-Major Rose, M.D.

Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. The recruits of the 4th Batn. assembled on the 14th inst., and went into camp on Irvine Muir, for 56 days' preliminary drill, prior to the assembly of the regiment on July 9. The strength in camp is 4 officers, 23 permanent staff, 4 Militia serjeants, 5 corporals, and 202 privates. The officers doing duty with the detachment are Capt. M. D. Campbell, Capt. A. J. Blackett-Ord, acting adjt., Surg.-Major T. Graham, and Qrmr. A. Barr.

The following regiments, on completion of training, will be dismissed to-day:—2nd Brig., Lancashire Division (Royal Lancashire Artillery), at Liverpool; 4th Batn. Devonshire Regt., at Exeter; 4th Batn., Essex Regt., at Warley; 3rd and 4th Batns. West Kent Regt., at Maidstone; 4th Batn. Royal Fusiliers, at Finsbury; and 3rd Batn. Suffolk Regt., at Bury St. Edmund's.

The under-mentioned regiments are ordered to assemble for 27 days' training and exercise on Monday:—3rd Brig., Eastern Division (Suffolk Artillery), at Ipswich, for Landguard Fort; 6th Brig., Scottish Division (Argyll and Bute Artillery), at Campbelltown; 2nd Brig., Welsh Division (Royal Carmarthen), at Carmarthen; 4th Brig., North Irish Division (Dublin City Artillery), at Linenhall Barracks; 3rd Brig., South Irish Division (Royal Cork City Artillery), at Charles Fort, Kinsale; 4th Batn. Lincolnshire Regt., at Grantham; 3rd Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, at Enniskillen; 5th do., at Lifford; 4th Batn. Connaught Rangers, at Galway; and the 3rd Batn. Derbyshire Regt. at Aldershot, in camp. The 3rd Batn. Welsh Regt. goes into camp to-day at Cardiff.

The Lancet says:—"Militia surgeons throughout the kingdom would do well to take note of the motion which Sir Eardley Wilmot has placed on the paper for June 8,—viz., to bring before the House, when in Supply, the injustice done to the Militia surgeons, in depriving them of their appointments and compulsory retirement without any pension or compensation. The success of this motion, we need hardly say, will depend very much on the numbers who may be found to support Sir E. Wilmot. This is not a party question, but one simply of justice to a body of professional gentlemen who have rendered good service in their day, and are suffering gross injustice by being deprived of compensation, as well as losing their appointments, from no fault of their own, but from the exigencies and so-called improvements of the service. Militia surgeons are the only body of public servants who have been cast adrift in their old age without provision being made for them in some way. This is probably the last chance they will have of getting their claims brought under public notice. They should, therefore, not allow this opportunity to pass without availing themselves of every means in their power of inducing Members of Parliament to support Sir E. Wilmot's motion."

A lecture on "The Musketry Training of the Militia" was delivered at the Royal United Service Institution on the 18th inst., by Col. G. G. Walker, 3rd Batn. Royal Scots Fusiliers, the chair being occupied by the Quartermaster-General, Sir A. Herbert, K.C.B. There was a numerous attendance, both of Army and Militia officers, among whom we noticed Major-Gens. Elkington, C.B., and Bulwer, C.B., and Col. Blundell, members of the Head-quarter Staff; also Major-Gens. Robertson, Dunne, and Mackay, Sir Lumley Graham, Sir John Burgoyne, Cols. Evelyn, Garnham, Walker, Hatherell, Draffen, Major Anderson, Sir A. Grierson, Capts. Malton, Tully, and Cockburn, and many others. The lecturer showed by statistics and extracts from official documents that, up to the present time, the musketry practice of the Militia generally leaves very much to be desired, both as regards the number of battalions annually exercised, the numbers of the men in these battalions who actually go to the targets, and the results of their practice when there. These unsatisfactory results the lecturer mainly attributed to the little attention devoted to this subject in the past by the authorities, in consequence of which a large, and unfortunately an increasing, number of battalions are unprovided with officer instructors, the supply of qualified non-commissioned officers being also lamentably sufficient; while the amount of range accommodation is miserably inadequate. Too often, also, the subject of musketry had been either entirely ignored, or treated in a perfunctory manner by inspecting officers, who were content to delegate that part of their duties to the Inspector-General. While acknowledging the substantial advance made by the issue of the Martini-Henry rifle, and the extended course of drill and practice enjoined by the Army Circular of 1882, he mentioned that these reforms must be comparatively barren of results, unless supplemented by others, and specially by a large increase of range accommodation, by the offer of greatly extended facilities to Militia officers for becoming practically acquainted with musketry, and by additional issues of ammunition for private and match shooting. The lecturer, however, deprecated inaction on the part of commanding officers of Militia, pending the official inauguration of reforms, maintaining that, even under existing disadvantages, much might be done to level up the shooting of the force. Referring to the recommendations of Sir D. Lyson's Committee on Musketry, he maintained that, owing to want of time, those referring to the Militia could only be carried out by sacrificing some part of the immense amount and variety of drill now exacted, and pointing out that we have now two tactical systems to study,—one, that of the past; the other, that of the present. He suggested that until the rank and file of the Militia were at least a little less incapable of shooting straight than they are at present, it might be wise to defer instructing them in the stately formations of lines and squares which still constitute the bulk of battalion drill in the pages of the Field Exercise. In conclusion, he expressed his confident hope that, with care and zeal on the part of its officers, seconded by support from those in authority, the Militia might be made capable of delivering as deadly a musketry-fire as that of the Turks at Plevna, or the French at Gravelotte. An interesting discussion ensued, supported by Col. Evelyn, Sir John Burgoyne, Gens. M'Kay and Robertson, Col. Garnham, Sir Lumley Graham, Capt. Tully, and many other officers. While considerable varieties of opinion were expressed on many points, there seemed to be practical unanimity as to the desirability of reverting to the old system of preliminary drill for Militia recruits, and also to the necessity of sacrificing some of the more ornamental portions of the field exercise, in order to devote more time to musketry.

YEOMANRY CAVALRY.

SUFFOLK. The Queen has been pleased to approve of the regt. being in future designated "The Loyal Suffolk Hussars."

WARWICKSHIRE. The regiment has completed a most successful training at Leamington. The strength was 226, as against 210 in the previous year, and the officers doing duty were Lieut.-Col. Paulet (in command), Major Lord Willoughby de Broke, Major and Adjt. Truman; Capts. Sir C. Mordaunt, the Earl of Craven, the Earl of Yarmouth, Alston, Lord Brooke, Armstrong, Hon. G. H. C. Leigh, and Hibbert; Lieuts. Starkey, Hetherington, Wilcox, Lord E. Seymour, J. R. Dugdale, Adderley, Tritton, F. Dugdale, and King; Surg. Bullock, Vet.-Surg. Rose, and the hon. chaplain, the Hon. and Rev. W. R. Verney. There have been absent with leave Col. the Earl of Warwick and Lieuts. Hobson, Candy, and Petre. The regiment prior to its dismissal underwent a most gratifying inspection by Col. Lord Ralph Kerr, C.B.

WEST SOMERSET—about 400 strong—brought their annual eight days' training to a close on Saturday, at Taunton, after having been inspected by Col. Vincent, 3rd Hussars. The regiment was put through various cavalry movements, under Col. the Hon. A. W. A. N. Hood, and afterwards tent-pegging and other military sports were engaged in.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

1ST LANCASHIRE RIFLES. Lieut.-Col. N. G. P. Bousfield, of Holy Wath, Coniston, near Ambleside, late M.P. for Bath, died on Monday at his residence in Grosvenor Place, aged 63. Col. Bousfield was born in 1829, and was lieut.-col. commanding the 1st Lancashire R.V. In 1874 he entered the House of Commons in the Conservative interest as the colleague of Sir Arthur Divet Hayter, in the representation of the city of Bath, but retired at the last general election. Col. Bousfield married, in 1872, Catharine, daughter and co-heiress of the late Mr. J. Barrett, of Holy Wath. The Liverpool Daily Courier writes with respect to the deceased:—"On Thursday last we referred to the resignation of Lieut.-Col. Bousfield, 1st Lancashire R.V., who next month would complete 24 years' commissioned service in the Volunteer Force, and who for half a dozen years previously was the honorary adjutant of the Liverpool Drill Club. This unrecognised corps was composed principally of gentlemen in the cotton trade, together with others on 'Change, all members being admitted by ballot. The club wore a military uniform of blue, faced with red, with black belts. Of course, it had no commissioned officers, but members were elected to serve as captain and subalterns for a limited period, after which they retired to the ranks and others were elected. Thus a large proportion of the members learned something of officers' duties, and when the Volunteer Force was established in 1859, a number of these were to a certain extent already for commissions in the new regiments. The drill, though taking place at Birchfield Barracks (now demolished), was not confined to that place, but on Saturday afternoons light drill with blank cartridge took place on the Crosby sandhills. In fact, the unrecognised Drill Club was in some respects more really instructive than some modern and duly authorised Volunteer Corps. In the early days of the Volunteer Force proper, Col. Bousfield was to be seen almost everywhere; at all parades of his own corps, and as a spectator at those of others."

17TH LANCASHIRE (SALFORD) RIFLES. The following extract is from the Manchester Courier of the 21st inst. If the report is correct, it is to be hoped that some explanation will be afforded Gen. Cameron of the "chairing" business, which seems to have been the prominent feature of the last day in camp:—"This regiment left their camp at the South Shore, Blackpool, on Saturday afternoon. The couple of hours before dinner were spent by the various companies in chairing their captains and lieutenants, the men carrying them shoulders-height to the canteen. After the arrival of the regiment at head-quarters, Lieut.-Col. Sharratt addressed the men, and said he was glad to see that the men had arrived back safe, in good condition and in possession of their former good character. He had not a single complaint to make; when the men were on parade they had never omitted to do their duty, when at liberty they were as lively as could be, as their harmless fun that morning had shown. He advised them after dismissal, when they were in the company of the many friends who were waiting outside, to keep strictly to moderation, and not disgrace the uniform they wore. The band played the National Anthem and the regiment dispersed."

Three Government brigade drills are to be held this (Saturday) evening, in Hyde and Regent's Parks, the corps ordered to attend being the 2nd and 3rd London, 1st and 2nd Tower Hamlets, and the 11th, 17th, and 23rd Middlesex Rifles.

The National Rifle Association have decided not to accept Messrs. John Brinsmead and Sons' offer of a prize of £10 10s towards the formation of a series of prizes, for judging distances, to be competed for at Wimbledon meeting. In thanking Messrs. Brinsmead for their offer, Captain Mildmay, the secretary to the association, says that, while desirous of encouraging the practice of judging distance, the Committee are of opinion that the object which Messrs. Brinsmead had in view in suggesting a competition would not be obtained at Wimbledon, where every inch of the ground is too well known to find a spot where the distances would not be known.

It is officially announced that, subject to the approval of the Secretary of State for War, the Volunteer Artillery camp at Shoeburyness and prize meeting will be from August 4 to August 10 for the northern division, and from August 11 to August 17 for the southern division; 54 counties in England, Scotland, and Wales will be represented.

The 4th, 6th, and 8th Lanarkshire R.V. proceeded by trains on the 17th inst. from Glasgow to Hamilton, to practice brigade drill in the South Haugh, Hamilton Palace grounds. Each regiment was accompanied by its bands and its ambulance detachment. On the arrival of Col. Collins, commanding the 26th and the 71st Regimental Districts, attended by Major Howard, Capt. Lomax, Capt. Cruden, as gallopers, and Major de Lancey, acting brigade-major, the brigade marched past in column, mass of quarter-columns, and line of quarter-columns. Several manœuvres in brigade drill were then executed, which were also followed by the attack formation. The regiments returned to Glasgow in the evening.

FRENCH COLONISING PROJECTS.

A decided step has been taken by the French Navy on the coast of Madagascar. Admiral Pierre's squadron entered Bembatoka Bay, on the north-west coast on May 16, and, after a bombardment of six hours, which inflicted great loss on the Hova garrison, landed an armed force, and possessed himself of Mojanga. Other places may be seized, for we are told that the Admiral has been instructed "to clear away the posts established," as the French allege, in "utter contempt" of their rights;" and in addition to extort from Queen Ranavalo concessions equal to those conferred by treaty on England, Germany, and the United States. Thus the work of disturbance has begun in an island which of late years has made large strides in the path of civilisation.

The following intelligence has also been received from the West Coast of Africa:—The French Government have resumed the Protectorate of Porto Novo and its tributary towns. The negotiations were carried out by Commodore Dories, of the French corvette Dupetit, and terminated on the 2nd ult. It was stated that 100 French troops were expected at Porto Novo in June next. The French have also taken forcible possession of Black Point and the territory up to Loango, to which the natives at first showed some opposition. The French flag is now flying at Black Point and other adjacent places, and soldiers are stationed along the route of the newly annexed territory.

H.R.H. the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief will hold a levée at 1 o'clock on Friday, June 1, at the Horse Guards, Whitehall, the number being limited to 150. Applications to attend should be addressed to the Military Secretary.

Owing to the change of quarters of his regiment from Malta to Barbadoes, the publication of several works by Lieut. Campbell Copeland, Royal Scots, is delayed.

The Irish Times says:—"The command of the troops at Shorncliffe is about to become vacant by the promotion of Col. J. Davis. Col. Davis was for many years in command of the 37th and 20th Regiments."

Major-Gen. H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught was on Friday last presented with the freedom of the Merchant Taylors' Company.

Major-Gen. G. B. Harman, C.B., has entered upon his duties as Deputy-Adjutant-General at the Horse Guards, on return from Alexandria.

"SAPO CARBONIS DETERGENS" is a physician's name for a remedy prescribed for the past quarter of a century for every variety of skin disease. The public have found that as a preventive of small-pox, scarlet fever, and measles, it is unequalled. See that the Latin name described above, and the words "WRIGHT, SOUTHWARK," are on each wrapper, and branded on each tablet, without which none is genuine.

THE CHANNEL TUNNEL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—A few days since, waiting at a railway-station for a train that was 20 minutes over-due on a short hour's journey, my thoughts reverted to the Channel Tunnel, the inquiry on which is now going on, and I venture to send you some of the points that occurred to me. Suppose this tunnel to be made, and that we were at war with France, how should we be affected? It has been suggested that a few hundred men might be thrown forward to seize the Dover end of the tunnel, before actual hostilities had broken out. On considering the possibility of this, the following reasons against it seem to me to be sufficient to allay fears on such an event:—(a.) It would be necessary for the French to concentrate an army in the north-east of France, within striking distance ready to push forward when the Dover end was secured; and this could hardly be done without its being known to our Military authorities, and they would, of course, take measures for closing, or defending, the exit from the tunnel. (b.) As I am now considering the possibility of a sudden attack at the moment of declaration of war, or even before that formality had been gone through, the question,—How about our Fleet? suggests itself; it could not have been defeated, and would hardly have been cajoled far away. Would it not have a word to say, at one end or other of the tunnel? (c.) Suppose the Dover end to have been occupied by a coup de main, and the immediate defences of the tunnel entrance so completely in the enemy's hands as to secure the tunnel, would not the Fleet be able very materially to disorganise the working of the train service at the French end? And it would certainly be able to assist the garrison of Dover at the English end. Considering the nature of the service and the contracted space at either end, the most perfect regularity would have to be maintained in time and order of sending on men, guns, horses, ammunition, and supplies, any failure of which must inevitably cause a jam, and delay of a fatal nature would ensue; for, meantime, our forces would concentrate on Dover, and recover the command of the entrance. If delays occur in ordinary times on short journeys, what is likely to happen when all is excitement and hurry,—a surprise being attempted? If, on the other hand, war had been duly declared, and the enemy had either defeated or drawn away our fleet, surely the Dover end of the tunnel would have been so protected, or entirely stopped up, as to prevent a rush being made through it, so that it could only be made available to an enemy by his landing and clearing it, in face of the garrison of the place, which, in this case, would have been reinforced, if only by Auxiliary and Reserve troops. So this is a thing not likely to happen. From the foregoing, it would appear as if the construction of the tunnel could do no harm to the safety of the country. But considering further and more likely moves on the part of an enemy attacking England with a view to invasion, I think it will be seen that the tunnel would prove a source of great danger and weakness, and this even if at the commencement of hostilities it had been closed, or its entrance so fully protected as to have prevented it being made any use of as a way for troops or supplies during the campaign. An enemy would not be likely to attempt invasion seriously till he had secured Naval supremacy, at least for a time; and having done that, he would not confine his attacks to Dover, or any specified point, but would naturally combine his movements so as to hamper and deceive us as much as possible. Now, supposing (for of course this is hypothetical) he had landed and defeated our first line, he would have little difficulty in detaching a force to cover and besiege Dover, and would certainly, if not overthrown before London (which would be his objective), sooner or later take it, and would then claim to hold both ends of the road, whether the tunnel was still intact or not, and would probably, if we had been regularly beaten, and been compelled to sue for peace, insist, as one of the articles of treaty, on holding Dover permanently, or at any rate on the demolition of its fortifications, and on our reinstating the tunnel. If our adversary was any other than France, and we had lost command of the sea, the tunnel would be of use to us if France showed a benevolent neutrality, but not otherwise. The result of this would be to compel us to form a system of defence on the line (roughly) of Hastings, Ashford, Canterbury; unless, indeed, and it well might be so, Chatham and Sheerness had shared the fate of Dover, when our line would be driven back on Maidstone and Gravesend, which means giving up the whole of East Kent for a future enemy to work his own sweet will in. And this danger would be increased, as it seems to me, purely for the sake of the stomachs of some timid old women of both sexes who would like to visit Paris, were it not for that dreadful sea passage; and to satisfy the sentimental cravings of some others of the same class who entertain Utopian ideas of the lion and lamb peacefully lying down side by side, and the lion satisfying the craving of his appetite on grass. I believe I have said enough for the present to point out a great danger that may be incurred. Much may be added to show difficulties and dangers that must be met in working the tunnel as a commercial concern. The nature of accidents, of locomotion and ventilation, both separately and in combination; difficulties of organising the traffic so as to prevent blocks at the end or even in the tunnel, &c.; but these matters are not necessarily connected with the military points under review, except in so far as they raise the question—Is the game worth the candle?—I am, &c.,

LONDON, SATURDAY, MAY 26, 1883.

A SPECIAL Army Circular was issued by the War Office on the 18th inst., amending the Royal Warrant for pay, promotion, &c., of March 11, 1882, in many respects, and is to take effect from April 1, 1883. The following provisions affect the officers of the Army Pay Department:—(1.) Honorary rank of Colonel to Chief Paymasters, after five years' service as such. (2.) Major to Paymasters, after ten years' service as such; and to Paymasters who entered the Department before July 1, 1881, after five years' service as Paymasters (of these latter there are twenty-three to be antedated in an early gazette to April 1). (3.) Chief Paymasters, after five years' service as such, 32s. a day. (4.) All officers of our Regular Forces under forty years of age, and with ten years' commissioned service in rank of Lieutenant or Captain, can be appointed to the Department. (5.) An officer acting for a Paymaster during leave of absence over fourteen days will receive 2s. 6d. a day, provided no other Army Pay Department officer is serving at the station. (6.) During the absence of a Chief Paymaster at a foreign station, extra-duty pay shall be issued to the officer on whom treasury-chest duties devolve. (7.) Paragraph 426 of Royal Warrant of March 11, 1882, is altered, to enable an Army Pay Department officer to retire after twenty-five, instead of thirty years' service, as heretofore, counting, however, five years' departmental service; if retirement be claimed when abroad, half the tour of foreign service must be completed. (8.) If the state of health of an Army Pay Department officer necessitates his retirement under twenty years' service, the pension or gratuity he would have been entitled to as a combatant officer will be granted to him. We are glad to see that the Authorities have conceded some of the points which have been repeatedly urged in these columns. The total omission, however, of the grade of Staff Paymaster from any benefit by these changes is somewhat remarkable. Two ranks are given to Chief Paymasters and two to Paymasters. Why, in the name of common-sense, were not two ranks (Major and Lieutenant-Colonel) allotted to the Staff Paymasters? This act is all the more extraordinary, when it is remembered that one of the reasons put forward by the War Office for not being in a position to reward Army Pay Department officers for their services, in Egypt was that the organisation was such that it was impossible to promote those deserving, without injustice to others. In the Commissariat and Ordnance Departments, Assistant-Commissary-Generals rank with Lieutenant-Colonels and Majors, and parity of reasoning would suggest that Staff Paymasters should be similarly divided. It is to be hoped the authorities will see the absurdity of this anomaly in the new organisation, and take steps to rectify it at once. As announced by us last week, servants' allowance has been made optional, but it should be clearly laid down that all other allowances are on the same footing, as the original Warrant creating the Department, issued in October, 1877, distinctly defined. Last, not least, the Authorities are still most obstinate on the important point of all, viz., an officer of the Department at the War Office, to conduct the personnel under the Accountant-General. Dissatisfaction will inevitably continue, until this is granted.

Lieutenant-General Sir Archibald Alison, accompanied by Lady Alison and Captain Parry-Okeden, King's Royal Rifles, A.D.C., may be expected in London to-day, from Egypt. Major Hutton, King's Royal Rifles, Assistant Military Secretary, remains in Egypt for the present.

We understand that Sir Hercules Robinson, G.C.M.G., Governor of the Cape of Good Hope, has offered the appointment of military secretary on his staff, which has been vacated by Major E. B. St. John, 35th Regiment, to Major G. E. Boyle, Rifle Brigade, who has been employed since May, 1880, as D.A.A. and Q.M.G. at Cape Town.

The Secretary of State for War has sanctioned an increase of relative rank in the case of the senior officers of the Army Veterinary Department, and in future an Inspecting Veterinary-Surgeon will have the relative rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, and 1st Class Veterinary-Surgeon of 10 years' standing that of Major.

The following sentence has been added to Article 91 of the Royal Warrant of March 11, 1882, relative to voluntary retirement of General Officers:—"In the case of our Royal Artillery or Royal Engineers, the same rule shall apply (that a Major-General may retire at or after the age of 57 years, and a Lieutenant-General or General at or after the age of 62 years, on the retired pay laid down in Article 972), so long as a Regimental Colonel promoted to that rank before October 1, 1877, shall remain on the full pay of his corps, each corps being kept distinct for the purposes of promotion."

The rates of pay of officers on the Staff of the School of Military Engineering, Chatham, have been amended. In future, the Instructor in Construction and Estimating will draw £700 per annum instead of £800 (this arrangement does not apply to the present holder of the appointment), while the pay of the Instructors in Field Works, Surveying, Photography and Electric Telegraphy is to be increased from £650 to £700 per annum each.

The pay of a Quartermaster-Corporal-Major of the Household Cavalry has been increased from 4s. 2d. to 4s. 6d. per diem, and of a Quartermaster-Serjeant of the Foot Guards from 3s. 8d. to 4s. per diem; of a Quartermaster-Serjeant of Cavalry from 3s. 10d. to 4s. 2d., and of a Quartermaster-Serjeant of Infantry from 3s. 6d. to 4s. per diem.

A very large number of officers and serjeants will go forward at the Army Musketry Examinations on June 18 next, for certificates of proficiency. General officers commanding districts have been ordered to furnish, without delay, to the Adjutant-General to the Forces, a return showing the number of examination-papers that will be required for officers and non-commissioned officers under their command. If a profuse issue of certificates of proficiency in "Theoretical Principles" will do it, an improvement ought soon to be apparent in the shooting of our troops. But until a little more practical common-sense be brought to bear on this all-important subject of musketry training, we may not hope for any change for the better.

The pay of the Professors of Military Drawing and Surveying and Military Administration and Law at the Staff College has been increased from £500 to £550 per annum, with £50 a year extra in lieu of quarters.

There is a consensus of favourable opinion as to the suitability of the Wallace spade for entrenching purposes, and we hear that it has been finally adopted as the entrenching-tool of the service. How it will be carried by the individual soldier, and in what proportion by infantry regiments in the field, are yet open questions. It is understood that these matters are under consideration by the Valise Equipment Committee. Their decision on this important subject is awaited with much interest.

The motion of Lord Stratheden and Campbell to call attention to the state of the Auxiliary Forces is fixed for Monday, June 4. We do not expect much from his lordship's motion, for he is not a shining light, either as a statesman or as a Volunteer. It is to be regretted that the subject—an important one, undoubtedly—is not in abler hands.

On going into Committee of Supply on the Army Estimates, Sir Walter Barttelot will call attention to the present state of recruiting, and to the crime and waste of the Army, and its effects upon the efficiency of the Reserve; to the inexpediency of making any change in the colour of the uniform of the Army; and to the case of the Purchase Colonels compulsorily retired under the Warrant of 1881.

We are glad to notice that on going into Committee of Supply on the Army Estimates, that good friend of the Veterinary profession, Dr. Cameron, will call attention to the extent to which in recent wars the efficiency of the Veterinary Department of the British Army has been impaired by the want of Veterinary organisation in the Indian Army, and to the circumstances attending the purchase of transport animals for the Egyptian Expedition.

Except upon the contradictory principle of "how not to do it," can any unprejudiced or disinterested person for a moment defend the arrangement referred to in Commissary-General Watt's letter to the Times, under which the officer of the Commissariat selected to fill the post of "Commissary-General at Headquarters" is divorced from the exercise of the functions upon which he has been engaged during his whole service, and for which his experience necessarily specially qualifies him? Surely such an officer of long service and high rank in his Department is more capable of providing for the wants of the Army in supplies and transport than any gentleman of the War Office whom accident or seniority may now place in the position of Director or Assistant-Director of Supplies and Transport? As a slight illustration of possible inconvenience of a serious character arising from the present arrangement, we may instance the position of affairs when the Egyptian expedition was resolved upon. Mr. Haliburton, the Director of Supplies and Transport, who is a Commissariat officer on the Half-pay List, was incapacitated from duty by a serious accident, which prevented his attending at the War Office during the whole campaign. His place was filled by Mr. Lawson, the Assistant-Director of Supplies, who, though without the commissariat experience of Mr. Haliburton, was probably better fitted for the position than any other civilian in the office. But supposing Mr. Lawson's health to have given way, upon whom would the responsibility have devolved? Would recourse have been had to the Commissary-General in such an emergency, or would the gentleman next in seniority to Mr. Lawson have been considered to be better qualified? However, letting bygones be bygones, the experiment of separating the personnel and supplies has been tried, and has failed, even under circumstances peculiarly favourable to the success of the experiment, both Mr. Haliburton and Mr. Lawson being exceptionally good men of business, the former an officer who, but for an accident, would have attained high rank in the Commissariat, and who certainly is second in ability to no officer of the Department.

It has been ruled that a Warrant Officer may be promoted to a Quartermastership up to the age of 45 years.

The following rewards are in future to be given for target practice in the Cavalry, Infantry, Engineers, and Colonial Corps. To the best shot among the privates and unpaid lance-corporals, £5, and a badge of cross carbines or rifles, worked in gold; to the second best among the privates and unpaid lance-corporals, £3, and a badge of cross carbines or rifles, worked in gold; to the best shot among the corporals (including the paid lance-corporals), £3, and a badge of cross carbines or rifles, worked in gold; to the best shot among the privates and unpaid lance-corporals in each troop or company, where 40 men or upwards have been exercised, £2 10s., and a badge of cross carbines or rifles worked in gold; to the best shot among privates and unpaid lance-corporals in each troop or company, when 30 men and upwards have been exercised, £2, and a badge of cross carbines and rifles worked in gold; and to marksmen, £1 and badge of cross carbines or rifles worked in worsted.

From the Standard of yesterday, we learn that in order to lessen the alarming deficiency in the numbers of the British troops in India, which exceeds 9,000 men, it has been decided to offer a bounty of £10 each to time-expired men, to induce them to extend their service with their regiments to 12 years; and that the same terms will probably be offered to men on home service. Should the inducement offered to men serving in India not prove strong enough, we would suggest granting them a furlough of, say, six months at home. On the expiration of their leave, they would we are sure, be quite willing to rejoin their regiments.

The recent establishment of divisions of Commissionaires at Edinburgh and Glasgow has brought a very large increase of business to the corps. We are requested to state that at both these places there are applications from employers for ten able-bodied men, either pensioners or reservists, and at wages ranging from 22s. to 28s. per week. The demand for men has quite outstripped the supply.

It is proposed to have an annual dinner of the officers now serving, or who have served, in the Commissariat Department or Commissariat and Transport Staff, and that the Commissary-General at head-quarters has approved of the following officers as a Committee, to make the necessary arrangements as to time and place, due notice of which will be given as soon as possible:—Assistant-Commissaries-General Randall, C.B., Reeves, C.B., and Parkyn, and Captain Hallewell, D.A.C.G.

The Marquis of Hartington said, in replying to a question in the House of Commons on the 24th inst., that the Irish Militia were composed principally of artillery. The Marquis was misinformed, a not uncommon occurrence with Secretaries of State for War.

A class of officers has not assembled at the School of Instruction for Auxiliary Forces (Infantry), at Aldershot, for many months. If this "school" exists for no other purpose than that the Commandant and Adjutant of same may draw the emoluments appertaining to their sinecures, that purpose is certainly not apparent to the ordinary intellect.

On Monday last, at Aldershot the following extract from the proceedings of a District Court-martial, held during the previous week for the trial of an infantry serjeant, was published in the Division Orders, and read on parade at the head of each regiment in the command:—"Conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in that, at Aldershot, on or about April 29, 1883, he permitted certain sappers and private soldiers to enter the liquor-bar of the serjeants' mess without authority, he being present at the time, and caterer of the said mess. Finding: Guilty. Sentence: To be reduced to the rank of corporal." It goes without saying that the sappers and privates were there on that early Sunday morning for the purpose of obtaining drink. These grave breaches of discipline are usually discovered by the Military Police; but punishment and publicity seem to have no deterrent effect. This class of crime is unfortunately on the increase, and another serjeants' mess caterer is at present under arrest for a somewhat similar offence. An impartial person, not interested in these matters, who knows something of the interior economy of a regiment, must admit that it is utterly impossible that the sale of drink to unauthorised persons could go on morning after morning in a serjeants' mess, and the individual who is primarily responsible not know of it. It is incredible that what is known far and wide to private soldiers of many corps, should be unknown to the responsible regimental authority, who is popularly supposed to be aware of everything that is going on in his regiment.

A new form of shrapnel shell is to be introduced into the German Field Artillery. The number of balls in each shell will be increased from 123 to 160, and the weight of each ball reduced from 16·7 to 13 grammes. The number of balls in the heavy-field shrapnel will be increased from 210 to 270. An improved time-fuze for long ranges will likewise shortly be introduced.

Canada, Capt. Durrant, received her crew on Thursday from the hulk Bellerophon, preparatory to proceeding out of harbour for the trial of her machinery and guns.

Defence, Capt. Pollard, at Portsmouth. The court of inquiry, presided over by Rear-Admiral Curme, which was ordered to ascertain the causes leading to several mishaps to the Defence in the River Mersey, finished its duties on Saturday, after sitting eight days. The conclusions arrived at have been sent to the Admiralty, and their Lordships have to determine what, if any, punishment is to be awarded to the officers of the Defence, who are declared responsible for the defects in the moorings which caused the accidents. The decision of the Admiralty is awaited with considerable anxiety.

Encounter, Capt. George Robinson, arrived at Sheerness on Tuesday afternoon from the China station. She was inspected on Thursday morning by the Commander-in-Chief at the Nore (Vice-Admiral E. B. Rice, C.B.), who complimented Capt. Robinson on the efficiency of his crew and the cleanliness of his vessel. She is to be dismantled and paid off at Sheerness, after which she will be removed to Chatham, to be placed in the Fourth Division of the Medway Steam Reserve.

Fantôme was commissioned at Devonport by Com. W. C. Karslake on Jan. 1, 1880, and sailed thence for Jamaica on Jan. 26. During the commission she has gone over nearly 45,000 miles. The ship has been remarkably healthy, not a single death having occurred on board, and but few men invalided. With the exception of the senior lieutenant, who left the ship shortly after her arrival on the station, and Staff Surg. Lloyd, who was invalided last July, all the officers have remained in her throughout the commission, and but few changes among the men have occurred. The ship sailed in company each year with the Commander-in-Chief in his yearly cruise round the West Indies, and was employed on the fisheries on the coast of Newfoundland and Labrador in 1881, and was on her way there again when orders were received to pay off. Prior to leaving their ship at Bermuda, the crew mustered on the quarter-deck to say good-bye to their captain and officers. The hearty reception accorded to these as they came up from below prior to stepping over the side of their ship to embark on board the Humber, was proof sufficient of the cordial good-will which existed among all ranks on board the Fantôme under Com. Karslake.

Firm, Com. Fritz H. E. Crowe, was put into the steam basin at Sheerness on Wednesday morning, to have her defects made good. She has been in the dockyard hands for some time, and will shortly run her steam trials before entering upon her duties as tender to the Lord Warden at Queensferry.

Himalaya, Capt. H. St. L. B. Palliser, made a full-power trial of her machinery on Thursday, in the Channel. She will leave Plymouth this day on a round of troop service, embracing Gibraltar, Malta, and Alexandria. She has now been a whole winter repairing defects found to exist in the new engines and boilers recently supplied by Messrs. Maudslay, Sons, and Field, and considerable expense has been incurred in these repairs, which should not be allowed to fall upon the Admiralty.

Humber, Com. C. H. Hawkins, is having defects made good in Sheerness Harbour.

Lily, Com. Evans, arrived in Plymouth Sound on Thursday, from the China station. She was inspected yesterday, preparatory to paying-off.

Merlin, Lieut. and Com. Brenton, made a three hours' run on Thursday off Plymouth, to test her machinery.

Gladys, together with 230 seamen and Marines for the Miranda and other ships on the Australian station, left Portsmouth last Saturday in the Windsor Castle, hired sailing transport.

Digby, flagship of Vice-Admiral Sir John Commerell, V.C., Commanding-in-Chief on the North America and West Indies station, was at Bermuda on May 10; after refitting, she will proceed to Halifax towards the end of the month. The Garnet was at Bermuda, and will relieve the Dido as senior officer on the Barbadoes division about May 25; she would sail on May 17. The Fantôme, at Bermuda, will proceed to Jamaica about May 26. The Foam, at Bermuda, after refitting, will proceed for service on the Newfoundland fisheries; she would sail for Halifax about May 17. The Tenedos, at Halifax, will proceed as senior officer on the Newfoundland fisheries. The Dido, at Barbadoes, when relieved by the Garnet, will proceed to Bermuda to refit. The Griffon was at Bermuda on May 1, on passage to Haiti to relieve the Mallard. The Flamingo, at Jamaica, was ordered to Bermuda to refit, and then proceed for service on the Newfoundland fisheries. The Mallard, at Jamaica, when relieved by the Griffon, will proceed to Port Royal for general service. Considering the amount of sickness on board, she should be sent northwards instead.

Opal, Capt. Arthur T. Brooke, arrived at Madeira on May 22, with the Alecto, Lieut. and Com. Harston, in tow.

Raven, Lieut. and Com. Ross, which was commissioned at Sheerness a short time since, was inspected on Monday last by Capt. John D'Arcy, of the Duncan, and left on Thursday for the Australian station, first making a ten days' cruise in the Channel.

Salamis, paddle despatch-vessel, was removed from Chatham to Sheerness on Monday, to be repaired and brought forward for the China station as early as possible. She was floated into the steam basin on Tuesday, and a large staff of mechanics and others are now busily employed on her. It is thought that she will be ready for the pendant about the beginning of August.

Satellite, Capt. Charles B. Theobald, which has been commissioned for the Pacific station, left Sheerness on Saturday morning last for a six days' cruise, before finally starting for her destination. She was ordered to call in at Devonport to have defects made good, if any should be discovered

Warrior, Capt. E. S. Adeane, C.M.G., is to be replaced by the Shannon, which left Plymouth on Thursday for Portsmouth.

Wye, Staff Com. A. W. Miller. A court-martial assembled on board the Victory at Portsmouth, on Tuesday, for the trial of Staff Com. Andrew William Miller, Navigating Lieut. Henry Backler, and Mr. George Hammond, boatswain, of H.M.S. Wye, for having run the ship ashore on a shoal off Ras Metrama, in the Gulf of Suez, on April 23. The Court was composed of the following officers:—Capt. C. J. Rowley, A.D.C., of the Duke of Wellington (president); Capt. W. Arthur, A.D.C., Hector; Capt. P. H. Colomb, Asia; Capt. W. R. Kennedy, Lord Warden; Capt. F. Durrant, Canada; Capt. H. Hand, Crocodile; Capt. C. S. Cardale, Euphrates; Capt. W. Stewart, Valorous; Capt. A. E. Dupuis, Serapis; Capt. A. K. Wilson, Hector; and G. P. Martin, Esq., Deputy-Judge-Advocate of the Fleet. The Deputy-Judge-Advocate read the letter from the Admiralty directing Capt. Rowley to assemble a court for the trial of the prisoners named for having run the ship ashore on a shoal at Ras Metrama, in the Gulf of Suez. Capt. Miller then objected to Capt. Cardale being one of the officers composing the court, as he would be called as a material witness, and, having been on the spot at the time, he might have formed a prior opinion in the matter. The Court decided to allow the prisoner's objection, and Capt. Cardale withdrew. Capt. Sarratt, late commander of the Wye, was allowed to appear as prisoner's friend. The Deputy-Judge-Advocate then read the circumstantial letter addressed by Capt. Miller to Vice-Admiral Lord John Hay, Commander-in-Chief on the Mediterranean station, and which stated that, at 1.40 a.m. on April 23, H.M.S. Wye, in his command went ashore on the shoal off Ras Metrama, and remained there about eight hours and a half. The weather was hazy and the wind north-west, three to four. The sea was smooth, and the ship was going at the rate of nine and a half knots an hour. The tide was falling about one-third ebb. The engines were, on the grounding of the vessel, at once reversed, the weights got aft on to the starboard side, and the bower anchor laid astern, with a steel wire hawser attached. At 7.30 a.m. on the following day H.M.S. Euphrates hove in sight, and came to render assistance, but before her steel hawser could be got on board, the Wye came off the shore at 10.40 a.m. He apprehended that no damage was done to the ship, as she showed no sign of leakage, and the bottom where she went ashore was composed of soft sand. The lowest depth of water at the bow was 6 ft., amidships 12 ft., under the taffrail five fathoms, and under each counter 18 ft. to 20 ft. The rise and fall was from five to six feet. He could only attribute the ship's position on the shore of the Gulf to the influence of a strong current induced by the spring tides, and for which he was not prepared, as it was stated in the sailing directions that the tide was fair up and down the Gulf. He added that he took the precaution on the evening of April 22 to ascertain the deviations of several points to be set during the night. He had also before leaving Aden had the ship swung for the adjustment of her compasses. The Court, having heard evidence in support of the charge, as well as for the defence, honourably acquitted Navigating-Lieut. Backler and Mr. Hammond, admonishing Staff Com. Miller to be more careful in future. On the conclusion of this case, Thomas Brown, boatswain of her Majesty's ship Euphrates, was placed upon his trial for being drunk while on duty on the night of the 9th ult. The court found the charged proved, and, as the prisoner had already been previously convicted by court-martial, dismissed him from her Majesty's service.

The Admiralty have awarded the medal for "long service and good conduct" to the under-named petty and non-commissioned officers and men:—James F. L. King, coxswain of the launch, of the Excellent; Robert Cross, serjeant, of the Repulse; John Hill, private, R.M.L.I., of the Himalaya; Simon Lima, additional cook, of the Euryalus; Edward Davies, armourers' crew, of the Valiant; Richard A. Clear, chief gunner's mate, of the Cambridge; Jas. J. Green, ship's corporal (1st class), of the Jumna; Francis Hartley, master-at-arms, of the Hercules; Benjamin Davis, chief boatman, and R. I. Edwards, commissioned boatman, of the Coastguard; Charles Fletton, private, R.M.L.I., of the Repulse.

"M. Ferry, the French Premier, believes in gunpowder as a civilising agent, but he should not be too exacting on our credulity. To supply M. de Brazza with 100,000 flint muskets or fowling-pieces, with ammunition, and then to ask us to believe that they are 'destined for a pacific object,' 'as guns are the current coin of Central Africa,' is really too bad, especially when he is sending troops from Algiers 'to reinforce M. de Brazza.' What on earth can the peaceful M. de Brazza want reinforcing for, when he has 100,000 of the current coin of peace with him?. Perhaps M. Ferry fears that Mr. H. M. Stanley will not look upon the 100,000 guns as having been sent to the Congo with a 'pacific object.' Hence the reinforcements." —Hampshire Telegraph.

Admiral Hobart Pasha has come to England to be present at the trial of a new and improved torpedo invented by Col. Lay, which is being constructed by Messrs. Yarrow, on the Thames. This new torpedo is intended to secure a speed of 16 knots. It will be driven by two screw propellers, and will pay out its own electric cable in the same way as do the earlier Lay torpedoes. It is 26 feet long, and carries a very heavy charge of dynamite. The trials will commence early in June.

Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil.—Surpassingly Efficacious as a Restorative Medicine and Food.—Dr. Whitmore, Medical Officer of Health, St. Marylebone, writes:—"My own somewhat lengthened experience as a medical practitioner enables me with confidence to recommend Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil, as being more uniform in quality, more certain in its effects, more palatable, and infinitely less likely to disagree with the stomach than the pale oil. The practice which often prevails of mixing certain ingredients with cod liver oil, to render it agreeable to the taste, is highly objectionable, for we have it on the authority of Dr. de Jongh himself, that anything which sophisticates it takes largely from its therapeutic value. If I were asked for an explanation of the marked success which for so many years has attended the administration of Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil, I should say that it is owing to its extraordinary medicinal, dietetic, and regiminal properties, and which are found to exist in no other medicine that I am acquainted with, in such uniform combination." Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil is sold only in capsuled imperial half-pints, 2s 6d; pints, 4s 9d; quarts, 9s; with his stamp and signature, and the signature of his sole consignees, on the capsule and label under wrapper, by all Chemists. Sole Consignees, Ansar, Harford, and Co., 77 Strand, London.

NAVAL NOTES.

The annual meeting of the Royal Naval Scripture Readers' Society, 4 Trafalgar Square, took place at the Royal United Service Institution, on May 22, under the presidency of Admiral Sir A. C. Key, K.C.B. The report stated that, although in many quarters there was an increasing desire for the attendance of the readers, yet there had been a serious falling-off in the income. The year 1881 had seen a deficit of £150, and 1882 a further diminution of £112. Sixteen readers were employed. The chairman referred to the mass of pernicious literature which the agents of secularism were circulating amongst the Fleet, and within the last few days he had received a deputation from petty officers and seamen, requesting the Admiralty to legislate upon it, but that was impossible, and it was against the evil which this abominable literature would produce that the efforts of this society would prove so beneficial. The Rev. H. W. Webb Peploe said that it was a shame that the society was so badly supported, and trusted that more ladies would come forward and help all who had worked so well hitherto. The Hon. and Rev. E. Carr-Glyn suggested that the claims of the society should be brought more prominently before the Church. A vote of thanks to all who have laboured during the past year for the society was proposed by Rev. C. E. York, R.N., and seconded by Sir T. Brassey, M.P.; and a vote of thanks to the chairman was proposed by Admiral Sir W. King Hall, and seconded by the Rev. J. B. Harbord.

"The Admiralty having determined to replace the schooners recently paid off on the Australian station by gunboats of the Raven and Goshawk class, which are only square-rigged on the foremast, it is to be hoped that before sending them to the Antipodes their Lordships will consider the advisability of square-rigging these small craft on the mainmast, as, when cruising among the islands of the Western Pacific, should their coal supply fall short, they would prove anything but handy vessels among the reefs with their present sail-power, which is lamentably deficient, their present rig rendering them most unhandy."—Hampshire Telegraph.

Notice is given by the Accountant-General of the Navy and Comptroller of Navy Pay, Admiralty, that preparations are now being made for the intended distribution of the tonnage bounty awarded for the slave-dhow Fathelkheir, or Fatelbhar, captured on Jan. 6, 1882, by the Eclipse. Due notice will be given of the date proposed for the commencement of distribution; and, at the same time, the amount of an individual's share in the respective classes will be announced.

The numerous friends of the late Mr. John T. Sueter, Paymaster, R.N., will be pleased to learn that a handsome marble cross to his memory has been placed in Haslar Cemetery by a few old Naval friends on the home station, bearing a suitable inscription. It will be recollected that Mr. Sueter's death took place somewhat suddenly in August last, from an attack of diphtheria, contracted when in the performance of his duty as paymaster of the Asia, and this spontaneous token of esteem for the deceased officer must be exceedingly gratifying to his wife and children. Mr. Sueter was an officer of recognised zeal and ability in his profession, and but for his untimely death would have filled the post of secretary to the present Commander-in-Chief in the Mediterranean, Admiral the Lord John Hay, by whom we have reason to know his loss was very much regretted.

The three years for which Capt. Alexander Buller, C.B., was appointed to command the gunnery-ship Cambridge, at Devonport, expire in August next, and already there is some talk as to the gallant officer's successor.

From a statement in the report of the Inspector of Naval Schools, it appears that the children of Coastguardsmen on some parts of our coasts are permitted to grow up with little or no instruction. The very ignorant condition of many such children who have been admitted into the Greenwich Hospital School, affords a painful evidence of this fact; and attention has been called to the great difficulties under which the managers of schools labour in the sparsely populated and remote districts in which the few houses of a Coastguard station are often situated. Where the maintenance of a school has been shown to be important to the men's families, the Admiralty have, it appears, assisted schools. This is over and above the Admiralty's contribution to the School Board rates in respect of Coastguard buildings, fixed at 3d. in the pound on the rateable value, which if paid on every such building in the entire Kingdom would amount, it is stated, to only £300 per annum.

After the work upon the Victoria and Albert had been suspended for several weeks for further consideration, it has been determined to proceed with the repairs at Portsmouth, instead of building a new steel yacht. The cost to hull and machinery is estimated at £54,000, and 12 months will be consumed in the work.—Times.

Lord Dunsany, in a letter to the St. James's Gazette on "The State of the Navy," makes the following remarks, which we consider very much to the point:—"The letter signed 'G. E. Price,' on which you commented in Friday's St. James's Gazette, was from the gallant Member for Devonport, a retired commander R.N., an officer who has served in ironclads as Gunnery lieutenant or First lieutenant,—one, therefore, who knew what he was writing about. Like many other Naval officers, Capt. Price considers that successive Governments, rather than incur unpopularity by large estimates, have allowed our Navy to fall dangerously below the strength confessedly required by our position. As you justly say, 'In fact, this is admitted by all Admiralty officials,—as soon as they are out of office.' But is this acquiescence in a state of things which might any day subject us to a disgrace worse than Sedan creditable to any First Lord? Has he no alternative but to retain office, content to risk the national honour and safety, so long as he can conceal the facts, hoping that the contingency of a great war may not occur in his time? We know the issue of such simulated confidence in France; where, when all was wrong and every needful supply was wanting, the official assurance was, 'All is provided for, even to a gaiter-button.' The natural issue of such blindness came at Sedan. Of course, nothing of the kind can ever happen to England; but if it were by any chance to happen, what would be the national feeling towards a First Lord who, instead of providing an adequate fleet, was satisfied to assert its existence? What would be the action of an infuriated and unreasoning mob? A London mob demanded the execution of Admiral Byng, less guilty than the Admiralty of the day, and he was sacrificed. We do not behead Ministers in these days, but a mob might take the law into their own hands and hang the First Lord of the day before the Admiralty. Would it be surprising? Capt. Price could not render a better service to his country than by dispelling the unfounded belief in a superiority of force which will soon be a tradition of the past."

The death is reported, at Southampton, of Stephen Lewes, a Naval pensioner, at the age of close upon 106 years. He was born on June 24, 1777, and was "pressed"—he then being able seaman in the merchant service—into the Navy in 1802, and was soon promoted to be captain of the maintop. He served in several Naval engagements, and also took part on shore in some of the battles of the Peninsular and American Wars, and while thus actively on duty he was called upon to take charge of his own son, who had been a deserter, and bring him under arrest to England. Lewes was a widower, and he is the father of seven children, the eldest of whom, a son, is about 68 years old. The great age of the man who has just died, it is said, can be proved by documentary evidence, which places beyond doubt the fact that he was 105 years and 11 months old.

Mr. George Rendel, the Professional Lord of the Admiralty, and Mr. Barnaby, the Director of Naval Construction, completed a two-days' inspection of the new work in progress at Portsmouth Dockyard on May 22. The principal purpose of their visit was to decide upon the fittings for the new armaments. They examined the Vavasseur arrangements of the Canada, Cordelia, and Calliope, and spent some time on board the Colossus consulting as to the fitting and mounting of the 6-in. gun which it is proposed to place upon the stern walk. This ship is being pushed forward towards completion. The forward turret is now wholly armoured, and the hydraulic presses, carriages, and slides for the couple of 43-ton guns are in position. The armouring of the after-turret will be begun during the present week. The colossal steel armour tube, which will support the conning-tower and protect the voice tubes and telegraphs to the steering-gear and other parts of the ship, has been received from the works of Sir Joseph Whitworth. It is 14 ft. in length and has a diameter of 2 ft. The bore is 7 in., thus giving an armoured thickness of 8½ in. This is quite a novel fitting.

HOW TO AVOID THE INJURIOUS EFFECTS OF STIMULANTS.—The present system of living—partaking of too rich foods, as pastry, saccharine and fatty substances, alcoholic drinks, and an insufficient amount of exercise—frequently deranges the liver. I would advise all bilious people, unless they are careful to keep the liver acting freely, to exercise great care in the use of alcoholic drinks, avoid sugar, and always dilute largely with water. Experience shows that porter, mild ales, port wine, dark sherries, sweet champagne, liqueurs, and brandies, are all very apt to disagree; while light white wines, and gin or old whisky largely diluted with soda water, will be found the least objectionable. ENO'S FRUIT SALT is peculiarly adapted for any constitutional weakness of the liver; it possesses the powers of reparation when digestion has been disturbed or lost, and places the invalid on the right track to health. A world of woes is avoided by those who keep and use ENO'S FRUIT SALT, therefore no family should ever be without it. CAUTION.—Legal Rights are protected in every Civilised Country. Examine each bottle, and see the Capsule is marked "ENO'S FRUIT SALT." Without it, you have been imposed on by worthless imitations. Sold by all Chemists, price 2s 9d and 4s 6d. Directions, in Sixteen Languages, how to Prevent Disease. Prepared only at ENO'S Fruit Salt Works, Hatcham, London, S.E., by J. C. ENO'S Patent.

2/- TEA OF EXTRAORDINARY QUALITY,

As Supplied to Dukes, Earls, Barons, and the County Families of England.

THE unprecedented depression in the Tea Market now enables COOPER COOPER and CO. to offer such value in Tea as would, a few years ago, have been considered simply impossible, but is now a realised fact, for at

TWO SHILLINGS

A POUND,

COOPER COOPER and CO. are able to supply Tea of amazing strength and exquisite quality, while the choice kinds at Three Shillings a pound, which are coming to hand in lessening quantities year by year, COOPER COOPER and CO. have the greatest difficulty, after ransacking the markets of China and India, in procuring in sufficient quantities for their consumption. These choice and selected Teas COOPER COOPER and CO. have the honour to supply to many Foreign Princes, Potentates, Ambassadors, &c.

THE enormous success—without competitors and with no rivals—which has attended the sale of COOPER COOPER and CO.'s Teas is perhaps unparalleled in the annals of this or any other trade, and can only be accounted for by the way in which their business has been conducted, which has gained the patronage of all classes. COOPER COOPER and CO. number among their customers Princes, Dukes, Earls, Barons—in fact, a large per-centage of the entire Peerage—Church dignitaries of every grade, and ministers of all denominations, County Families from every county in Great Britain, and from all classes of the community. COOPER COOPER and CO. are also shipping their Teas every day to foreign parts. Paris would appear to draw its supplies from COOPER COOPER and CO.'s Stores, and in almost every large city, and especially in the seaport towns of Europe, Asia, Africa, and America—in fact, to the very ends of the earth—COOPER COOPER and CO.'s Teas and COOPER COOPER and CO.'s name are known.

COOPER COOPER and CO. have their own Agents in China and India, and are consequently able to sell their Tea at a price which is actually under that which wholesale merchants, brokers, &c., charge to ordinary dealers. They are enabled to do this as they have not the expense of travellers, and no bad debts to provide for, their terms being strictly for nett cash before delivery. They also save an immense amount by keeping no horses and vans—many houses having from 20 to 100 horses, vans, and two men to each, to deliver, sometimes, half-a-pound of tea miles and miles away, this overwhelming expense having all to come out of the quality of the Tea.

COOPER COOPER and CO. have, in fact, no expense but indispensable rent and labour, which in consequence of still-increasing business, amount only to a fraction on the price of the Tea they sell.

COOPER COOPER and CO. may mention that they include among the regular buyers of their Tea a great many London Tea Brokers, from the simple fact that it can be purchased cheaper and better from them than from the importers themselves.

COOPER COOPER and CO. sell their Teas for ready money only. They have thus no provision to make for bad or doubtful debts.

AND now a word about this year's crop. It is hardly satisfactory on the whole, but some of the choice crops secured by COOPER COOPER and CO. are simply delicious, COOPER COOPER and CO. are still enabled to sell the very best at Three Shillings a pound, and it is veritably a marvel of goodness—a "thing of beauty" and "a joy for ever." But the most astonishing thing of modern times is the Tea at Two Shillings a pound which COOPER COOPER and CO. are now selling. The rich and wealthy buy this Tea. Ladies drink it in their boudoirs and at their early drums, and, as one of our country patrons writes, "It is lovely."

COOPER COOPER and CO. may add that Indian Tea is becoming day by day a greater favourite among the best judges, and this year's crop has been prepared with greater care than ever. It is strong, pungent, with most agreeable flavour, and the better it is known, the more it will be liked. The Tea is 3s a lb., for the best.

COOPER COOPER and CO. charge threepence a package (of any size) for delivering their Teas at any of the Railway Stations in London, or any place within the limits of the London Parcels' Delivery Co., thus putting all on an equality; those who send for their tea, and those who require it sent.

COOPER COOPER and CO. do not pay railway carriage, but are willing to compound for the same on receiving the sum of 6d. in addition to the price of the Tea, to any Railway Station in England, on quantities of the value of £2 and upwards. Families residing in the country can thus, by clubbing together, have their Tea sent almost carriage free, as well as save about 9d a lb. in the cost.

Besides Sir Archibald and Lady Alison, the following officers embarked in the Jumna:—Captains Parry Okeden, A.D.C., Staff, to England; Grove, Royal Sussex Regiment, in charge of details; Lieutenants Wright, 19th Hussars; Cleeve, R.E.; Captains Mortimer and Stradling, A.P.D., invalided; Quartermaster Hopkins, Commissariat and Transport Staff; Brigade-Surgeon Tippetts, A.M.D.; Surgeons-Major Clapp, Shaw, Riordan, FitzGerald, Anthonisz; Surgs. Barrow, Power, Donovan, Twiss, Swaby, O'Donnell, Hachett, Truman, Davis; Surgeon-Major Pollock, in medical attendance on Sir A. Alison; Lieutenants Murray Dunlop and Heygate, R.A.; and Nursing Sister Thompson.

The Jumna also carried the 1st Staffordshire Regt. for Malta and the 1st Berkshire Regiment for Gibraltar; four warrant officers, 34 non-commissioned officers and men of the Commissariat and Transport Corps, for England; 20 details for England, and seven for Malta; in all some 1,600.

Colonel Minto Elliott, commanding the R.A., and Captain Newcome, Brigade-Major, will leave for England by the Calabria.

Leave of absence has been granted to Major C. H. Miers, Cameronian Highlanders, from May 8 to August 22; Lieutenant G. E. Wood, 13th Hussars, May 7 to June 7; Lieutenant-Colonel Doran, 1st West Kent Regiment, May 11 to May 26; Deputy-Surgeon-General Fox, A.M.D., May 13 to May 26; Major A. F. Kidston, Royal Highlanders, May 15 to August 31; Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel Cramer, King's Royal Rifle Corps, May 15 to August 31; Captain Green, Brigade-Major, R.E., May 16 to July 16; Lieutenant Donne, Royal Sussex Regiment, May 15 to September 1.

Brigade-Surgeon Lofthouse is transferred from Alexandria to Cairo district.

Major W. S. Darley, South Staffordshire Regiment, will proceed to England on appointment as Adjutant 3rd and 4th Militia Battalions, instead of disembarking with his regiment in Malta.

Surgeon C. J. Addison, A.M.D., has been struck off the strength of the command from the 4th inst.

Sir Archibald Alison, before leaving Egypt, issued the following in General Orders:—"The Lieutenant-General commanding cannot quit Egypt without tendering his best thanks to the Generals commanding Brigades, to the officers of the Staff and Departments, to the officers commanding regiments and corps, and to all the officers serving under their orders, for the ready support which he has uniformly received from them; to the non-commissioned officers and men, for their admirable conduct during this, the first period of the occupation, a conduct which has called forth from Lord Dufferin those graceful and generous words of commendation which have appeared in a recent General Order. The Lieutenant-General feels proud at having had under him such a body of officers and men, and he will ever look upon his command in Egypt as one of the happiest periods of his life. In handing over the command to his successor, the Lieutenant-General hopes that the same good conduct and kindly feeling towards the natives, which has distinguished our Army of Occupation, will continue undiminished. He wishes all health and happiness to the troops, to whom he now bids farewell." Sir Archibald leaves Egypt after more than nine months of good work. Upon his arrival in July, with a force insufficient to take the offensive, the task of governing and preparing for defence a ruined city devolved upon him. The population of Alexandria is never one of the most easily managed, but at this time it consisted mainly of incendiaries and looters, while the few respectable inhabitants who remained were in a not unnatural condition of excitement, and each apt to consider their own individual interests as all-important. The failure of the water supply rendered the position peculiarly inconvenient, if not critical, and the very vaguest notion existed as to either the strength or position of the enemy. Taking up a position at Ramleh, the General, by careful reconnaissances, succeeded in obtaining sufficient information as to the enemy's whereabouts, and by continually keeping him employed, tempted him to believe that the main attack would be made from the north. Shortly after the departure of the 1st Division for Ismailia, he was ordered to follow in command of the Highland Brigade, upon whom, it is now generally admitted, fell the brunt of the final fight at Tel-el-Kebir. Sir Archibald was next selected to push forward from Cairo and to occupy Tantah, where he received the submission of a considerable force. Upon the departure of Sir Garnet, he was selected to command the Army of Occupation, and the position required more tact and judgment than might at first sight seem apparent. But Sir Archibald's services towards the success of this campaign were not rendered solely in Egypt. As head of the Intelligence Department, he must have the main credit for the very complete and accurate information contained in the confidential report published by that department. Sir Archibald has enjoyed in Egypt a singular popularity, not confined to the men under his immediate command. The sailors appear to have taken a great fancy to him, and shortly after the brush of August 5 I once overheard a Jack looking rather contemptuously at some dozen "land Admirals," and sum-up his verdict to a mate:—"'Spect that old one-armed chap is as good as the lot of 'em, Bill!"

Major-General Earle, commanding the Alexandria Garrison, assumes temporary command of the entire forces in Egypt, until the arrival of General Stevenson.

By the departure of the South Staffordshire and Berkshire, the force is now reduced to 7,000 men. The 46th and 75th still show over 10 per cent. of sick, and it might be well if these regiments were ordered home, leaving a force of 5,500 men amply sufficient for all purposes.

The Royal Sussex, stationed at the Abbassiyeh in Cairo, are supposed to be rather in the way of General Wood Pasha's new army, and the transfer of this hospitable regiment to Alexandria would do much to check the melancholy that reigns in that city of the dead. As the Khedive is shortly expected there, it might be well to have a second regiment, and hopes are centred in the equally hospitable 60th. Certainly the Highlanders are enough to preserve peace in tranquil Cairo.

A thousand guests are already invited to the Khedive's ball on the 7th. It is feared, however, that they will be mostly of the male kind.

The Queen has approved the appointment of the Marquis of Lansdowne as Governor-General of Canada, in succession to the Marquis of Lorne, who will retire in October next, on the completion of the period for which he was appointed.

The fourth annual Military Tournament will take place at the Agricultural Hall, Islington, from the 18th to the 23rd of June next. The committee of officers to manage the tournament is presided over by Major-Gen. Higginson, C.B., commanding the Home District.

NOTES FROM ALDERSHOT.

(FROM AN OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENT.)

The Camp has been quiet during the week, little but ordinary regimental and garrison routine work going on. The Infantry brigades, under their respective Brigadiers, rehearsed, early in the week, the feu-de-joie and movements for the Queen's Birthday celebration of to-day (Saturday). The Derby week is usually uneventful here, and many officers, availing themselves of Horse Guards' permission granted last week, proceeded on leave of absence, returning in time for the parade to-day. Even musketry, that all-absorbing business, was suspended for one whole day in each regiment, to allow of officers going to the races. Much interest is taken in racing matters at the Camp by all ranks, and when it was rumoured some little time ago that there would be no Divisional flat-races, it was feared that there might be some truth in it. For many years the Summer Race-meeting here has been looked forward to as the holiday of the year. To many it is a much more interesting meeting than the Spring Steeplechases, the course being conveniently near to the two Camps, and the weather less of a doubtful factor in the day's enjoyment than in the spring. Recent Army edicts concerning officers' luncheon-tents, &c., have been a severe blow to Military races, and those who have given their time and money freely in the past to make these meetings successful are now naturally much discouraged, not to say disgusted, by this development of energy in the wrong direction. The Royal Artillery Steeplechases were abandoned in April last through lack of support, and it was felt that the Camp races might also collapse. To the great satisfaction of all, however, an announcement has appeared in the Division Orders that a meeting will be held in the Divisional Court-martial Room, Head-quarters, on Monday next, for the purpose of passing the accounts of last race meeting, and to make arrangements for the July races; Major-General Sir F. FitzWygram, Bart., to preside. On Saturday last, at 1.30 p.m., the 6th Lancashire Volunteers fell-in on the parade-ground, P lines, South Camp, in marching-order, and after a few complimentary words from their commanding officer, Lieutenant-Colonel Bridgford, as to their general good conduct while in camp, marched off, headed by the band of the 85th King's Shropshire Light Infantry—between which regiment and the Lancashire lads there had been much fraternisation during the week—to the station, en route to Manchester. Many of the "old hands" witnessed their departure, and it was the universal opinion that even one week's drill had vastly improved the appearance of these scarlet-coated citizen soldiers, who marched out of camp with a well set-up military bearing equal to that of our best regiments of the Line. In this corps, at least, the proposed substitution of grey clothing for scarlet finds but little favour. The 6th Lancashires are proud of the historic red they wear, and a change of colour would be exceedingly unpopular with them. A Memorandum has been issued by the A.Q.M.G. of the Division, which gives the general arrangement for the use of ground for drills and manœuvres by the Division during the drill season. The Cavalry, Artillery, and Engineers will use the ground westward of the Farnham-Farnborough Road and the Fox Hills. The 1st and 2nd Infantry Brigades, ground south of the canal, taking care not to interfere with each other or with the mounted troops; the 3rd Infantry Brigade, ground north of the canal. The under-mentioned officers of Yeomanry Cavalry will join the School of Instruction for Auxiliary Forces (Cavalry) on the 1st prox., for a course of instruction:—Lieutenants Newton and Bateman, Derbyshire; Lopes, Cleave, Lewis, and Sillifant, Royal 1st Devon; Everitt, Worcester; Tod, Dorsetshire; Codrington and Miller, Gloucestershire; Wellesley, Hampshire; Bennett, North Somerset; Cobbett, Suffolk; Captains Gilmour, Erskine-Wemyss, and Lieutenant the Hon. H. F. H. Elliot, Fife Light Horse. A board of officers assembled in the lines of the 87th Royal Irish Fusiliers on Monday last, to report upon sixty-five stand of arms and a number of bayonets and scabbards lost or damaged during the recent campaign in Egypt. It is evident that there has been no undue haste in assembling this board. The 56th Army Signalling Class, which has been undergoing instruction at the Signalling School here since March 15 last, will finish its course next week, when the officers and non-commissioned officers composing it will immediately proceed to rejoin their respective corps. The 57th Class will be formed early next month. The 55th Cooking Class, which has been under training at the Instructional Kitchen since December last, will finish its course this month also, and a new class will be at once formed. Surgeon-Major Beattie, M.D., has been detailed to act as a member of the Committee on Equipment, &c., during the absence, on leave, of Surgeon-Major Gasteen, M.B. During the temporary absence of Deputy-Commissary-General H. A. Russell, C.B., in Egypt, Deputy-Assistant-Commissary-General Jeans will carry out the duties of the Ordnance Store Department at the Camp. Bearing on the subject of fees to magistrates' clerks, it has been decided, under authority, dated Horse Guards, 19th inst., that in those cases in which duplicate attestation of recruits were not prepared, and which occurred before the passing of the Army (Annual) Act, 1883, a copy of the attestation may be substituted for the duplicate attestation. It was intimated in the command on Wednesday that the musketry instruction of trained soldiers is not to be suspended, except on Tuesday for Divisional or brigade parades, or by special Divisional Order. The musketry instruction of recruits, when once commenced, is not to be interrupted to enable them to attend other parades, except by special Divisional Order. For the convenience of visitors coming from London to witness the Queen's Birthday celebration, the London and South-Western Railway Company have announced that an extra train will run to Aldershot on Saturday morning, leaving Waterloo at 9.30. The 2nd Battalion 18th Royal Irish Regiment—16 officers, 796 men, and four horses—from Malta, and the 31st Regiment—10 officers, 542 men, four soldiers' wives, and seven children, and four horses—from Gibraltar, may be expected to arrive at Portsmouth, in H.M.S. Jumna, on Monday next, whence they will be moved by railway to this station. These battalions will be accommodated—the former in the Centre Infantry Barracks, and the latter in the West Infantry Barracks, and both will be attached to the 2nd Brigade. Two officers and 50 men of the 3rd Battalion Derbyshire Regiment (2nd Derby Militia) arrived from Derby yesterday (Friday), to draw camp equipage for the battalion, which will arrive for annual training on Monday next, and will be encamped on Thorn Hill, and attached to the 3rd Brigade. The 5th Battalion Royal Irish Rifles (Royal South Down Militia), and the 3rd Battalion Royal Irish Regiment (Wexford Militia), are expected to arrive at the Camp for annual training about the 4th prox., and will be attached to the 1st and 3rd Brigades respectively, and encamped on Rushmoor and Church Plateau. A company of the 1st Battalion Coldstream Guards arrived from London on Saturday last for a course of military training, and are attached to the 3rd Brigade. Detachments of H and P Batteries, 4th Brigade, R.A., proceeded by rail on Saturday last to Shoeburyness for annual gun practice. The mounted portion of F Battery, B Brigade, R.H.A.—73 officers and men and 74 horses—proceeded by march on Wednesday en route to Oakhampton, for gun practice. K Battery, 1st Brigade, R.A.—four officers, 127 men, 12 women, 20 children, and 80 horses—arrived here from Dublin on Monday and Wednesday. Captain J. D. Coghlan will rejoin the 28th Foot, from the Commissariat and Transport Staff, next month. Quartermaster T. Phillips, A.H.C., on arrival home from Egypt, will be posted to Aldershot. The concert given by the officers and ladies of the Division, in the Assembly Rooms, on Monday last, in aid of the poor of Aldershot, was well attended, and a good round sum has been realised. The initiative was taken in this matter by the Royal Artillery, and much credit is due to Mrs. Wodehouse and other ladies, who worked hard to make the concert a success. A Divisional assembly and dance is announced to take place at the Officers' Club on Thursday next, at 9.30 p.m. The Division will parade in review order to-day (Saturday), for the celebration of her Majesty's Birthday, and, in accordance with a Memorandum issued by Sir Daniel Lysons on the subject, will be drawn up in two lines on the Queen's parade-ground, North Camp, at 11.30 a.m. At noon, the Artillery will fire a Royal salute of 21 guns, and the Infantry a feu-de-joie, after which the troops will give three cheers for the Queen. The Staff College Officers attached to the Royal Artillery here for instruction, under the College Regulations, will proceed to Shoeburyness with the batteries for annual gun practice. Veterinary-Surgeon W. Appleton has been ordered to Aldershot for duty. Veterinary-Surgeon W. Gladstone has taken over veterinary charge of K Battery, 1st Brigade, P Battery, 2nd Brigade, and P Battery, 4th Brigade, R.A., from Veterinary-Surgeon M. C. Mitchell. Sub-Inspector of Schools J. E. Cartwright has been granted leave of absence from the 22nd inst. to August 21, on medical certificate. The orderly-room clerk of an infantry regiment in the South Camp is about to be tried by court-martial, on a series of charges arising out of the alleged suppression of certain important official documents which passed into his hands from the Brigade Office, and for general neglect of duty.

Active Service cannot wear out the teeth that are brushed night and morning with Rowland's Odonto, the purest and most fragrant dentifrice ever made. All dentists allow that neither washes nor pastes are as efficacious for polishing the teeth and keeping them sound and white as a pure and non-gritty tooth-powder; such Rowland's Odonto has aways proved itself. Ask any dealer in perfumery for Rowland's Odonto, and avoid spurious imitations, theirs being the only original and genuine Odonto.

The High Alps in Winter. By Mrs. Fred Burnaby. (Sampson Low and Co.)

Mrs. Burnaby has written a charming book of travel which may cause many of her readers to follow the example so pluckily set by her, and to try "mountaineering in winter." It has novelty, at all events, to recommend it, and it may also serve to create a new sensation for the benefit of those who want "to go up somethin'," and to do what few have hitherto attempted. It cannot be denied that at first it seems a rather quixotic proposition to ask any one to attempt such an undertaking, and to quit the comforts of home to flounder through the winter snow. But it has been done, and done successfully, under anything but favourable circumstances by the authoress of this book. In the summer of 1881, she reached Chamonix for the first time, and in bad health. As to mountaineering, she knew little and cared less about it, till one lucky day she became suddenly inspired, it may be, by the rarified air, secured the services of trusty guides, and, accompanied by another lady of daring spirit, boldly challenged Mont Blanc, and actually accomplished the "Grand Mulets." On that occasion the weather said "no," and Mont Blanc was postponed for a more propitious season. Early in June of the following year (1882), this venturesome young lady once more took up her quarters at the Hôtel d'Angleterre, at Chamonix, and tells us, with a somewhat apologetic tone, of a few trifles in the way of mountaineering which she accomplished, but which are not to be considered of note,—for example, Mont Blanc (on a cloudy day) and the Aiguilles of Belvedere and of Tacul. This would be thought very well by ordinary people, but the authoress hungered for something of wider scope, and was rewarded. A friend of hers had just crossed Mont Blanc from the Italian side by the Aiguilles Grises, and drew such a lamentable picture of what he had endured, that Mrs. Fred Burnaby determined upon following his example, and commenced the necessary preparations. Two days passed, and on the third she crossed the "Col de Geant" to Courmayeur, and then returned to Chamonix by Mont Blanc. A week later, she ascended the Grandes Jorasses, the particulars of which excursion are charmingly told in the first chapter of the book. It affords ample evidence of the invincible determination of the authoress to carry out her original idea, and show how mountaineering in search of health may be cultivated with advantages even in the High Alps, and during the winter season. At the close of September, Mrs. Burnaby found herself in Courmayeur, having just returned from a visit to the Hospice of the Great St. Bernard, her object being to ascend the Grandes Jorasses before the weather changed. Disappointed in her efforts to enlist the services of her Chamonix guide, Edouard Cupelin, she engaged Proment, of Courmayeur, with two porters, and arranged to start at 8 o'clock the following morning. In due time, having skilfully avoided a continuous fall of stones from the overhanging ice, and disposed of "a most objectionable little couloir," the Cabane was reached. At daybreak on the following morning, a fresh start was made, and very soon the axes had begun their work, in order to cross a slope so steep that handholes, as well as steps, were required. Having conquered more rocks and another long, steep slope of ice, the little party stood upon the summit, an hour before noon. The authoress thus describes the view which she obtained from this mountain, 13,800 feet above the level of the sea:—

> "Far below, the graceful windings of the Mer de Glace were seen, and on its left bank the hotel of Montauvert showed distinctly. To the right, the majestic form of the Aiguille Vert immediately caught the eye. It seemed almost on a level with our stand-point, and overtopped everything else at the end of the range; while to the left, the great, white dome glittered in a stray sunbeam above an ocean of fleecy clouds."

But now the misty curtain which had been raised for a few brief moments was once more drawn down, and the party started in all haste to reach the Cabane before dark, It was most important to accomplish this, as owing to accident there was no way of causing artificial light. However, after much labour and danger, the party arrived at Courmayeur. Mrs. Burnaby strongly recommends the ascent of the Grandes Jorasses to all mountaineers of tolerable ability. "The rocks are charming, solid, and giving good foothold and handhold. The ice slopes, however, are steep, and would be very risky after snow." It would be a pleasing occupation to accompany Mrs. Fred Burnaby through all her adventures when mountaineering it on the High Alps in winter-time, and we can only regret not being able to do so. This delicate-looking young mountaineer, whose photograph may naturally engender scepticism as to the numerous and serious difficulties she endured, tells her tale with a quiet simplicity which gives it the impress of truth, without exaggeration. She has also written this book for a good purpose, and, no doubt, uses it as a strong argument in favour of mountaineering in winter. She says:—"No doubt, if winter ascents become popular, the châlets will be better arranged for that season, more especially as to the heating of the bedrooms; and then with what fervour is the winter tourist welcomed! The innkeepers strain every nerve to make him comfortable. They hope that he is the harbinger of a new era, and that perhaps some day the francs will flow in January and February as they do in July and August." It is far from improbable that this little work will cause many embryo as well as experienced mountaineers to make the experiment they are advised to make, and travel over the same ground and at the same period of the year as Mrs. Burnaby. It may be that they will recover some portion of the health that has been lost in cities and lanes; at all events, it will be, as we observed before, a new sensation.

Notes on Battalion Drill. By Lieut. D. A. Kinloch, Grenadier Guards. (Messrs. Clowes and Sons.)—Some work of this kind has long been wanted by Militia and Volunteer officers attending the Schools of Instruction, and there is no one better fitted to undertake the duty of compiling such a book than the adjutant of the School of Instruction at Wellington Barracks. Lieut. Kinloch has the advantage of several months' experience of a school. This experience has shown him exactly where officers are usually found tripping; and taking advantage of his knowledge, he has put together a most useful little manual which tells at a glance the position of everybody in a battalion on parade in all formations. No Militia or Volunteer officer should be without Notes on Battalion Drill.

H.M.S. FANTÔME.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

Sir,—In the Army and Navy Gazette of the 19th inst., I read a paragraph to the effect that H.M.S. Humber had arrived at Sheerness, bringing home the crew of "the unfortunate vessel Fantôme." I think that every one who served in H.M.S. Fantôme would be extremely surprised to see the term "unfortunate" applied to her, for her commission was a most happy one, and she was peculiarly exempt from misfortune, not having a single death or serious accident during her commission, and having kept clear of the rocks and shoals which are rather numerous on the station on which she was serving. The paying-off inspection at Bermuda was also most satisfactory to all concerned.—I am, &c., One who Served in Her.

[We regret exceedingly that by inadvertence on the part of our Sheerness correspondent, the word "unfortunate" was used in connection with what should have been described as the "fortunate ship, the Fantôme."—Ed. A. & N. G.]

Amusements.

With the advance of the season, the Royal Italian Opera, Covent Garden, is developing its resources, though still clinging to a familiar repertory. On Saturday evening, the reappearance of Madame Albani as Gilda in "Rigoletto," attracted a large attendance. "La Favorita" was given on Monday, "Carmen" on Tuesday, with Madame Pauline Lucca as the heroine; "Mefistofele" on Thursday, with "Faust e Margherita" and "Guglielmo Tell" on Friday and this (Saturday) evening, have made up a varied week's programme.

The last nights of "A Trip to the Moon" are announced at Her Majesty's Theatre, but the operatic spectacle so brilliantly embellished is not likely to be withdrawn for another fortnight.

"Youth" is drawing good houses at Drury Lane.

The Folies Dramatiques, Great Queen Street, has been opened again, but the novelty produced, an indifferent English version of Strauss's comic opera of "Prince Methusalem," brought out at Vienna six years since, is hardly likely to draw a succession of remunerative audiences for any prolonged period.

Mr. John S. Clarke, before commencing his provincial and American engagements, has been making audiences merry at the Strand, with his droll impersonations of Major de Boots, in the comedy of "A Widow Hunt," and Brown, in the farce of "My Neighbour's Wife."

At Toole's Theatre the last six weeks of the season are announced, in consequence of the lessee's provincial engagements. Mr. F. C. Burnand's quaintly-imagined parody of the present Haymarket attraction will be produced this (Saturday) evening, under the title of "Stage-Dora; or, Who Killed Cock Robin?" It is amusingly recorded that the orchestra will perform the well-known Russian national air, universally known as the tune "Vat de Mos Cow Didoff."

A Naval spectacle, entitled "The Bombardment of Alexandria, or Egypt in 1881," has been produced at the Canterbury Theatre of Varieties.

The principal feature of the first firework display of the season given at the Crystal Palace, on Thursday evening, by Messrs. Brock and Co., was called "The Siege of Gibraltar."

SPECTACLES v. BLINDNESS.—"Spectacles can only be perfectly adjusted by those having a thorough knowledge of the anatomy of the eye, combined with optical experience."—We have the highest medical authorities confirmed by daily experience, that imperfect glasses, together with the haphazard plan of selection generally employed by the mere vendor, is the cause of most cases of blindness and defective vision. Sir Julius Benedict writes:—"I have tried the principal opticians in London without success, but the spectacles you have adapted suit admirably. The clearness of your glasses as compared with others is really surprising." The Rev. Professor W. A. Hales, M.A. Cantab., 2 Minford Gardens, West Kensington Park, writes:—"The spectacles are perfect, and a most decided boon. I had occasion on Monday to write to Lord ——, and took the opportunity to mention your name and the wonderful power of your spectacles." Dr. Bird, Chelmsford, writes:—"I could not have believed it possible that my sight could have been so much improved and relieved at my age (82). I can now read the smallest type, although suffering from cataract on the right eye." Testimonials from Earl and Countess Lindsay; F. D. Dixon Hartland, Esq., M.P.; the Venerable Archdeacon Palmer, Clifton; Rev. Mother Abbess, St. Mary's Abbey, Mill Hill, Hendon; C. J. Alford, Esq., Gas Light and Coke Company, Horseferry Road, Westminster, &c. Mr. HENRY LAURANCE, F.S.S., Oculist Optician, 39 OLD BOND STREET, W. (late 3 Endsleigh Gardens, Euston Square), personally adapts his Improved Spectacles daily (Saturdays excepted), from 10 to 5. Special arrangements are made for invalids and others unable to wait on Mr. Laurance. Pamphlet, "Spectacles: their Use and Abuse," post free. City Branch, 6 Poultry, Cheapside.

THE Report of the Committee on Army Hospital Services, with which the Times was specially favoured more than three weeks ago, is at last in our hands. We are absolutely unable now to devote to this important and bulky volume of 771 pages, the time and space it merits. Before commenting on the recommendations of the Committee, or the tenor of the mass of evidence given before them, we must notice the clearness with which the proceedings are arranged. We have, first, the authority and instructions for appointing the Committee and guiding their investigations; next, a summary of the Report; then the Report in all its minuteness of detail; then, lists of the witnesses, alphabetically and according to date; a digest of the evidence (64 pages); minutes of the evidence (492 pages); and, lastly, an appendix, supplying much interesting information and facilitating reference. For this convenient arrangement, we are probably indebted to Colonel Elles, the indefatigable Secretary, an officer whose reputation for careful and systematic work is established and acknowledged. The opinions, suggestions, and recommendations of the Committee may be counted literally by the hundred, but the vast majority of them relate to trifling matters of detail. Can any one believe that the important interests at stake are appreciably affected by devising a badge for ward orderlies, or even by the abolition of the grade of "second corporals"? The practice of sending men as quickly as possible from field hospitals to base hospitals, in order to give room in the former for fresh cases—a practice by which the services of many men were needlessly lost in Egypt—is called "the evacuation system"! The sense of congruity or humour must have been absent or dormant in those who adopted an expression so disastrously suggestive. "With a view to strengthen the hands of the regimental medical officer as much as possible, we propose that a corporal and private of each battalion or unit be appointed to attend the medical officer in the field, and that a sufficient number of soldiers be trained for this service in time of peace." Can this be meant seriously, or is it simply a dull joke, just to relieve the dreariness of the report? It is further recommended that "the Army Hospital Corps be amalgamated with the Army Medical Department, which may be constituted a royal corps," in recognition, we presume, of the thoroughly satisfactory way in which it failed to perform in Egypt the miscellaneous duties it has lately assumed, and in order to make "unification" and glorification synonymous! If this ill-timed suggestion were acted on, we might expect that memorials would be sent in by the "royal corps," which have earned that title gloriously by blood and iron, not by blowing their own brazen trumpets, praying that a distinction they no longer valued might be withdrawn. The following paragraph in the report is very significant, though two members have plainly expressed their dissent,—dissent in which most of the witnesses have concurred, and in which most of our readers will concur:—"We entertain no doubt but that the system on which the Medical services are organised in the field, though possibly requiring modifications in detail, is sound in principle." Without now repeating the evidence of any individual officers, we may state that the preponderance of opinion is decidedly in favour of reverting to the "regimental system," instead of retaining the present "unification." In courts of law, we often find that a new trial is granted, on the ground of the verdict having been against the weight of evidence. On the point to which we refer, the opinion of the Committee is opposed to that of the majority of the witnesses, and an appeal will surely be made, not to another similar tribunal, but, through the press, to Parliament and the public. Unable, in the little time available, to read all the evidence, we turned naturally to that given by Lord Wolseley and Sir John Adye; assuming that from the Commander of the Army in Egypt and his Chief of the Staff we should get the most precise and trustworthy information. Owing to the special favour shown to the Times, the purport of Lord Wolseley's evidence has appeared in many papers, and is doubtless familiar to most of our readers. He tells the Committee that he found great fault with the management of the hospital at Ismailia, yet in his despatch of September 16, he says:—"The medical arrangements were all they should have been, and reflect the highest credit upon Surgeon-General Hanbury." Again, he tells us how he pitched into "a hospital doctor" at Cairo, and would not allow him to shift any share of responsibility for the apparent and gross neglect to an official called the "Commissary-General of Ordnance" (a title not to be discovered in the Army List, and which is confined to our Indian forces); yet in his despatch of September 24, he says, "The Medical Department, under Surgeon-General Hanbury, C.B., have done all that could possibly be done for the care and comfort of the sick and wounded." What value can be attached to the praise or blame of a General who blows so hot and so cold alternately? Sir John Adye, according to his own evidence, seems to have been remarkable for not seeing irregularities or hearing of grievances, though he was Chief of the Staff. When we consider the great amount of evidence and the time occupied in the proceedings, and then read the trivial recommendations and futile suggestions of the Committee, we are reminded of the well-known Latin sentence, "Parturitur mons, nascitur ridiculus mus."

IN the Times of the 23rd ult., there appeared one of those Wednesday Military articles to which we are now becoming accustomed, and so like was this last to the one which preceded it, that for a time we were almost under the impression that we had taken up by mistake an old copy of the paper. Our contemporary starts by saying that the short-service system has become an established fact, and that since its institution we have not experienced that chronic deficiency in the annual supply of recruits that marked the days of long service. It is obliged to admit, however, that our Regular Forces are at present undermanned, and that before the end of the year we shall not only have to make good the present deficiency of some 8,000 men, but that we must also provide for 5,000 or 6,000 more who will have joined the Reserves. With admirable candour the Times wishes to look the matter in the face. We fully agree that there can be no good done by shutting one's eyes to facts and seeking to minimise their rea value. The wonder is how the Times can reason so rightly and then act so wrongly, for not only does it shut its own eyes to all unpleasant truths, but it tries to shut the eyes of others. In speaking of the falling-off in the supply of recruits, it is contended that "if, on the one hand, the causes are of a merely incidental, temporary, or easily remediable character, there is, of course, no ground for misgiving. If, on the other, they disclose substantial defects inherent in our system, we must not hesitate to face the question, and largely modify, or even destroy, any parts of that system that are proved to be unfitted for the essential object of keeping our squadrons and battalions at their proper strength." This is excellent reasoning. It puts us very much in mind of the summing-up of the Judge in the trial from "Pickwick." But notwithstanding this candid way of putting it, the Times cannot admit that there is any inherent defect in a system which it has always upheld and cherished with a fondness as great as that which a mother frequently has for a deformed or idiot child. The reasons for the shortness in our 'supply of recruits in 1882 are, it is maintained, for the most part, temporary and of a remediable kind. Yet there appears to be no way out of the difficulty, except by going back to eighteen years as the "minimum" age for the enlistment of recruits, and by relaxing the precautions taken by the medical officers, so that if recruits of the proper stamp do not come forward in sufficient numbers, any ragged, half-starved boy who says he is eighteen will not be rejected. If this is our only cure, it is worse than the disease; and as we have before protested against it, so shall we now, for we are convinced that it is pernicious in the extreme, being expensive to the country and ruinous to the Army, which no one can wish to see turned into a nursery for starving striplings. We strongly object to the Times assuming its premisses, and then arguing upon them. It is an easy matter to come to a satisfactory conclusion when you have recourse to such a plan as this. Our contemporary should cast aside all sophistry. Of what use is it to say, when advocating a return to eighteen as the minimum of age, that "had young men of this age remained eligible in 1882, the returns would have shown, 'probably,' more accessions to the Army than any year since 1876." Why? No doubt it suits the purpose of the advocates of short service to say this in order to support their argument, but why should we believe it? All we have to do is to deal with results. Again, it is very easy to get out of the difficulty as to the Guards being so considerably below their establishment, by arguing that "it will necessitate a lowering of the standard, but not to an extent that will effect their soldierlike fitness, although it may take away somewhat from their impressive appearance." But the Guards are a picked body of men, forming a special branch of the Service, having special duties to perform, and having to take part in public pageants. Should it be found necessary to reduce their standard to anything near that of the Line, it surely would be better that the country should be saved the expense of keeping up a corps d'élite at all. If the Guards are to be reduced to the level of the Line, the duties now performed by them might as well be carried out by regiments of the Line, for if the height of the Guards were reduced to, say, 5 feet 7 inches, there would be nothing special about them except the shape of their bearskin and the trimmings on their tunics. It would appear that any little uneasiness which the Times may feel as regards the difficulty we have in obtaining recruits is allayed by the reflection that the men whose departure from the ranks in such large numbers as to cause the deficiency are still available in the Reserves. This fact does not give us the smallest consolation, nor do we agree with the Times when it says that the military school has distinguished itself by a too close adherence to institutions as they exist. We would ask what measure has it stood in the way of which has proved valuable to the Army and the public? Was the abolition of Purchase one? It did not stand in the way of this; it merely objected to the terms that were imposed upon a body of men who were victims of a system sanctioned, if not instituted, by authority. "If this military school had had its way," the Times says, "we should not now possess the Army Reserve which, while yet incomplete, is a positive addition of 30,000 men to our fighting strength." This military school, had it been consulted, would certainly not have starved the first and fighting line to put 30,000 men into a Reserve which should only, properly speaking, be called up in case of extreme national emergency. In all probability, the military school would have devised a scheme which would have made our Militia the Reserve, and left our first line of defence unweakened by constant drains. We are glad to be able to agree with our contemporary in one respect. We also think that greater advantage might be obtained in return for the large sums now voted. Our Army administration is extravagant in some respects, and extremely parsimonious in others. Stricter economy should be exercised. Personal interest should not be allowed to sway Army contracts, and Generals, no matter what their position, should be denied bloated staffs. Again has the Times attempted, most unfairly, to put the blame of failure upon those who have had the misfortune to be obliged to try to work a system which experience has proved to be full of defects. It is to be hoped that the ponderous periods of the Times do not reach the class from which we obtain our recruits, or our supply may fall still shorter, and men out of the service may be taught to look with fear and trembling upon a profession in which crime meets with Draconic measures, and discipline is only maintained by terrorism. We feel sure that the men who leave the service do not give it a bad name on those accounts. The reason why the service is unpopular, is that the advantages held out are not sufficiently great; for men now have no opportunity of making it a lasting source of livelihood. What the country wants to do is to get as much as possible out of the men, and then turn them adrift on the world through the Army Reserve, either to beg or starve. The authorities all break faith with the men, more especially as regards the Reserves. The position here is full of uncertainty, and the Reservemen have been taught that they are never free from liability to serve. This alone has caused a very great amount of discontent. We would ask the Times if the men who leave the service give it a good or a bad character; if the officers who have to work our system condemn it; if our supply of recruits has fallen so short as to cause anxiety in the minds of all except the Times, and if desertion is as prevalent and crime no less than it used to be,—in what way has our Short Service System been a success?

THE manner in which junior commissioned service in the Royal Navy is allowed to count for increase of full and half-pay is, in these days of slow promotion, a hardship greatly felt, and an injustice which should no longer exist. A subordinate officer's probationary term ends on passing the necessary examination to qualify him for a commission, when, to any common-sense and unprejudiced being, he should become entitled to the full advantages of service in the junior commissioned rank, whenever he is promoted to the senior grade of his particular branch; but instead, he is only allowed to count the junior time by driblets, as he acquires senior service. Sub-Lieutenants generally serve five years in that rank, and, if placed on half-pay when promoted, receive the munificent sum of 4s. per diem, and must serve six years as a Lieutenant before the whole of that period is allowed to count. If all junior service were conceded at the time of advancement, the Lieutenant would only receive 5s. half-pay. A difference of only a shilling, small as it is, makes a yearly difference of £18, sufficient to enable a provident man to appear in decent attire, but not enough to prepare an outfit for his next appointment as a ward-room officer, which, if he has not private means, must be obtained on credit. Sub-Lieutenants are generally in their twenty-fifth year when promoted, and are consequently no better off than an Army Subaltern of three years' service, who receives the same daily rate, 4s., if obliged to take temporary half-pay. Assistant-Paymasters serve now for upwards of sixteen years in that rank, and are in their thirty-eighth year when promoted; they receive 6s. a day half-pay—not one-half their full pay. This scale is not increased for three years, and as many of these officers are for the first year unemployed, the injustice is too palpable, and shows hard dealing with men who have arrived at the middle-aged period of life. It knocks out whatever is left of zeal and elasticity, after such a long term of junior service. To the Admiralty mind, it would be terrifying to allow these officers the small advantage we claim for them, as in the case of the last officer promoted he would actually be entitled to 10s. 6d. half-pay, and 19s. full pay, though the official equanimity of either the Treasury or the Admiralty remains unruffled when they consider the salaries their Higher-Division clerks receive at an age corresponding with that of lately promoted Paymasters. These highly-paid and lightly-worked civilian officials receive double the pay given to the Naval officers whose case we are discussing, without ever being burdened with the expense of costly uniform or large outfit for foreign service, such as executive and accountant officers must provide, as it is sufficient if the Civil-Service clerk is respectably clad in citizen garb, with the advantage of an income both continuous and increasing. Engineers are slightly better treated on promotion than Assistant-Paymasters, as they are given 6s. 6d. half-pay,—one-half their full pay. Advancement takes place at about the same age, and they are less unemployed than Paymasters, but still the unfairness is equally applicable in acquiring junior time for increase of pay. As a class, they are themselves to blame for this; as, when Admiral Key's Committee sat to inquire into their complaints, three Senior Chief Engineers stated that the present mode of counting junior time was fair, and did not require alteration. Probably, being old officers, to whom change in the system would not apply, and who, perhaps, had to wait several years before all their early service counted, they were not large-minded enough to suggest an improvement; and as the Admiralty would prefer three negatives to as many thousands of affirmatives in a question of financial expenditure, advantage was taken of these objections. The opportunity was thus lost of obtaining a valuable pecuniary gain, while energy was devoted to social matters which would have been conceded in the necessary course of events. Honourable Members have frequently questioned the Admiralty representative in the Lower House on this subject, and always received the unsatisfactory reply that the existing regulations were sufficiently generous, and there was no necessity to alter them. Acts of justice are only conceded by "My Lords" under compulsion. It had been a long-standing custom to retain two months' full wages when payments were made to the crews of ships, but in 1871 the practice was so strongly denounced in Parliament that a Circular was immediately issued rescinding such an unfair regulation. It is to be regretted that similar coercion has not been brought to bear on the unjust rule which has existed for upwards of a quarter of a century in regard to officers' junior time. Such a measure would require powerful support, as the Treasury and Admiralty official shuffling would thwart any moderate attempt. Naval service is hard enough, without the emoluments being deferred until men are old and grey-headed, or, as in some cases, lost by the unfair working of existing regulations. A Lieutenant, if he has not six years' service in that rank, can only retire on 5s. per diem if incapacitated. A Paymaster cannot, with the intervals of half-pay, count all his junior time until he is 54 years of age; therefore, supposing his health fails at 40, he must retire on 6s., in consequence of this unjust law. A Chief Engineer, under similar circumstances, has a trifling advantage, as his minimum retirement is £150 per annum; but even that is but an insignificant reward, after devoting the best years of his life to the service, especially in these days, when science has added largely to his professional requirements. We trust that Naval officers who are interested in this matter will assist us in our endeavour to obtain the support of the Legislature to remove this injustice, and that honourable Members will not let the subject drop, as the Admiralty, while treating Executive, Accountant, and Engineer officers with marked unfairness, have been forced to allow that there should be no distinction between senior and junior time for Medical officers.

The First of June is celebrated for two Naval victories won by England over her foes. Lord Howe's victory and gallant Broke's capture of the Chesapeake. Times have changed since these. England and America are now at peace, have forgotten the past, and look hopefully to the future, when a Zollverein will unite the whole English-speaking race.

Among the recent recipients of Colonial honours, Colonel Sir Charles Bullen Hugh Mitchell, K.C.M.G., served in the Royal Marine Light Infantry, from 1852 to 1868, his active service during that time being,—in the Baltic from the commencement of the Russian War in 1854 to 1856, when he was present in the rocket boats at the bombardment of Sveaborg (medal). He was seconded from the Royal Marines on taking the Colonial Secretaryship of British Honduras in July, 1868, and continuing in Colonial employ, was subsequently placed upon the retired list of his rank. From Honduras he was transferred to British Guiana as Receiver-General, and from thence was promoted in 1877 to Colonial Secretary at Natal. His services in this Colony, both during the Zulu and Boer wars, were recognised first in the award of the C.M.G., and now in the late Gazette to K.C.M.G.

Lieutenant Sandford, retired, R.N., an officer who has always borne the highest reputation in the service, and a gold medallist, is about to be appointed Instructor to the Liverpool Brigade, Royal Naval Artillery Volunteers. Since leaving the Navy, he has been in command of a training brig in the Clyde, and for some short time past has acted as Naval editor of one of our contemporaries. While serving as a Gunnery-Lieutenant, he was looked upon by all his comrades as one of the most rising and promising officers of his rank, and it was with sincere regret that the service heard of his retirement, some two years ago, owing to ill-health. Lieutenant Sandford has now entirely recovered, and we can but congratulate the Liverpool Brigade on securing the services of such an able and zealous officer.

We lately referred to the way in which officers' mess-traps were supplied to newly commissioned ships, and the inconvenient practice which has recently been introduced of making officers of Flag and Reserve-ships select articles for messes in which they are in no way interested. It must be admitted that the total value of the articles allowed is generous, and a great help to officers, thereby saving their pockets being drained of a "lump sum" for necessary mess utensils. There are officers still on the Active List who remember how inconveniently their three-months' advance of pay was lessened by calls for "mess entrance," subscriptions in advance, &c., amounting at times, in ward-rooms of "crack frigates," to £50, and who will acknowledge that the establishment of the mess-trap system was a relief. The subsequent regulation making the issue gratuitous has been appreciated by all in the service. Excepting in time of war, the date for commissioning a ship is generally fixed several days beforehand, sometimes as much as a fortnight; the officers receive early notice of their appointments, and the Navigating officer has, as a rule, been some months in the ship. We would suggest that the Executive and Accountant officers should be directed to join at least a week in advance, being borne on the flagship's books for the time, and together with the Navigating officer, decide what mess-traps are required, making out the necessary demands, and arranging for them to be sent the day prior to commissioning. Other and more important advantages would accrue from the early appearance of these officers. The Executive officer would have time to prepare and arrange matters of interior economy, examine all parts of the ship thoroughly before the crew joined, and enter into all the details of the thousand and one items which attach themselves to the duties of a second-in-command. The Paymaster would also have time to ascertain the quantities of provisions, clothing, and other stores required, and consult with the Senior Lieutenant relative to the messing of the crew, lighting, and other arrangements, which are greatly hurried when officers only join on the forenoon of commissioning, as the ship is soon lumbered with men, baggage, &c., and everything is for the time unsettled. Further, it would give a better opportunity of engaging mess servants, and thus overcome the inconvenience of "roughing it" for several days. With regard to the mode of obtaining mess-traps, it appears that a priced list is supplied, giving proportions of the necessary articles, the total value of which corresponds with the sum allowed by the Queen's Regulations. Officers are not obliged to confine; themselves strictly to the quantities of each article shown on the list, as there are some which are inapplicable to small ships, and a larger number of another description may be taken in lieu. Should the value of the articles exceed the sum allowed, repayment for the same may be made; and it is not undesirable to take additional quantities when proceeding to a distant station. As no replacements are allowed after the first gratuitous supply, the Admiralty might allow the messes of ships on foreign stations to demand moderate quantities from England, which could be sent with other stores to the Naval Yards, payment being made by the mess caterer to the Paymaster of the ship receiving them. This would be a great convenience to officers, as they are unable to obtain the Admiralty pattern abroad, and in some places can only procure inferior articles at exorbitant prices. The suggestions we make would entail but little or no extra expense, and would greatly enhance the comfort of officers.

Will some Member of Parliament request the Parliamentary Secretary of the Admiralty to state how it has happened that Lieutenant Alfred E. Rawnsley, of the Woodlark, was tried by court-martial on board the Tourmaline, at Bombay, in March, 1883, on four trivial charges, dating back to May, 1881, three of which were disproved; while the fourth, of having sat down during his watch, was admitted? For this offence, committed two years ago, Lieutenant Rawnsley was sentenced to be reprimanded and dismissed his ship! Full details will be found under the name of the Tourmaline in our columns devoted to the movements of the Navy.

Lieutenant Sleeman, retired R.N., contributes to this month's number of Colburn's United Service Magazine an able paper on "The Training of Our Midshipmen," in which he sketches out a scheme whereby a somewhat higher standard of sound mathematical knowledge may be attained by the junior officers of the Navy, without entailing any sacrifice of the practical knowledge of their profession. Colburn spells Lieutenant Sleeman's name wrong, by the bye. It is not "Sherman."

The new German Minister of Marine has determined to remove the German Naval College from Kiel to Berlin, and to affiliate it to the Military Academy. At the same time, Gaarden, near Kiel, is being made the chief Naval Arsenal of the Empire. Sixteen detached forts are being constructed round Kiel, and all Naval works are being concentrated at Gaarden. The garrison is to be increased by 5,000 men of all arms. Two new barracks for seamen and marines are to be constructed, and the whole Baltic Coast is to be placed in a thorough state of defence.

The Admiralty building programme is being carried out at Portsmouth just now with some show of activity. On the slips are the Camperdown, laid down in December, and already making a considerable display, and the Calliope, a new "C" class corvette, far advanced towards completion. The Imperieuse, building in No. 11 dock, has arrived at a stage when progress is not easily perceptible to the casual observer, but numerous hands are employed upon her. Considerable progress is also being made with the Colossus; the side armour has been in its place for some time, and the foremost turret is also completely armoured, and has the gun slides or girders in position. Shipbuilding is, however, but a slow process nowadays, even at its best, which it is by no means certain is the case in our dockyards. The First Reserve ships were all to be out of hand this week, the Lord Warden and Hercules having been brought out of dock on Tuesday. The crew of the Warrior were to be turned over to the Shannon on Friday. In the old steam basin is the Active, with all her topsides out, in process of alteration for her new armament of 6-in. breech-loaders. The intended result may be seen in her sister vessel, the Volage, which was completed some time since. She has her guns on board, but the result is not very encouraging. Long breech-loading guns are undoubtedly necessary; but it is certain that long, narrow ships are not well adapted for carrying them. There are several guns on board the Volage which, at certain angles of training, it will be difficult to work; while even in the "secure" position the slides completely lumber up the deck. In dock, among others, are the Polyphemus—and it is worth while taking a stroll under her bottom—the Enchantress, and the Port-Admiral's new yacht, which has replaced the old Fire Queen. She is a smart little screw vessel, but, as she draws nearly 12 ft., she can scarcely be considered as well adapted for the purpose as her predecessor. Cutting off corners will be out of the question, the Spit will be forbidden ground, the "Swash" only an occasional luxury, the "Middle" a continual bugbear, and the river at Cowes a source of considerable anxiety; and last, though not least, the "distinguished personages" whom she is destined to convey to Osborne will have a far worse time of it in bad weather than in the old craft.

Captain Lord Charles Beresford, R.N., delivers a lecture on "Machine-Guns" at the Royal United Service Institute on Friday afternoon, June 15. Lord Charles Beresford has collected a mass of valuable information on the subject from the Admiralty, the War Office, and from officers in command of ships, and it is anticipated that his lecture will be one of the most interesting of the season.

The Opal and Alecto arrived at Madeira on May 22. They experienced fine weather during the passage from Plymouth, the Opal only stopping once to secure one of the towing hawsers. Her engines worked remarkably well, and she only burnt 130 tons of coal. The Alecto only used her engines to steam into the anchorage, but maintained banked fires all the way out, so as to be ready for any emergency. It has been ascertained that the rate of consumption of fuel per indicated horse-power per hour of the Alecto is 5·7 lbs., instead of the usual rate of 2 lb. per hour, and as she only carries 78 tons of coal, and her daily consumption at full speed is about 33½ tons, it is evident that she only carries 2½ days' coal at that rate of steaming. Even when working economically she burns 12 tons a day. This abnormal consumption of fuel is due to the boilers having been filled with extra large tubes to allow of a sufficient draught to enable wood to be burnt instead of coal, when the supply of the latter falls short. Such an arrangement appears to us to be a great mistake, as with compound engines a vessel such as the Alecto should be a most economical vessel. She will be more used just at present on the coast than up the rivers, and coal can be obtained at most places on the West Coast, while the proportion of wood to coal, to keep up the same amount of steam, is enormous. Hence, burning so much coal as does the Alecto, her consumption of wood precludes its being used for fuel, as the labour to cut the required quantity would be enormous, and when cut, want of stowage room would prevent its being taken on board in quantities sufficient to carry the vessel any distance. The Alecto may, therefore, be looked upon as utterly unfitted for the Coast, and the Admiralty are greatly to blame for selecting such a vessel for the work she will have to perform.

We have received the Report of the Danish Ordnance Select Committee on the experiments recently concluded on the island of Amager with armour-plates. From this it appears that, "Having stood the five rounds, nothing but fragments were left" of the Creuzot plate, leaving the ship's side exposed and naked at the mercy of the enemy, while the plate supplied by Messrs. Cammell and Co. remained "whole." This confirms our previous statements. We will, however, go carefully through the report so kindly sent us by Mr. Nielsen, Director of Shipbuilding and Engineering of the Danish Navy, and give our readers a résumé of its conclusions on a future occasion.

A great and a legitimate emotion was experienced in France, when the Minister of Marine informed the Chamber of the death of the gallant Captain Rivière, and a large per-centage of his small force. A fine, patriotic feeling was at once exhibited by Deputies of all parties, and the necessary supplies for the despatch of reinforcements to Tonquin were at once voted. It was, of course, a piece of culpable negligence to have left Captain Rivière and his men in so exposed a position as Hanoi for month after month. The lesson which we received at the Cape should not have been lost on our neighbours. It remains to be seen whether M. Jules Ferry will in the end sit down under defeat like Mr. Gladstone, and content himself with having saved the country from a further expenditure of men and money. At present, the cry is that French blood has been shed, and French blood must be avenged. And who is to blame for the death of Captain Rivière, who was not only an excellent officer, but a man of considerable literary ability? The Radicals, who opposed the expedition altogether, and who hampered the action of the Government? President Grèvy, who when the late Minister of Marine wished to despatch an adequate force to Cochin China, so strongly objected, that Admiral Jauréguiberry tore up the proposition he had laid before the Cabinet Council, and flung it into the fire? Ministerial instability, which renders difficult any continuous policy? Fear that the Chambers would refuse further supplies for a distant adventure? A knowledge that behind Annam there looms the Celestial Empire and its countless millions of "the coming race?" The suspicion that Prince Bismarck is encouraging France to weaken herself at home by expeditions similar to that of Mexico, which was so disastrous to her in 1870? In fact, there are many reasons to explain why Captain Rivière was neglected at Hanoi, as Dupleix and Lally were formerly neglected in India and Montcalm at Quebec. That the French Government should have been over-cautious is not very surprising, seeing that the Cabinet of De Freycinet was upset for having wished to send some Marines during the Egyptian difficulty to protect the Suez Canal, and this at a moment when the success of Arabi would have been fatal, not only to that water-route, but to Algeria and Tunis, from which the French, as they themselves acknowledged, would in all probability have been driven. However, since then, an adventurous policy has become the order of the day. M. Challemel-Lacour is pleased to say that China will not move in the Tonquin affair, but this is not the opinion of the late French ambassador to Pekin, who was recalled a short time ago for recommending a settlement of the difficulty, which would have left Tonquin under Chinese protection, while guaranteeing the commercial interests of France. The French Foreign Minister must also be well aware of the intentions of the Court of Pekin, through the Chinese Ambassador, who recently left Paris to go to Moscow. As was only to be expected, a portion of the French Press is engaged in throwing the blame upon us. We, forsooth, are encouraging China to declare war with France. If so, it must be for an idea, for our commerce of £10,000,000 will naturally suffer by a war between France and China, and this we have tried to impress upon France all along. As regards the reverse at Hanoi, it is suspected in Paris that the Government has concealed its full extent, that it is more severe than is represented. And there will, no doubt, be great difficulty in moving up reinforcements to the aid of the beleaguered garrison. It was stated a short while ago in the French papers that the Marines despatched from Toulon a month back would, on arriving, be obliged in all probabillty to remain under shelter until the rainy season was over, for about six weeks. There must be great anxiety, therefore, with regard to the ultimate fate of the garrison holding Hanoi against an enemy flushed with success. In the meantime, a subscription is being raised to set up a statue to Captain Rivière, whose untimely end everyone must deplore. The death of Capitaine de Vaisseau Henri Rivière, of the French Navy, while gallantly leading his handful of men against vastly superior Annamite forces, will be heard of with deep regret by all his old friends and acquaintances in the English Navy, for he was a great favourite with all with whom he ever came in contact.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales was somewhat inconvenienced some weeks back by a gentleman of German-Jewish descent, who imagines himself to be the real heir to the English throne. This person, whose appearance is well-known through his long black curly locks and general untidy appearance, has been in the habit of promenading Pall Mall, in front of Marlborough House, during several hours of the night. Being foiled in his attempts to gain an interview there, he recently made a flying visit to Portsmouth, where he continually haunted Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, calling several times a day to request to be proclaimed Prince of Wales, until the Governor's boatmen, stationed at the gates of Government House for the purpose, denied him admission. He then escaped from his medical attendant, who had followed him to Portsmouth, and betook himself to Cowes, intent on obtaining an audience of the Queen, to press his claim to being the rightful heir to the throne. The detectives and Household police at Osborne effectually checkmated this design. Since then the good people of Cowes have been somewhat amused, but not a little frightened, by his various antics, notwithstanding that he is watched by three robust attendants. But, unfortunately, at present the law is on his side, owing to the tender-heartedness of his parents, to say nothing of their dread of public notoriety. The Baron and Baroness, whose son is thus mentally afflicted, are well known in society. The Baron lends his name to one of the largest financial houses in the world, but is so soft-hearted that we may well wish he were a little more stern. We feel convinced that unless greater restraint is put upon this unfortunate gentleman, the family in Hyde Park Gate will live to rue the day this warning was neglected.

There are few, perhaps we may almost say none, of those who knew him who will not sincerely regret the loss of Lord Rokeby, who has died at a ripe old age, having preserved his spirits and his consciousness up to the last. A gallant, open-hearted, generous, and kind old veteran, who knew the feelings, strength, and weakness of those who served him, he was well fitted for the commands which his Sovereign had entrusted to him. He was essentially a Guardsman, possibly with some of their failings, but endowed with all their advantages and merits. He was appointed to the 3rd Guards in time to take part in the battles of Quatre Bras and Waterloo, and was one of the young officers who tried, and successfully too, to make their presence in France as members of the Army of Occupation acceptable to the French. He was afterwards one of the smart men in London in the reign of George IV., when to dance with Henry Montagu or to talk to Henry Montagu was a privilege enjoyed by only the leading ladies of fashion. He married in 1827, at the moment he was ordered abroad, and he went with his battalion to Spain direct from the church to take part in the bloodless campaign under Sir William Clinton. He served in his regiment—the Scots Fusilier Guards—till he became Major-General, and was appointed to the command of the Brigade of Guards, and then of the First Division in the Crimea. Most of those who served under him will remember his coolness under fire, which was carried occasionally to an inconvenient extent, when he told an amusing, but in the circumstances, rather too long a story in the trenches under a dropping fire from the enemy's sharpshooters. He was on the most friendly terms with the French Generals, and the Sardinians also admired him. After the war, Lord Rokeby was appointed to the newly-created office of General Commanding the Brigade of Guards in London. In May, 1875, he succeeded to the colonelcy of his old regiment, now the Scots Guards, who, with the Grenadiers and Coldstreams, mourn the loss of the true, brave, and honest old Guardsman, sans peur, et sans reproche.

The deplorable condition into which the Army is drifting is at last attracting attention in the House of Lords, for on Tuesday next Lord Strathnairn will call attention to a speech of the Secretary of State for War, delivered at Pontefract on March 13, 1882, in which he stated that recruits and under-age men are unfavourable features in the corps of 12 battalions, of 1,250 men each, which he had organised to meet an emergency or sudden war; and further, to the necessity which had occurred before the Egyptian operations of transferring inefficient men from battalions who were the first for foreign service, and replacing them by men of the First-Class Army Reserve; also, to call attention to the alarming state of the present recruiting organisation.

General Sir William Knollys, K.C.B., who has been Colonel of the 62nd Regiment since November 16, 1858, will get the colonelcy of the Scots Guards, the appointment being his by right of inheritance, he being the oldest Scots Guardsman now on the list.

Orders have been given for the immediate issue of the new valise equipment to the 2nd Battalions 18th and 31st Regiments at Aldershot. It is understood that an unlimited supply of this equipment is in store. This being the case, and the regulation equipment for the British soldier of the future having evidently been decided upon months ago, the necessity for a committee at Aldershot "to make a trial of, and to report upon, the old and new valise equipments," is certainly not obvious.

The Medical inquiry has brought to light the complete breakdown of one of the pet schemes of the civilian Army reformers, and the officers of the Army hope that Members of Parliament will now insist on similar commissions being appointed to inquire into all the other crude schemes of Army misorganisation, which have produced the widest discontent and misgiving throughout the service. We would especially name the following subjects as requiring most searching and immediate investigation, viz. :—1. The present state of recruiting. 2. The effect of "short service" on the morale and efficiency of the Army. 3. The effect of the abolition of the pensions of private soldiers on the efficiency of the troops. 4. The effect of the present ruinous system of cramming and competitive examinations for candidates for commissions. 5. The effect of the most unpopular destruction of the numbers and esprit de corps of regiments. 6. The cause and effect of the wide discontent which prevails amongst the officers generally, and especially the senior officers, regarding the present state of things. 7. The cause and effect of the irregular manner in which officers are appointed to the Staff. 8. The cause and effect of the ideas which prevail throughout the Army that the new system of promotion is totally destroying the independence of the officers, and introducing a system of back-stairs and Parliamentary influence. The mischievous effects of reducing the Horse Guards, or Military Executive Staff, to a place of secondary importance, and placing the control of our Army in the hands of a civilian Minister of War, who must be guided by political exigencies, and the permanent officials and clerks of the War Office, who are all civilians, and have no connection or sympathy with the Army, and who know nothing whatever of military matters, is beginning to produce very unsatisfactory and expensive results. The War Office requires a much more thorough reorganisation than the Army ever did. The incident of the favour shown to the Times, by which that paper obtained the report of Lord Morley's Committee before the document was issued to members—for reasons which may be inferred—conclusively proves this.

General Order 50 of 1883, "Military Training of Soldiers," requires no little elucidation before the instructions contained therein can be satisfactorily and uniformly carried out. Many doubtful points require clearing up. We understand that further instructions on this subject, in the shape of a Syllabus, are in preparation, which, when issued, will be fully explanatory. But this Syllabus cannot see the light until the Emperor and Autocrat of all the Russias has had the crown of his father's firmly rivetted on his head. Then the Adjutant-General of the British Army (who has the proof sheets of this important document in his pocket) may possibly be spared to return to this common-place isle, to resume the duties of his office.

The recent promotion of Major Thomas Talbot to the junior lieutenant-colonelcy of the 2nd West India Regiment makes the third instance in the present Army List of a regimental lieutenant-colonel who has had the good-fortune to rise to his present position from the ranks of the service, the other two instances being those of Colonel Luke O'Connor, V.C., commanding the 2nd Battalion Royal Welsh Fusiliers, and Lieutenant-Colonel P. H. Eyre, 38th Regiment. Colonel Talbot enlisted in November, 1854, and from 1863 to 1867 was serjeant-major of the depôt battalion at Shorncliffe, where he was thanked in battalion Orders by Colonel Frazer, "for the highly satisfactory manner in which he had performed the responsible duties of serjeant-major during the four years he was at the depôt." At 31 years of age he got an ensigncy in the 2nd West India Regiment, July 20, 1867, was promoted lieutenant a few weeks later, owing to a rapid run of promotion, was gazetted captain in November, 1874, and major July 1, 1881. The West India Regiments have previously been twice commanded by officers from the ranks, Colonel E. Conran, who was promoted from the ranks in 1842, having been in command of the late "4th West" from 1862 to his death in 1867; and Lieutenant-Colonel John M'Auley, who was promoted in October, 1855, from quartermaster-serjeant at the age of 24, having commanded the "1st West" from August, 1871, to December, 1873. Colonel M'Auley, who died in 1877, at the age of 46, was a pupil of the Royal Hibernian Military School, where his case has so often been quoted as an encouragement to the scholars of that deserving institute.

A Divisional Order, with "artfully alliterative" heading, was published at Aldershot at the end of last week, and deserves to be noticed. It runs thus:—"Periodical Painting.—The West Infantry Barracks will be handed over to the Royal Engineer Department—half at a time—on Monday next, the 28th inst. The head-quarters of the 1st East Surrey Regiment, arriving from Malta next week, will be encamped on ground in the vicinity." It is but too apparent that the comfortable housing of our troops returning from foreign service is a very secondary consideration indeed with departmental authorities, who sit at home at home at ease, and seem to make it their study how not to do it. Bearing in mind that these barracks have been unoccupied for the past nine months, common-sense would suggest that the painting should have been done during this interval, and not commenced on the very day a regiment arrived from abroad to take possession. But, no; the Royal Engineer Department is as inexorable as its ways are inscrutable, and the 31st Regiment finds itself placed under canvas for an indefinite period, painting being a slow process with the Royal Engineers. To many, however, this will be a lesser hardship than having to turn into quarters fresh from the painters' hands.

The following Horse Guards' Memoranda, in continuation of those already promulgated in connection with General Orders 51 and 52 of this year, have been circulated during the week, for general information and guidance:—"1. Until the present Army Form B 192 is revised, which is now being done, a Captain will have for this year only two of these forms, one in which to enter recruits and one for trained soldiers. The Captain (or other officer) who trains the recruits will furnish the results of the performances of each man to the orderly-room, in accordance with the latter part of paragraph 32, 'Musketry Regulations.' 2. If the recruits of a company number less than six, they may be trained with those of another company, the registers being kept separate. 3. Infantry recruits, third-class shots, are to be trained with their companies, and not separately, as laid down in paragraph 195, 'Musketry Regulations,' which will be altered. 4. Volley and independent firing (i.e., 30 rounds) may be fired in one day, at the discretion of the Field Officer superintending the practice, and paragraph 40, 'Musketry Regulations,' will be altered accordingly. 5. It is optional with officers to fire with their companies, but the result of the officer's practice is not to count towards the company's figure of merit. 6. The regimental recruits' book, referred to in paragraph 293, 'Musketry Regulations,' is still to be kept up. 7. In regimental depôts the recruits are to be trained by such officer as may be directed by the officer commanding, the recruits being trained in batches, irrespective of their depôt company. 8. All the practices (field-firing and (a) excepted) of the second part, annual course, are to count towards the figure of merit of a squad, troop, or company. The officer commanding the corps or battalion will see that the competition is fairly conducted. 9. Officers are to judge distance with their companies, recording their answers before taking the distances. 10. Trained soldiers are to fire in all weathers, except in a very strong wind, or when rain renders marking almost impossible. 11. The Cavalry annual course is, if practicable, to begin at the same time as that for the Infantry. 12. The classification of Cavalry-trained soldiers is as follows:—175 points, marksmen; 130 points, 1st class; 100 points, 2nd class; under 100 points, 3rd class. 13. Skirmishing in the Cavalry, when detailed for second part, annual course, is to be carried out as dismounted practice with horses. 14. The trained cavalry soldier should, when possible, in preliminary drill, execute two position drills daily. 15. Commanding Officers will exercise their own discretion on the following points:—(a) As to the preliminary drill of the cavalry-trained soldier being extended to four days; (b) as to the definition of 'worst shots;' (c) as to the distances for individual firing at a figure target; (d) as to the dimensions of the targets to be used at 1,000 and 1,200 yards in the competition for best shots. 16. It is not necessary that the prize-winners should be marksmen. Paragraph 279, Musketry Regulations, will be amended accordingly. 17. With reference to paragraph 9 of General Order 51, of 1883, in order to enable the issue of prizes for good shooting to be made as soon as possible after they are earned, commanding officers will in future make application for marksmen's prizes, on the 1st of every month, on Army form O, 1,717 (revised,) to General Officers commanding districts, by whom, after due examination, it will be approved and returned to commanding officers, as the authority for the issue of marksmen's prizes and badges. As the other prizes for good shooting, and all the prizes for judging distance, cannot be awarded before the termination of the annual course, commanding officers will make application in a similar manner for these prizes on March 31 annually.

The inhabitants of Alexandria are indebted in a very special manner to Sir Archibald Alison, for had it not been for his prompt and determined action in July last with a vastly inferior force to that under the command of Arabi, who was encamped only at a distance of about ten miles from the town, there would have been such a loss of life and property as would have greatly increased the amount due for indemnities, and the results of the campaign might perhaps have been materially affected.

LETTS'S POPULAR ATLAS is just now complete. The Saturday Review, May 12, 1883, says:—"We can honestly add that the unmounted edition (£2 2s) of Messrs. Letts's Atlas is beyond all question the cheapest full compendium of geographical information to be obtained, and the mounted form (£5) one of the most handsome." —Detailed Prospectus of LETTS, Limited, London Bridge, E.C.

Leave of absence has been granted to Lieutenant T. A. Mackenzie, Cameron Highlanders, May 15 to August 31; Rev. R. Brindle, Chaplain to the Forces, May 18 to June 16; Lieutenant Sir G. Thomas, Bart., G-B., R.H.A., May 20 to September 5; Lieutenant Heygate, R.A., May 12 to August 23; Captain Burnett Hitchcock, Brigade-Major, May 23 to July 23; Major W. A. Smail, 1st Gordon Highlanders, May 18 to June 17.

During the absence of Captain Hitchcock, Lieutenant W. A. Gough, A.D.C., will act as Brigade-Major.

The Calabria, which arrived on the 22nd inst., will take two companies of the Commissariat and Transport Corps.

The death of Capt. Lee, the popular Adjutant of the Black Watch, from enteric fever, has caused a grief not limited to his own regiment. One of the most popular officers in the Service, he had also made many friends among civilians in Cairo, and his funeral was very largely attended.

Brigadier-General Grenfell Pasha has gone on leave; during his absence, the 1st Brigade of the Egyptian Army will be under command of Colonel Duncan, in addition to the Artillery.

On the return of General Grenfell, Sir E. Wood, Pasha Sirdar, will go on leave.

In the Times of Monday last, appeared a list of the officers who dined with the Secretary of State for War on her Majesty's Birthday. In it we find the names of the Director-General of the Army Medical Department, the Commissary-General at Head-quarters, the Chaplain-General, and the Principal Veterinary-Surgeon; but we look in vain for any representative of the Army Pay Department. This may not seem a matter of much importance to the Department in question, but it is small omissions and apparent slights that tend to lower a Department of the Army in the estimation of the service generally. Were the Army Pay Department in the same position as all other branches of the service with a representative of its own at Head-quarters, there is little doubt that the senior officer at Head-quarters would have been included in the list of Lord Hartington's guests. We trust, before another anniversary of her Majesty's Birthday comes round the War Office will be able to remedy at least this grievance.

Capt. J. E. Bazley, of the "Old Guard" of New York, is now sojourning at 11 Harrington Road, S.W., and returns to New York in July.

Major the Hon. G. Napier has left his appointment of Assistant Judicial Commissioner of Simla, and is now in military employ in the Intelligence Branch of the Quartermaster-General's Department in India. The Allahabad paper remarks:—"There is much to be done in the Indian Intelligence Department in connection with the Russian advance along the Khorassan frontier, and Major Napier is admirably fitted to collate all the information which is available."

His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury will be the guest of "Old Wellingtonians" at their triennial dinner on July 3 next.

(FROM AN OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENT.)

Saturday last proved to be an unfortunate fixture for the Queen's Birthday celebration at Aldershot. From early morning the rain came down so heavily and continuously, that the parade was at first suspended, then finally cancelled. In the evening, Sir Daniel Lysons entertained the whole of the Divisional Staff at dinner, at Aldershot House, the new residence for the General Commanding. After the comparative quietude of last week, work has been resumed with renewed vigour. It is evident on all sides that the period of spring drills and trainings is about to terminate, and, in accordance with the programme of work issued in February last, divisional field-days, with opposing forces and minor operations, are about to commence. The Royal Engineer Telegraph Troop and Signallers will be used in these operations. Infantry brigades will be practised separately, with Artillery and Cavalry attached; Brigade Divisions of Artillery, with escorts of Cavalry and Infantry; and regiments of Cavalry, with detachments of Infantry attached. Outpost duty will also be studied. On Monday, the Cavalry Brigade was out in the Long Valley from 10 to 12, under Sir Frederick Fitz-Wygram; and the Royal Artillery at the same time and place, under Colonel Williams, C.R.A. The 56th Army Cooking Class will assemble at the Instructional Kitchen, Centre Infantry Barracks, to-day (Saturday), for a course of instruction. This class will consist of 27 non-commissioned officers, from as many different corps, and will be under instruction for six months. The following officers have been examined in subjects (a) and (b), sec. 4, para. 28, Queen's Regulations, and have been found qualified :—Lieutenants H. V. Wilbraham and S. F. G. Cavendish, 85th L.I., and F. J. A. Trench, R.H.A. Lance-Corporal Young, 26th Cameronians, was recently tried by district court-martial, found guilty, and sentenced to be imprisoned with hard labour for 56 days, for the following offence : —"When charged with the distribution of public goods, fraudulently misapplying the same, in that, at Aldershot, on May 12, 1883, when charged with the distribution of coal to the Staff, in the South Camp, he sold two boxes of coal to Mrs. Sheppard for one shilling." Now, at the first blush, this would seem to be a serious crime, but, in reality, there is little, if any, fraud in the case. After the coal has been distributed to all who are entitled to receive it, a small surplus usually remains in the waggons, and the common practice for years has been for the non-commissioned officer in charge of the coal fatigue-party to consider this surplus as his perquisite, and to dispose of it accordingly. Taking all the circumstances into consideration, a less severe punishment might have been meted out to this very young soldier. It seems to me to be a much more serious crime to clandestinely supply from a serjeants' mess to private soldiers intoxicating liquors on a Sunday morning, before church parade. Yet the punishment awarded by a recent district court-martial for this grave breach of Military discipline, was the very lenient one of reduction from the rank of serjeant to that of corporal. Upwards of 500 bronze stars for the Egyptian Campaign have arrived for the 2nd Battalion 18th Royal Irish, and will be presented to them on parade in a day or two. An abstract of the Divisional Race Fund has been circulated, which shows that a balance credit of £385 remains from the Spring Steeplechase Meeting. A meeting of officers interested in racing matters was held on Monday last, but the day for the July race-meeting has not yet been fixed. The seventh Grand Army Athletic Meeting will take place on the Athletic Sports Ground, South Camp, Aldershot, on Wednesday and Thursday, the 27th and 28th instant. On Monday last, the following Division Order was issued :—" Duties.—It having been brought to the notice of the General Commanding the Division, that men belonging to Infantry regiments in the command have been struck off duty and employed in an unauthorised manner, the attention of General Officers Commanding Brigades and officers commanding regiments is directed to this point. Care should be taken that no men are employed except such as are sanctioned by regulation, unless in very special cases, for which the authority of the General Officer Commanding the Division should be obtained." This order is certainly well meant, for the purpose of putting a stop to the pernicious practice, lately on the increase, of employing soldiers on all sorts of unsoldierly and illegitimate work. It is evident, by the above, that the authorities can no longer blink the fact that young soldiers, who have barely learnt the rudiments of drill and discipline, are in this garrison employed from day to day in such work as tending cows, goats, &c., or in the menial labour usually performed in civil life by kitchen wenches or charwomen. That the time of many men here is wholly taken up in this manner, or in other ways equally irregular and objectionable, is evident to the least observant person. Another Serjeants' Mess caterer is awaiting trial by district court-martial, and the mess in which he held office has been summarily closed, because of the irregularities brought to light. The insignia of the Orders of the Osmanieh and the Medjidie have been received at Aldershot for the following officers, who served during the recent campaign :—Lieutenant-Colonel Sir A. Mackworth, Bart., R.E., and Lieutenant-Colonel R. J. Bond, R.E., 3rd Class Medjidie; Lieutenant-Colonel E. H. Sartorius, V.C., A.Q.M.G., 4th Class Osmanieh ; and Major R. C. Hare, Brigade-Major, 1st Brigade, 4th Class Medjidie. The Valise Equipment and War-game Committees have met during the week. The latter will shortly be able to make a final report, but the work of the former Committee is such a never-ending, still-beginning business, that nothing can safely be predicated regarding it. I-B, R.H.A., and P-2, R.A., will return to Camp from Shoeburyness to-day (Saturday), on completion of gun-practice. H-4 and P-4, R.A., have also returned from Shoeburyness, on completion of gun-practice. The 2nd Battalion 18th Royal Irish and 31st East Surrey Regiments, ex Jumna, from the Mediterranean, arrived at the Camp on Monday afternoon last, in three special trains. These battalions are attached to the 2nd Brigade, which now consists of three strong battalions, numbering about 3,000 of all ranks. Six officers and 134 men of the Brigade of Guards left the Camp on Monday to rejoin their battalion, on completion of musketry and military training. Thirty-five men of the Commissariat and Transport Corps, from the Mediterranean, arrived on Monday last. Two officers and 83 men of the 5th Royal Fusiliers (South Middlesex Militia) arrived from Hounslow yesterday (Friday) to draw camp equipment for the battalion, which will arrive on Monday next, for annual training, and will be encamped on Rushmoor, and attached to the 1st Brigade. Two officers and 76 men of the 3rd East Surrey Regiment (1st Surrey Militia) arrived from Kingston yesterday (Friday), to draw camp equipage for the battalion, which will arrive on Monday next, for annual training, and will be encamped on Rushmoor Hill, and attached to the 2nd Brigade. Detachments of K Battery, 1st Brigade, and F Battery, 3rd Brigade, R.A., will proceed to-day (Saturday) to Shoeburyness, for annual training. The 7th Batn. Rifle Brigade —17 officers, 717 men, and 3 horses — proceeded yesterday from Farnborough Station, en route to its head-quarters, on completion of annual training. Captain A. D. Curtis, R.A., has been struck off the strength of the Division. Quartermaster R. Gordon, A.H.C., is held in readiness to proceed on foreign service. Quartermaster J. Buckley, A.H.C., for many years Regimental Serjeant-Major of the corps, recently promoted, has been appointed Adjutant of the depôt and training-school at Aldershot, vice Quartermaster J. Horn. Schoolmaster T. W. Smyth has arrived at Aldershot for duty as Assistant to the Sub-Inspector of Schools.

Our well-informed contemporary, the Hampshire Telegraph, supplies the following interesting information anent the Admiralty and the Press. The facts alluded to have been within our ken for some time past, but we deemed it advisable not to publish them. As, however, they have appeared elsewhere, we now reproduce them :—"'My Lords' have been much exercised of late by the persistent adverse criticism, both in Parliament and in the Press, that their shipbuilding policy and their administration of the Navy have been subjected to. At one time all the Service papers were in accord on the subject, and condemned the policy followed by the Admiralty. An attempt was made, not long ago, by one of their Lordships to induce one of the service organs to alter its tone, an attempt in which he signally failed. Since then, one of the service papers has changed hands. During the first few months of its career under the new proprietorship, this journal was even more bitter against the Admiralty than ever it was under its old management. Suddenly, a change came over its editorial comments on the policy of the Admiralty, and it changed its tone to suit the views of the gallant Admiral who had previously failed in moulding a well-known service journal to that form of creed which he himself holds on naval matters. Having at last 'struck ile,' the gallant Admiral determined last week to make it flow abundantly. He accordingly wrote to the learned proprietor of the journal which watches with patriarchal care over the interests of the united services to congratulate him on having secured the services as Naval Editor of an officer in whom the Admiralty have always had the greatest confidence, of whose ability they always held the highest opinion, and whose loss to the service when he retired they deeply regretted. The gallant Admiral then proceeds to assure the proprietor of the journal in question 'that great benefit cannot fail to accrue to the Navy in all its branches' from his having secured the services of such an efficient officer to watch over its interests, or words to that effect." This anecdote is all very well, so far as it goes, but it imputes, unintentionally, no doubt, to the retired officer concerned a course of conduct he would never be guilty of, and which every officer in the service will admit he would be the last to adopt. The officer referred to has only acted for a short time as Naval editor of the journal in question, and wrote without previous communication with the Admiralty. His articles supported the policy of the Admiralty, and it was with a view to ensure a continuation of the publication of such articles that the gallant Admiral wrote, complimenting the proprietor of our contemporary. The pith of the joke is that the Admiralty never discovered the officer's good qualities until he exchanged the sword for the goose-quill. Indeed, the treatment he received from the Admiralty was such as to warrant the assumption that they never had any opinion at all of his abilities, for they deliberately drove him from the service in their stern and unbending determination to support his captain, an officer now holding a high position at the Admiralty, in a case in which that officer was entirely in the wrong, while the lieutenant was absolutely in the right, and in this manner the services of a most zealous officer were lost to the Navy. But now that the Admiralty recognise "the great ability" of this officer they should assuredly reinstate him in his proper place on the Active List.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

It is probable that A Troop, R.E. Train, under the command of Brevet Lieut.-Col. R. J. Bond, will encamp on the Thames this year at Egham, for their annual pontooning practice. The last time they practised on the Thames was three years ago.

Scots Guards. Gen. Lord Rokeby, G.C.B., Colonel of the regiment, died on the 24th ult. The recent deaths of his son-in-law (the Dean of Windsor) and his grandson (Mr. Wellesley) had greatly affected him. His lordship was one of the younger sons of Matthew, fourth Lord Rokeby, and was born in 1798. He entered the 3rd Guards in April, 1814, served in the campaign of 1815 with his regiment, and was present at the battles of Quatre Bras and Waterloo. He served also in the Eastern campaign of 1855, and was in command of the First Division during the siege and at the fall of Sebastopol. For his services during the campaign he had received the medal and clasp, was nominated a Knight Companion of the Order of the Bath and made a Knight of the Legion of Honour, and received the Turkish Order of the Medjidie of the Third Class, and the Sardinian and Turkish medals. In Feb. 1861, he was appointed Col. of the 77th Regt., and in 1875 he became Col. of the Scots Guards. In the same year he was made a G.C.B. He retired from the Active List of the Army in 1877. The remains of the deceased were interred on Thursday, with military honours, in Clewer Churchyard, near Windsor, the burial taking place in the presence of the Duke of Albany, the Duke of Cambridge, many distinguished officers, and several thousand spectators. Early in the morning a guard of honour of the 2nd Batn. was mounted at Stratford Place, whence the corpse was subsequently removed upon a gun-carriage of the C Baty., R.H.A., and escorted by Field-Marshal Lord Strathnairn, Major-Gen. Higginson, C.B., Col. the Hon. P. Methuen, Col. Moncrieff, and a squadron of the Royal Horse Guards, under Lord Arthur Somerset, to the Paddington Station, for conveyance to Windsor. Her Majesty was represented by Gen. Viscount Bridport, the Prince of Wales by Col. Arthur Ellis, and the Duke of Connaught by Major Egerton. The mourners included Lord Wiltshire, Mr. Damer, the Marquis of Winchester, Lord H. Paulet, Col. Vowles, Major Vowles, Col. Goulburn, Mr. Fazakerley, Mr. Goulburn, and Capt. Vowles. The special train conveying the remains and the gun-carriage bier reached Windsor at 11.40 a.m. There the Great Western Station was kept by the 1st Batn. Scots Guards, the corps also furnishing a guard of honour, which was posted opposite the arrival platform. The coffin was again laid upon the gun-carriage, and the cortége then moved from the station yard. The pall, a Union Jack, was borne by the Marquis of Hertford, Lord Alcester, Lord Abinger, Gen. Higginson, Gen. Gipps, Col. Moncrieff, Col. Clive, and Col. Fitzroy. At the graveside Gen. Viscount Bridport laid the wreaths of immortelles and bay-leaves sent by the Queen and Princess Beatrice upon the coffin, the lid of which was soon covered with floral contributions, completely hiding the name-plate, which bore the inscription :—" Henry, Lord Rokeby, G.C.B., General in the Army, and Colonel of the Scots Guards. Born, Feb. 2, 1798; died, May 25, 1883." The solemn ceremonial concluded with three volleys, fired by the Scots Guards.

After dinner, a handsome silver vase was presented by the old officers of the 74th to the officers' mess, in commemoration of the gallantry displayed by all ranks at the storming of Tel-el-Kebir, and as a memento of the kindly feeling which exists between the old and present officers. 102nd Royal Dublin Fusiliers. "Veritas" writes:—"As you have recently paid some attention to the unfair way in which stations are allotted to regiments, may I draw attention, through the medium of your valuable columns, to a case in point,—that of the 1st Batn. Royal Dublin Fusiliers (late 102nd)? The battalion returned to England for the first time in 1871. In 1876 they were again sent abroad, to Gibraltar; and it was then understood that they would only be abroad as long as they had been at home, i.e., five years. In Jan. 1879, they moved to Ceylon, where they still are. Ceylon is a station where there are always three, and during nine months of the year four, companies on detachment. The battalion is now under orders for Natal. Although there are other infantry battalions at that station, they have again been selected to detach three companies for service at Mauritius. Every soldier knows how much a regiment suffers by being broken up in this way. If this plan is persisted in, the Lieutenant-Colonel commanding the battalion will be retired at the end of five years' service without ever having seen his battalion together on parade. Can anything be more unfair?"

Rifle Brigade. Lieut. Wilkinson, 4th Batn., is en route from India, with troops, in the steamer Clan Grant. Lieut. Wilkinson, has been granted leave from India to England for fifteen months, on private affairs.

Sir Alexander Christason and many others, Surg.-Major C. H. Y. Godwin, A.M.D., was presented with a valuable inkstand, gold pen, &c., by the members of the Royal Arsenal Police Force, in recognition of his kindness in devoting his time and services to their instruction, ninety-five per cent. of those who have attended Dr. Godwin's lectures during the past two or three years having been awarded certificates, after passing the usual examinations by examiners detailed from St. John's Gate.

Pay Department. Last Tuesday's Gazette announced the promotions of 21 paymasters, who have attained five years' service in that capacity, to the hon. rank of major. The following particulars regarding these officers will be read with interest:—Major Eliott, formerly 7th Regt., 28 years' service. Major Raynes, late of the Store Department, 22 years' service. Major Bateman, formerly in the 31st Regt., 22 years' service; was attached to the Royal Artillery during the operations against the Taepings, near Shanghai, 1862, resulting in the capture of Nahsiang, Khadin, Isingpoo, Isolin, Najow, the affair at Nahsiang, and second capture of Khadin; served as assist.-engineer on the 30 miles' circuit survey round Shanghai, under Gen. C. G. (Chinese) Gordon, in 1862-3, and in the Egyptian Campaign of 1882, in the Head-quarter Treasury-chest Office (medal and star). Major Richmond, late 89th Regt., 25 years' service; accompanied Lord Wolseley to the Gold Coast in 1873, on special service, served through the Ashantee War of 1873-4, commanded a company of Houssas at Essaman, &c.; twice mentioned in despatches (medal and clasp). Major Packman, formerly in the 21st Regt., 25 years' service. Major A. J. Roberts, formerly of the 44th Regt., 25 years' service; served in the North China Campaign of 1860 (medal). Major Rose, late 21st Regt., 20 years' service. Major Wade, formerly of the Cameronians, 24 years' service; served with them in the Abyssinian Campaign of 1868 (medal). Major Coote, formerly 58th Regt., 22 years' service; served with the 8th Hussars in the Afghan War, 1879-1880 (medal). Major Kennedy, late of the Royals, 18 years' service. Major Willoughby, late 96th Regt., 17 years' service. Major Thornhill, formerly in the 19th Regt., 23 years' service; served with the 42nd (Black Watch) through the recent campaign in Egypt (medal and star). Major Compigné, late 106th Regt., 15 years' service. Major Brockman, late 80th Regt., 20 years' service. Major Mortimer, late 41st Regt., 18 years' service; served with the 75th Regt. during the Egyptian Campaign, 1882 (medal and star). Major Nott, late 103rd Regt., 16 years' service. Major Taylor, late 10th Regt., 19 years' service; served with the 90th L.I. (Wood's column), through the Zulu War of 1879, present at Zungin Neck, Kambula, and Ulundi (medal and clasp). Major Jackson, late 63rd Regt., 19 years' service. Major Ireland, late of the Royals, 15 years' service. Major Gilston, formerly of the Buffs, 23 years' service; and Major Gahan, late 20th Regt., 20 years' service. "Cynic" writes:—"In your paper of May 6, relative to the new Army Pay Department Warrant, I read as follows:—'Paymasters, if serving before June, 1881, are to get the rank of Major . . . . . . with servant's allowances.' I should be glad to know whether before June, 1881, means before June 1, 1881? The Warrant which created what are sometimes disrespectfully termed 'mud majors' was dated July 1, 1881. Many Captains of the Line joined the Army Pay Department, in ignorance of that Warrant, during June, 1881, especially in India. Their appointments date from the receipt of the letter, appointing them probationers, at the head-quarters of their regiments, and the misfortune of their being quartered in India at the time should not, I think, in this instance, at least, be counted against them. It occurs to me that the grant of the rank of Major is based on the fact that some reparation is due to those Line captains who made all their arrangements to join, and actually joined, the Army Pay Department before the issue of the Warrant dated July 1, 1881, which would have removed the, in many cases, absolute necessity for joining it. Under the circumstances, permit me to inquire whether the rank of Major is not to be given to those paymasters who joined the Army Pay Department on or before June 30, 1881? This would seem but an act of justice to all of them, and especially to those who were serving at the time in India, a month's post from the War Office. I repeat this important fact because the date of appointment practically depends on the date of the receipt of the letter appointing them."

The Auxiliary Forces.

MILITIA.

2nd Brigade, Lancashire Division, Royal Artillery. The inspection of the Brigade took place last week on conclusion of its annual training at Liverpool, Col. Aislabie being the inspecting officer. The total strength of the brigade was 589. At the close of the inspection Col. Aislabie said that he had great pleasure in complimenting the brigade on its steadiness, cleanliness, and smartness at drill. They were a very fine body of men—in fact, the finest militia regiment he had ever had the pleasure of seeing. The following officers were on parade:—Lieut.-Col. Brown, in command; Major Arnold, Capt. and Adjt. Uppleby, R.A., Capts. Batson, Caister, Fosbroke, and Drury; Lieuts. Ferguson, Blessig, and Nuttall, and Capt. W. Wishart, R.A., quartermaster.

The Buffs (East Kent Regiment). The 3rd and 4th Batns. (late East Kent Militia) completed their training at Shorncliffe on May 19, and returned by special train, viâ Ashford, to Canterbury, to be paid off, being played to Sandgate station by the band of the 1st Batn. Bedfordshire Regt. The conduct of the men in camp has been extremely satisfactory, and has excited very favourable comment from both Major-Gen. Newdigate, C.B., commanding the District, and Col. Davis, the camp commandant. The utmost camaraderie and good fellowship, on the part of both officers and men, has existed between the East Kent and the West Kent Militia, which has also just completed its training at Shorncliffe. On May 15 all the troops in camp, consisting of the 7th Dragoon Guards, Royal Artillery, 1st Batn. Bedfordshire Regt., and the 3rd and 4th Batns. East and Royal West Kent Regts. took part in a field-day and sham-fight, and a few days previously the East Kent were inspected by their Hon. Col., Lieut.-Gen. G. W. P. Bingham, C.B., by whose request a very pleasing eulogium on the appearance of the regiment, its steadiness under arms, and the creditable manner in which the various evolutions were performed was published the following day in Regimental Orders. On May 17 the official inspection of the 3rd Batn., under Col. Howell, and 4th Batn., under Col. Beales, took place, the inspecting officer being Col. Degacher, commanding 3rd Regimental District, both battalions parading in review order at 10 a.m., and in service marching order at 3 p.m., the regimental and companies' books and the mens' huts, dinners, &c., being inspected in the interim. In the morning Major-Gen. Newdigate, attended by Col. W. H. Knight, A.A. and Q.M.G., was present, and before the parade was dismissed delivered a short address to the men, expressing his "grateful thanks" for the favourable report made to him as to their conduct.

Suffolk Regiment. The 3rd Batn., under command of Col. Browning, finished its annual training on May 26. The battalion was inspected by Col. Byron, commanding the 12th Regimental District, on Thursday, the 24th ult., when the marching past, manual firing, bayonet exercises, and subsequent manœuvres were exceedingly well executed. In the afternoon, all the captains and subalterns were tested in drill, and the attack-formation was carried out by Col. Browning. The marching-order parade, followed by the inspection of kits, took place on Friday, the 25th, and the new reserve (50 in number) were seen and passed. There were only 18 absentees from the training, and the conduct of the men in billets has been exceedingly good. On Tuesday, May 22, the battalion had a field-day in Isleworth Park, the seat of the Marquis of Bristol, the hon. colonel. Two companies, under Hon. Lieut.-Col. Champion, represented the enemy, the main body of the battalion being under the personal command of Col. Browning. The operations were admirably carried out, the proceedings winding up with a march-past of the whole battalion, and a general salute. The officers and men were most hospitably entertained by the Marquis. The regimental sports took place afterwards, consisting of flat races and tug-of-war, the right-half battalion winning the latter event.

Yorkshire Regiment. New colours were presented to the 3rd Batn., some 900 strong, on Thursday, in the New Barracks, York, where the regiment is at present stationed. The presentation was made by Mrs. Gunter, of Wetherby, wife of the colonel of the regiment, and the new colours were received by the two senior lieutenants, the Hon. E. H. Lascelles and the Hon. R. W. Fitzwilliam. The day being fine, the ceremony was witnessed by a large party of ladies, and lunch followed in the mess-room. Col. Gunter and the officers gave a most enjoyable dance the night before, which was very numerously attended, and kept up till a late hour.

The under-mentioned regiments are ordered to assemble on Monday for 27 days' training and exercise:—2nd Brig. Cinque Ports Division (Kent Artillery), at Dover; 2nd Brig. Scottish Division (Haddington, &c., Artillery), at Dunbar; 2nd Brig. North Irish Division (Antrim Artillery), at Carrickfergus, and 8th Brig. ditto (Sligo Artillery), at Sligo; 4th Batn. Derbyshire Regt., at Newark, in camp; 3rd Batn. Gordon Highlanders, at Aberdeen; 7th Batn. King's Royal Rifle Corps, at Aldershot; 5th Batn. Rifle Brigade, at Woolwich; 5th Batn. THE VOLUNTEERS.

24th Middlesex (Post Office) Rifles. Following the usual custom, the regiment paraded in Hyde Park on Saturday last for its annual inspection. The regiment had the largest muster that it has ever produced since its formation, standing on parade in ten solid companies, each of about 24 files. Col. Clive, commanding the Grenadier Guards, was the inspecting officer. The battalion at the close of a very successful inspection was formed into square, and addressed in a highly complimentary manner by the inspecting officer. Col. Clive then decorated the six men who have lately returned from Alexandria and Cairo with the Khedive's star, they having already received the Egypt medal.

This Asylum was opened in February, 1854, to provide a home for the widows of non-commissioned officers and privates of the Army of not less than 50 years of age.

There are 65 widows in the Asylum.

Each widow has a furnished room, and receives seven shillings weekly, besides a monthly allowance of two shillings and sixpence for coals.

The House is capable of containing 70 widows, and the Committee appeal to the public for funds to enable them to admit the additional number, the present subscriptions being insufficient.

The funded income of the charity yields only £930, with an additional £50 from the Princess Mary's Fund for Nurses, to meet an estimated expenditure of £3,000 per annum.

An annual subscription of half-a-guinea, or a donation of five guineas, entitles to one vote at each election, with the right of nominating a candidate.

Army & Navy Gazette.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JUNE 2, 1883.

SIR E. J. REED has turned his attention of late to inventing a torpedo-proof armour-clad. The result of the labour of the late Chief Constructor of the Navy has been embodied in a specification, for which Letters Patent are being applied, and assuredly may be granted without injuring any one. It is satisfactory to know, however, that Sir Edward Reed is no longer in a position to introduce this, his latest experiment, into the Navy, as, although the idea governing the so-called invention may be thought pretty by some, the great body of Naval men throughout the world will denounce it as unpractical, unseamanlike, and anything but safe, even should Sir Edward Reed succeed in making his ship float otherwise than bottom up. The greatest beam of this new type of ship is placed by her designer or inventor, call him what he will, above the water-line. Within an armoured hull, in shape like the body of a turtle, he places his armament and motive-power; in fact, all the fighting strength of his war-ship. This armoured hull is supposed to have just sufficient buoyancy to float. To enable it to obtain speed, a light, long, narrow hull is built under it, to raise it above the water, and represents the bottom of the new type. The outer plating of this light shell, which is subdivided into numerous compartments, is intended to be far enough removed from the calipee of the turtle to enable the explosive force of a torpedo to expend itself before reaching the armour of which it is composed. This is all very well, but it is not the idea of a practical seaman or genuine Naval architect. The distance of the outer unarmoured from the armoured bottom, if computed for 50 lb. of dynamite, will be inadequate to arrest the explosive force of 200 lb. of the same material. The quantity of ballast required to keep such a top-heavy structure upright would be so great as to seriously affect the buoyancy of the ship. It would always be in danger of turning turtle. And supposing the cellular bottom water-logged, what then? We, unlike the Times, strongly advise the Admiralty not to grudge foreign Governments the services of Sir E. J. Reed in the present instance; but, on the contrary, by absolutely declining even to take the matter into their consideration, to relieve Sir Edward J. Reed at once of all trammels of conscience as to his duty to his country, and thus enable him to devote his whole time and attention to introducing his new torpedo-proof armour-clad into foreign Navies.

Admirers and upholders of the "Short-service system" must be charmed at its success in the Army, when they read of the bribe of £10 to each soldier, whose time has expired, to remain on until he completes twelve years with the colours in India. If the Army is only to be kept to its full strength by periodical bribes, a pretty penny the taxpayers of this favoured nation will be called upon to pay!

We have no wish to coddle our soldiers, but there are occasions when a little forethought on the part of those in command would conduce to the comfort of all ranks. The weather on Saturday was considered too inclement for the Horse-Guards parade and the Aldershot review, but it was not sufficiently bad to prevent parades of the garrisons of Dover and Shorncliffe. Now, considering that it was raining (metaphorically) "cats and dogs" at both these stations, Tommy Atkins and his officers must have got very unpleasantly wet. One would suppose that tailors charged nothing for uniform.

How much longer are the Cavalry lately returned from Egypt to be kept in the unsightly drab overalls? Does the Government contemplate another war—beg pardon—other "military operations?"

Before leaving Egypt, Sir Archibald Alison gave a most flattering testimonial to Sheykh Abdel Malik, a member of one of the five leading families of Mount Lebanon, who has been the General's chief interpreter throughout the campaign from the date when he joined head-quarters in Cyprus, to the day Sir Archibald left Egypt. It will be remembered that Sheykh Abdel Malik was present at the reconnaissance made outside the walls of Alexandria on August 5, 1882, at the engagement at Tel-el-Kebir on September 13, 1882, and at the surrender, at Tantah four days later, of the rearguard of the Salahiyeh Army, when Sheykh Abdel Malik gave evidence of such tact and discretion in the discharge of his duties as led to a very high eulogium being passed on him by the distinguished General who has just left the country.

It was stated in a halfpenny daily a few days ago that military officers could both accept and wear foreign orders and decorations, without troubling themselves to first obtain the sanction of the Queen. The editor of the paper in question would do well to post himself up a little before writing on subjects of which he is completely ignorant.

Colonel Cromer Ashburnham, K.C.B., is still in England, but, strange to say, remains unknighted, though it is more than six months since he received promotion in the Order of the Bath, for his services at Tel-el-Kebir. We presume it is the old story of modest merit being neglected. The Adjutant-General's department will, no doubt, contend that it is no business of theirs to arrange a visit to Balmoral; but it was the Adjutant-General himself who recommended Colonel Ashburnham for honour, and he surely cannot be forgetful of the claims of so very deserving a soldier.

Best colour for the dress of the Army: Invisible green.

We cannot bring ourselves to believe that the report can be true that the Post-Office Volunteers were left standing under arms in a heavy fall of rain in Hyde Park on Saturday last for more than half an hour, awaiting an inspecting officer who never came, but sent a substitute, who arrived on foot, and carried out the inspection in the full dress of the Guards, with a cape over his shoulders. The Guards have a reputation to maintain, and we cannot think that they would err in such matters.

Colonel G. F. de Berry, half-pay, late 56th Regiment, commanding a Brigade of the Madras Army, attains the age of 59 on the 13th inst., and will have to retire.

The honours conferred upon some of the most prominent Staff officers of the Egyptian Expedition would seem to have been awarded somewhat prematurely, if we may judge from the evidence given before Lord Morley's Committee. Anyway, there are some men who may thank their lucky stars that the Duke of Wellington was not in command in Egypt. The less said about Egypt in future the better. The Blue-book issued this week is an eye-opener, and no mistake, and certain members of the ever-victorious Staff would not be flattered could they hear the remarks which have been made with regard to them in the Service Clubs since Tuesday. Every dog has his day, and it strikes us forcibly that there are some officers in the Army who have had theirs.

An anxious aspirant asks us if we can inform him whether it is ever intended to make any more promotions to the rank of Major-General; and if so, when? We have put the question to an official, and his reply is suggestive :—"Yes; the promotions will be given, but when I cannot say, for really we do not know here (at the War Office) for two days together where we are." It is chaos all round, and nothing but a complete demolition and reconstruction of the edifice, from foundation to roof, will put things right again. What progress we have made in the direction of Army reform!

Surgeon-General J. E. Clutterbuck, M.D., became 60 years of age yesterday, and will be placed on the Retired List, another vacancy occurring on the 14th inst., when Surgeon-General J. A. Woolfryes, C.B., C.M.G., will have to retire. These retirements will promote Deputy-Surgeons-General J. Irvine, M.D., and J. Lamprey, M.B.

A Veterinary-Surgeon is in future to be promoted to 1st Class on completing 10 years' service, of which at least three years shall have been spent abroad. No officer will, however, be promoted unless recommended by the Principal Veterinary-Surgeon.

The head-quarters of the 68th Regimental District are about to be moved from Sunderland to Newcastle-on-Tyne, when the command will be amalgamated with that of the 5th Regimental District, under Colonel W. P. Collingwood, C.M.G. Colonel K. R. Niven, who has had the command at Sunderland since October last, will be transferred to some other district.

We learn from Moscow that Lord Wolseley is not at all pleased at the treatment he has received from the Russian Government, in being separated from the rest of the English Mission in the Kremlin, and placed in apartments in a hotel outside it. Considering that the Mission comprises only six personages, it should not have been a difficult matter to have found a room or two in the rabbits' warren of apartments in which the Duke and Duchess are located. The Slaviansky Bazaar, where Lord Wolseley is lodged, is five minutes' drive from the Kremlin Palace, but the road leading to it is usually so crowded with people and vehicles that the journey mostly occupies two or three times as long. The influx of foreign and native military visitors is such that Lord Wolseley is completely lost among them. Cards by the bushel have been left at the Slaviansky Bazaar, but beyond this no special attention has been paid to the hero of Tel-el-Kebir. As a matter of fact, the Egyptian campaign is quite forgotten in Russia, and the interest in its actors has completely died out.

The voluntary retirement of General Sir Alfred Horsford, G.C.B., announced in Tuesday's Gazette, reduces the number of full Generals (Cavalry and Infantry) on the establishment to eleven; or twelve including Lord Wolseley, who is supernumerary. The number provided for is seven, so that there are still four to absorb.

An officer at present in command of one of our Line regiments in South Africa, besides being at the head of his corps holds no less than two other appointments. It is generally understood that the ranks of Deputy-Assistant-Adjutant-General and Garrison Adjutant are held respectively by officers of an inferior grade to that of a commanding officer. In the present case, however, there is no reason for one man fulfilling all three appointments, as there are many good officers to select from for the Staff positions. Work must be very slack in the regiment if its commanding officer has time to carry on the duties of Deputy-Assistant-Adjutant-General and Garrison Adjutant.

We have received the following letter from a Highlander :—"Honoured Sir,—I hope you will allow me, in the name of all my comrades here, to make a protest against the treatment of our good General, Sir F. Roberts. After all the fuss that was made about the war in Egypt, it makes all our blood run cold to read of the treatment of the sick and wounded. There was no such mismanagement in the Cabul-Candahar march. Everything there was perfect as it could be, because the General in command had the confidence of every officer and man of the force under his command. They only gave him £12,500 for all he did, but for allowing such great mismanagement in Egypt, Parliament talks of rewarding another General with £2,000 a year, or the equivalent thereof. I ask, is there such a thing as justice in the land, when such a shameful slight is passed on one of the most amiable and gallant soldiers who ever drew sword? The whole of us here would lay down our lives willingly for Sir F. Roberts, because we know how unselfish he was. Do, sir, allow me to express the views of my comrades, standing around me, if only to let the good General know, far away in his Eastern home, that the soldiers who followed him in Afghanistan are not unmindful of his care of them, and that whatever Government may say or do, he will have their sympathy and good wishes to the longest day they live?"

Officers who have already passed in Part I. or Part II. of the Syllabus of Examination for a company qualification, will not be required to be re-examined in those parts under the Syllabus, dated 9th ult. In all examinations after the next, officers will be required to pass in both parts of the same Syllabus.

The Coquette and Cygnet were in dock at Malta, and would probably be ready for sea by May 31 and June 18 respectively. The Cruiser was waiting to be docked.

Dragon, Com. Bolitho, has been ordered from Aden to Tamatave, Madagascar, to reinforce the Dryad.

Duncan, Capt. D'Arcy, flagship of Vice-Admiral E. B. Rice, C.B., Commander-in-Chief at the Nore. A court-martial was held on Thursday for the trial of John Conley, stoker, belonging to the Encounter, for striking John McCarthy, leading stoker, whilst in the execution of his duty at Malta on May 7; secondly, for drawing a weapon against Ship's Corpl. Robert Franklin on the same day. Capt. Lord Walter T. Kerr, of the Pembroke, presided, and Capt. G. Robinson prosecuted. Mr. W. B. Risk, the admiral's secretary, officiated as judge-advocate, and Mr. V. H. Stallon, solicitor, Sheerness, appeared as the prisoner's friend. For the defence, it was urged that prisoner struck McCarthy in self-defence, for throwing some coals at him in the bunker; he was only joking with Franklin when he used the expressions referred to, and seized the weapon in fun. He had not the slightest intention of injuring either officer. The court considered both charges proved, and sentenced the prisoner to five years' imprisonment, with hard labour. The prisoner's certificates showed that he bore an indifferent character, and that his time expired in the service in August last.

Encounter, Capt. Robinson, was taken into basin at Sheerness to pay off on May 25. She is being dismantled in the steam basin at Sheerness Dockyard. Her guns have been taken out and removed to the gun-wharf at Woolwich. The Encounter will be paid off on the 15th inst., and the crew granted six weeks' leave of absence. A very sad accident occurred on board the vessel on Thursday morning to an engine-room artificer named John Russell Green, who was employed with others in disconnecting some machinery in the engine-room. A cylinder cover of considerable weight fell upon his right foot, and completely severed it from the leg. He was conveyed to the Naval Barracks Infirmary, where Staff Surg. John N. Stone found it necessary to amputate the leg just above the ankle. Green was afterwards removed to the Naval Hospital at Chatham.

Euryalus, Capt. Hastings, C.B., flagship of Rear-Admiral Sir William Hewett, V.C., Commanding-in-Chief on the East Indies station, was at Colombo on May 6; would leave for Trincomalee on May 10. The Eclipse was on way to Aden; would proceed to Zeila, and watch reported slave-trading at that port; was at Aden May 17. The Tourmaline, Ranger, and Osprey were cruising off coast of Arabia for suppression of slave-trade; will rejoin flag at Trincomalee on S.W. monsoon breaking. The Woodlark, Arab, and Philomel were in Persian Gulf. The Dryad at Tamatave, Island of Madagascar. The Dragon on way to Zanzibar; left Aden on April 21 to follow orders of senior officer of East Coast of Africa, and has since been ordered to Tamatave, Madagascar.

Heroine, Capt. Blackburne, was at Guayaquil on April 26, and would leave for Esquimault about May 1.

Humber, Com. C. Hawkins, is lying at Sheerness Harbour. She is taking in stores, and her defects were completed on Thursday by the dockyard shipwrights. She is to be at Portsmouth by the 5th inst., and sail on the 7th, with stores and supernumeraries for the Mediterranean. At the Rochester Police-court, on Tuesday morning, William Munden, first-class ship's corporal, belonging to the Humber, was charged with unlawfully having 4 lb. of unmanufactured tobacco in his possession, at Sheerness, on May 22. Defendant pleaded not guilty, and made no defence. From the evidence produced, it seems that on the evening in question the defendant and a number of other men were landed at Sheerness Pier, for a few hours' leave. He was carrying a parcel, and, as it appeared somewhat bulky, a water policeman questioned him as to its contents. He admitted that it was ship's tobacco, and offered to pay the duty. This was refused, and the tobacco was seized, defendant being placed under arrest and removed to his ship. The prosecution did not press for a heavy penalty, and the Bench inflicted a fine of £1 7s. 10d., including costs. The money was paid.

Lily, Com. Evans, was inspected by Capt. Carter (Royal Adelaide), and went into harbour at Devonport to pay off on May 25.

Mallard, Lieut. and Com. Littledale, arrived at Halifax, Nova Scotia, on May 30, flying the "yellow Jack." Fever on the coast of Haiti has been very bad.

Merlin, Lieut.-Com. R. O'B. C. Brereton, was taken into the Channel on Tuesday for a six hours' steam trial. On returning to the Sound her ammunition was removed, and she then came up harbour to have various alterations effected in her fittings.

Minotaur, Capt. Fellowes, flagship of Vice-Admiral Sir William Dowell, K.C.B., senior officer in command of the Channel Squadron, left Gibraltar with the ships under his command on May 28 for Vigo, whence the Squadron will proceed to Lisbon and Bantry.

Neptune, Capt. W. H. Maxwell, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral J. C. Wilson, second-in-command in the Channel Squadron, arrived at Gibraltar on the afternoon of the 19th ult., making the passage from Plymouth in a little under five days. The weather, on the whole, was fine, though there was occasionally a considerable swell, and the ship's progress was at least as much retarded by the effect of head winds on her masts and superstructure as it was at times assisted by the use of sails. The engines worked continuously, without the smallest misadventure. A uniform rate of 40 revolutions was kept up, giving an average speed of 9·1 knots. The consumption of coal was, as nearly as possible, three tons per hour. On the 18th, the 38-ton turret guns were fired, first singly, then in pairs, and, lastly, a breadside of all four together. A target had been laid out, and the ship steamed slowly round it in fairly smooth water. The practice made, considering how short a time the Neptune has been in commission, was exceedingly good. The effect of the concussion from firing the heavy guns, which had been somewhat dreaded, turned out to be much less than anticipated, and caused little or no inconvenience. Admiral Wilson shifted his flag to the Agincourt the day after his arrival.

Raven, Lieut. and Com. Ross, arrived at Torquay from Sheerness, and left for Devonport on May 26, where she arrived on May 28.

Rocket, Lieut.-Com. Vere B. Orlebar, arrived in Plymouth Sound on Thursday from the Pacific station, and left on Friday for Sheerness to pay off.

Sapphire, Capt. John R. T. Fullerton, which left Devonport on Feb. 24, arrived at Simon's Bay, Cape of Good Hope, on May 6, all well, after a passage of 72 days, including four days' stay at Madeira. In case of no further disturbance among the Boers, she was to leave on May 16 for Singapore, to take the place of the Encounter on the China station.

Sappho, Com. Clark, left Puna on April 21, on passage to Esquimault, viâ Panama.

Shannon, Capt. Kelly, of the Plymouth Steam Reserve, in command, arrived at Portsmouth from Devonport, and went into harbour on May 25, to receive the officers and crew of the Warrior on June 1.

Stork, Lieut. and Com. Blennerhasset, was at Lagos on April 21.

Tenedos, Capt. Fane, would leave Halifax for St. John's, Newfoundland, after arrival of mail due on May 19.

Tourmaline, Capt. R. H. Boyle. A court-martial has been held on board this ship, to investigate charges preferred against Lieut. Alfred E. Rawnsley, of the Woodlark. The court consisted of Capt. Boyle (of the Tourmaline), who presided, Capt. Cardale (Euphrates), Capt. Dupuis (Serapis), Capt. Hastings, C.B. (Euryalus), and Com. Darwall (Ranger). There were four charges, the first being that, on May 14, 1881, he negligently performed duties imposed upon him while officer of the watch. On this charge he was acquitted. The second charge was that, on July 10, 1881, he had wilfully disobeyed the lawful command of Com. Nesham, of the Woodlark, at that time in the Persian Gulf, and had failed to take the afternoon chronometer sights. On this charge he was acquitted so far that he had not wilfully disobeyed orders, as his pocket watch was out of order. The third charge was that, on August 4, 1881, he had wilfully disobeyed lawful commands to take sights as directed by a written memorandum, dated July 12, 1881. On this charge he was acquitted. The fourth charge was that, on Aug. 28, 1881, he had negligently performed his duty while officer of the watch. In regard to this charge, Lieut. Rawnsley admitted that he had sat down while officer on watch. The sentence of the court was that Lieut. Rawnsley be reprimanded and dismissed his ship. The Allahabad paper says:—"Judging by the official report, and assuming that nothing more serious than what appeared in evidence lies behind the charges, Lieut. Rawnsley seems a hardly treated man. The Naval martinet may not think so, but most men will agree that a reprimand and dismissal from his ship is severe punishment for sitting down when officer on watch. There were four charges, each of them regarding negligence on watch; each of them, too, referring to occurrences so far back as different dates in May, July, and August, 1881; and all except one declared to be without foundation by a court-martial held, not in the Persian Gulf, where the offences took place, but in Bombay, in March, 1883, or nearly two years from the date of the first alleged offence. Let us add that we do not hold a brief from Lieut. Rawnsley, whose name and person are equally unknown to us; but a suspicion that something has been kept in the background which would justify the sentence, or else that justice has been overstrained, prompts a recital of the facts and the obvious conclusions they suggest."

Triton, Staff Com. T. H. Tizard, having completed her surveying work in the River Thames, returned to Sheerness on Thursday morning. Her defects are to be attended to at once, in order that she may be ready for surveying duties on the Scottish coast at an early date.

Wye, Staff Com. Miller, left Woolwich on Thursday morning, and arrived at Sheerness Harbour in the afternoon. She is to be docked and thoroughly overhauled at Sheerness Dockyard, where her defects will be made good.

Lieut. J. Coombe, late of the Dart; Lieut. Maturin and Sub-Lieut. Whitehouse, of the Beagle; Lieut. King and Sub-Lieut. Messurier, of the Sandfly; Boatswains Wood, Green, Andrews, Windsor, thirty-three seamen, relieved crews of the Australian schooners recently supplanted by small steam vessels, and four naval invalids, arrived at Plymouth on May 30, by the mail steamer Australia, from Sydney, N.S.W.

The old Mars, training-ship in the Tay, was nearly destroyed by fire last Saturday. Before the conflagration could be got under, nearly the whole of the afterpart of the old liner was burnt out. The fire broke out in the captain's cabin. The boys behaved well, and showed both courage and discipline.

The Admiralty have awarded the medal for long-service and good-conduct to the under-mentioned petty officer:—George Edward Shute, captain's coxswain, H.M.S. Lily.

The annual general meeting of the members of the Army and Navy Pensioners' Employment Society was held on the 25th ult. at the offices, 44 Charing Cross. The Council's report, which was unanimously adopted, showed that in 1882 1,314 men were registered, and 1,759 employed, and that through married men getting work their families, to the number of 1,175 women and 2,299 children, had benefitted. The subscriptions and donations exceeded those of the previous year by £166 5s. 8d., and the report conveyed the thanks of the council to the regiments and individuals whose response to their appeal of 1881 led to this increase, as well as to those of the City Companies who had shown their interest in the soldier by contributing to the same result. The balance credit was shown to be £172 14s. 11d., an increase of £137 16s. 9d. over that of 1881, which enabled the society to continue to maintain all its branches, at any rate for the present; but it was earnestly hoped that this support might be maintained by contributions, no matter how small. The usefulness of the branches was proved by all of them showing more men employed last year than the year before, and it appeared that in the Dublin branch particularly there had been a great demand for emergency caretakers and constables in aid, one of the latter, Charles M'Donnell, late corporal 13th Hussars, having greatly distinguished himself in frustrating the attempt on the life of Mr. Justice Lawson. A vote of thanks to the chairman closed the meeting.

THE MACHINE-GUN CASE.

Judgment was given on Wednesday by Mr. Baron Huddleston in the case of "Nordenfelt v. Gardner and the Gardner Gun Company." This important case has taken ten days to hear. It was an action for the infringement of the Nordenfelt machine-gun patent. The plaintiff is the owner of the patent originally granted to one J. H. Johnson, in 1873, for the well-known "battery" gun bearing the name of Nordenfelt, and he alleged that the defendants, by making and selling the equally well known "Gardner battery" gun, have infringed his patent in several material points, the most important being (1), the apparatus (called the magazine) for holding the cartridges in position, ready to be dropped on to the block or slide (the "carrying" block) which transfers them into position for firing; and (2), in the construction and arrangement of the carrying block. The defendants, besides raising the usual technical objections on the ground of the insufficiency of the plaintiff's specification, and of its claiming more than was described in the provisional specification, denied the infringements, and attacked the plaintiff's patent as having been anticipated in several of the points claimed as novel by prior inventions in public use, especially by the Gatling, the Miles, the Martini, and the Winchester guns. The learned Judge gave judgment for the plaintiff, holding that there had been an infringement of the plaintiff's patent. This settles a much-vexed question, and proves that it was not without cause that the Army and Navy Gazette warned the authorities from the first day it was decided to try machine guns to be careful in the selection they made. We then pointed out that there are two systems of machine-guns, the rotary and the direct-acting. The Gatling is the type of the rotary, and the Nordenfelt is the type of the direct-acting system. All other types must infringe either the one or the other of the patents taken out for these guns, and, perchance, may infringe the patents of both these inventors. We have now been confirmed in our opinion by the decision and judgment of Mr. Baron Huddleston, and we hope that the War-Office authorities will admit that the gun constructed by Mr. Gardner cannot be as efficient a weapon as the one from which it is now admitted to have been copied. The evidence of Lord Alcester during the trial is most interesting, and we therefore reproduce it in full, as well as the evidence of Mr. Gardner, which is most amusing. Lord Alcester, who, as Admiral Sir Beauchamp Seymour, commanded the English Fleet during the bombardment of Alexandria, was duly sworn, and stated :—"I had the fullest opportunity of seeing these guns in action at Alexandria. We had eight ironclads, mounting amongst them 59 Nordenfelt guns. The ship I was on board of—the Invincible—had 10 of them, one of which was in the maintop. As far as we could see, the fire of the Egyptians in the battery we worked against was to a great extent kept down by the fire of the Nordenfelts, as much as it was by the fire of our heavy guns. I have the highest possible opinion of the Nordenfelt guns for accuracy and penetration, and also for range. On taking possession of the Meks batteries, we found one of the Nordenfelt bullets embedded to a depth of over half an inch in a 10-in. wrought-iron gun opposed to us. As I entered the Khedive's drawing-room, I found on the floor a Nordenfelt bullet, which must have been fired from either the Alexandra, the Superb, or the Sultan, the nearest of which was 2,300 yards off during the firing. As regards the working of these guns, I found them work very well; and as regards effect, they were effective. I have the highest possible opinion of them, and I reported most favourably on them. We had only 1-in. calibre Nordenfelt guns on board, and none for the Martini-Henry ammunition. The guns for rifle ammunition which I sent up to Tel-el-Kebir were the old Gatling guns. I would have given anything to have had the Nordenfelt guns up there." Mr. William Gardner, one of the defendants in this action, was examined at considerable length, and we give the following résumé of his amusing statements :—"I was captain of Artillery in the United States Army at the time of the Civil War. I began to invent machine-guns in 1866 and in 1867. I went to the Paris Exposition, where I became convinced there was great room for improvement in fire-arms. At that time I was a law student, because my father was a lawyer; I was cut out for a lawyer, but became a gun-inventor. In 1867 I was foolish enough to conceive the idea of a magazine pistol. In 1868 I invented a magazine rifle. In 1869 I submitted it to H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge and all his Staff, at a two-hours' interview. There were present Lord William Ebury and Gen. Sir Frederick Campbell, and Col. Fletcher was ordered to London forthwith to meet me and Gen. Lefroy, who was at that time Director of Artillery. In 1869 I went over to Paris with my magazine rifle, and my friends there said, 'Why do not you get up a mitrailleuse on the same principle?' In 1875 I made a four-barrelled machine-gun, and the same year I showed in America the drawings of a six-barrelled machine-gun. I was led astray from my convictions by the instructions of Ordnance officers. In 1876 I exhibited one of my four-barrelled machine-guns at the Philadelphia Exhibition, and at the beginning of that Centennial Exhibition I saw Nordenfelt's mitrailleuse exhibited. My guns there had fixed rests like the Baranoffsky gun; in fact, without knowing it, I have been an infringer for years of Baranoffsky, who was a personal friend of mine, and whom I esteemed very highly. He is dead now, poor fellow. I patented a two-barrelled gun in England in 1876. In 1873, after the Gatling gun was perfected, there was nothing left in machine-guns to be invented, except details. The Gatlings had done all that could be done, and the only thing left to us poor fellows was to do the same thing they did, but in another way. As to novelty in 1873, it is all 'tweedledee and tweedledum,' after all. Mr. Nordenfelt has come nearer to the Gatling than we do to Nordenfelt; that is the point I make, it will hold water—there is no more new principle in it than if you take a whole lot of cold beef and make a warm hash of it, it is all the same thing. In my testimony, I claim the privilege which John Stuart Mill claimed in his logic, to define the terms I use. I want to define this slide by its functions; I will call it a 'chose,' if you like, it is a nondescript; there is no name for it yet. I want to give your Lordship ocular demonstration, which conveys the same impression to all minds. Let us illustrate this thing, my Lord, by a brick—here is an assemblage of bricks, there is a brick wall. Now, the problem is to transfer those you have from this pile to the man who builds the brick wall, which is the ultimate use of the bricks. Mr. Gatling prefers to have his man walk round in a circle. Mr. Nordenfelt sends his man directly across,—there is a similarity. What do I do? I have got two men to do the work of one; one man takes a brick from the pile and pitches it over to the fellow who hands it to the man that builds the wall. Nordenfelt's counsel may set up, 'Oh! but we could cut our man in two, and put one half at the brick pile and the other half at the wall.' Then they say, 'What have you got?' I say you have got just what we have, if you cut a man in two,—you have got nothing. I claim the positive extractor as the only ingenious point of my five-barrelled gun, in comparison with my other guns. I never did believe in my five-barrelled Gardner gun; I have told Admiral Herbert and everybody else so, ever since they took it. I am here to give testimony just as I think, regardless of my interest. My Lord, I am not coached. Comparing my feeding apparatus with the Nordenfelt feeding, I mean to say this,—that the Nordenfelt is more like the Gatling than mine is like the Nordenfelt. When I came out with this feeding apparatus—contrary even to the theory of the Machine-gun Committee, as Major McClintock, who was here to-day knows—it was a new revelation, more than the Book of Mormon. I am here, my Lord, to tell all I know and be frank, because your Lordship wants to get at the truth. It was a new revelation, and like a declaration of a new religion,—quite as definite as that. When the Nordenfelt people undertake to tell you that this rabbet of theirs is intended to do what my conductor does, it is all rubbish. I always said to the Machine-gun Committee, when they came to theorise, 'Let us try and see, and then there will be no question about it.' The result was that I was always right. I have been reading 'Artemus Ward' lately, and I have been getting jocose. In 1878 I formed a company for the purpose of working my patent; it is not an English company, it is a corporation under the laws of the State of Ohio, in America. I got some men in, my money gave out, and I had to get somebody to back me up. The company and I did not get on well together. Well, the company was formed, I being all in all, you might say. Of course, we had nominally this fellow as president, and that fellow as vice-president, general agent, and all that sort of thing; but it was Gardner, after all. I am telling the truth all round. I came to England, because I took it to be the best country for me to go to. I went round to the War Office, and saw Colonel Alderson, Assistant-Director of Artillery. He told me he did not go in much for that sort of thing. Then I went to General Campbell, Director of Artillery. I told him I would wait there till they did go in for it, and that either they had got to change their minds, or to change the Director of Artillery. Well, I won. I did what I said I would. You take Gardner out of the company, and there would not be much left. It is a good deal as Bismarck says about governing the empire of Germany. He said, 'I find it more difficult to govern with a Parliament than without, but I govern just the same.' I do not dodge the issue, my Lord. Captain Watmough's position in the company was a conundrum."

Reviews.

THE MAGAZINES.

The June number of Blackwood opens with an elaborate review of Stephen's "History of the Criminal Law," a work which has been received with acclamation, and recognised as one of the most important that has issued from the press in modern times. It would be difficult to name any writer so well qualified to carry out the task he has undertaken as Mr. Justice Stephen. For nearly thirty years he has given especial attention to the administration of this branch of the law. Amongst the different codes which were passed for India during his short tenure of the legal membership of Council, Criminal Procedure was one of the most important. He also drew the draft criminal code which in 1878 was introduced into Parliament by Sir John Holker, on behalf of Lord Beaconsfield's Ministry, and served on the Commission to which that draft was referred. There is one feature in Mr. Justice Stephen's history well calculated to render it attractive to the reader; that is, the dedication of a considerable portion of it to questions not purely legal, but of general interest. The third part of "The Millionaire" quite sustains the character of its predecessors. There are also in the present number one or two minor articles of considerable merit, which ought not to be passed by.

Temple Bar for June contains a review of the career of "One Great Soldier Produced by France," Gen. Chanzy. In the opinion of the writer, he was superior to MacMahon or D'Aurelle, and was distinguished for qualities which placed him far before Generals of those types. His strategic conceptions were equal to combinations on the largest scale, and were brilliant and soldier-like. In the field his conduct was admirable, especially during the campaign between the Loire, the Scarthe, and the Mayenne, where it proved sufficient to elicit the most unqualified approval of Von Moltke. It is also observed by the writer in Temple Bar that Chanzy possessed, to an eminent degree, the art of winning the confidence and respect of his soldiers, which alone rendered his services invaluable. Whenever the occasion arose, General Chanzy pronounced against the mischievous popular fallacy that a nation may trust for its defence on armies formed of young levies :—"Let it not be supposed that improvised armies are a sufficient security in the great crises of war which may again happen. The events in which we have taken part demonstrate beyond question that a nation can only be sure of its independence, and really strong, when its military organisation is carefully matured, complete, and powerful." In concluding his observations, the writer says :—"He has passed away, and it was not given him to attempt to avenge the disasters of France, and to bring victory back to her standards. The vulgar opinion may be that success is necessary to make a General great, but this is not the judgment of true critics, and Chanzy will rank among captains like William of Orange, Villars, and Washington,—men who never won a great pitched battle, yet where martial qualities and heroic constancy conspicuously shown in adverse fortune, entitled them to the admiration of mankind."

One of the most important statements connected with the Cornhill Magazine is that on June 27 next the first number of a new series of that time-honoured magazine will be issued, price Sixpence. It is at all times painful to part with an old and valued friend, even though the parting may be for his advantage. How many there, no doubt, are who recollect the first issue of this most attractive periodical, and who looked so anxiously for the appearance of each succeeding number. Its life has not been a short one, but nevertheless we may be justified in concluding that it intends to continue its existence by the imbibing of some new blood in its management, while at the same time it marches with the course of the times, by gracefully submitting to a large reduction in price. The programme for the first appearance of the new series is already before the public, and no one can deny that it makes a tempting offer for public approbation. It is to be edited by James Payn, and the first number is to contain the opening chapters of a new novel, written by the author of "Vice Versâ" and "The Black Poodle." So far for the letter-press; now for the illustrations. The following artists, among others, have taken charge of the bantling, and will take care that it receives fair-play :—G. Du Maurier, William Small, W. Ralston, H. Furness, E. J. Wheeler, R. C. Woodville, T. P. Atkinson. With all this to work upon, we feel little difficulty in predicting that the new series of the Cornhill Magazine will successfully accomplish the rôle it has undertaken, and at the same time acquire a popularity quite equal to that achieved by its predecessor.

The June number of Baily's Magazine will contain a portrait and memoir of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, together with a frontispiece, Mr. Arthur Coventry.

The directors of "Cassell and Co., Limited," have made their first effort in a co-operative form by the publication of an extra holiday number of The Family Magazine. It is a production thoroughly deserving of praise in every respect. The contents are varied and attractive, whilst the strictest attention has evidently been paid to the selection of matter, which cannot fail to satisfy the public taste.

The first number of Palmy Days offers for perusal about twenty stories, accompanied with well-executed illustrations. Of course they vary in their degrees of excellence, but they must be dull readers who will not admit that they are all of a high standard of merit. We quote one specimen, which inculcates the necessity of observing certain conditions when preparing for a summer holiday :—"To over-worked men of business, and especially to literary men, a summer holiday by the seaside, or among the Alps, or other mountainous regions, is greatly to be recommended. But, in order to get the full benefit of such a holiday, no work of any kind must be done—i.e., the artist must not take his picture with him to finish, nor the author his book, and the business man must not have letters—other than those of friendship—to attend to. Therefore, it is not merely money that a person has to take into consideration when he asks himself the question, 'Can I afford myself a holiday in July or August?' but time as well: 'Can I finish such and such a piece of work?' or, 'have done with this or that business by July or August, so as to go away from home with nothing on my mind?' 'When I lock my study or office door, am I quite sure that Daddy Care is safe inside, and that there isn't a crack nor a crevice through which he can escape and follow me to the Isle of Skye or Jersey?' Well, one must just make sure that there is no chance of his escaping, or even of his being carried away in the neatly-packed portmanteau. Why, the rascal has been found, ere now, in the pocket of an old office coat. It is a favourite trick of his to come popping out of the post-bag, with a 'How d'ye do?' and 'Here we are again!' And he has been frequently known to take the telegraph, and be down first at the seaside, ready to meet his unhappy slave on the railway platform. The best way to avoid so unpleasant a reunion with care or business is to set to work about six weeks beforehand to prepare in every way for the summer holiday." In reference to the other numerous publications issued for this month by Cassell and Co., Limited, we have merely to state that they are marked by that degree of excellence with which we have long since become so familiar.

The Secretary of State for War has approved of Major L. K. Scott, R.E., now serving as an Instructor at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, being appointed to succeed Col. Williams, R.E., as a Professor of Fortifications at that institution, to date from September 1 next.

At the Duke of Wellington's Riding-school, Knightsbridge, on Wednesday, under the patronage of the Duchess of Connaught, the Duke of Cambridge, Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, and other distinguished personages, a bazaar was opened in aid of Miss Robinson's work at Portsmouth among the soldiers and Royal seamen. The stall-holders included Lady Katherine Bannerman, Lady Colin Campbell, Lady Chelmsford, Lady Sullivan, Lady Willis, Lady William Lennox, the Hon. Lady Grant, the Hon. Mrs. Acheson, and the Hon. Mrs. Armitage. The stalls were very prettily laid out, and some of the ladies presented a novel appearance by wearing the Union Jack as aprons. The string band of the Royal Engineers played during the day and evening.

"SAPO CARBONIS DETERGENS" is a physician's name for a remedy prescribed for the past quarter of a century for every variety of skin disease. The public have found that as a preventive of small-pox, scarlet fever, and measles, it is unequalled. See that the Latin name described above, and the words "WRIGHT, SOUTHWARK," are on each wrapper, and branded on each tablet, without which none is genuine.

Obituary.

Admiral Sir James Crawford Caffin, K.C.B., died on May 24, at his residence, Woodlawn, Blackheath, Kent, aged 71. He was the third son of the late Mr. William Caffin, of Blackheath, and of the Royal Laboratory, Woolwich, by his marriage with Berthia, daughter of the late Mr. George Crawford, adjutant R.A., and was born in 1812. He entered the Navy as a first-class volunteer on board the Pylades, and in 1827 became midshipman of the Cambrian, in which vessel he was present at the battle of Navarino, and he was afterwards wrecked in that frigate while engaged with pirates at Grabusa. He was promoted to a lieutenancy in 1838, became commander in 1842, captain in 1847, and served on board the Penelope in the Baltic in 1854, taking part in the bombardment of Bomarsund. In 1855 he commanded the Hastings at the bombardment of Sveaborg. In the same year he was appointed Naval Director-General of Artillery and Vice-President of the Ordnance Select Committee at the War Office. From 1858 to 1868 he held the post of Director of Stores in the War Department. The gallant officer was appointed a Naval aide-de-camp to the Queen in 1863, and in 1865 he was promoted to the rank of rear-admiral. He became a vice-admiral in 1871 and an admiral in 1877. He was nominated a Companion of the Order of the Bath (Military Division) in 1854, and on his retirement was promoted to a Knight Commandership of that order. Admiral Caffin was the author of a work on "Naval Gunnery." He was a magistrate for Kent, and married, in 1843, Frances Brouncker, youngest daughter of Mr. William Atfield, of Cosham House, but was left a widower in 1871.

We regret to announce the death of Major-Gen. E. S. Burnaby, M.P. About three weeks ago he went to Brighton, for the purpose of visiting an aunt in Palmeira Square, Hove. At that time he was very unwell. During his stay he gradually became worse, and, notwithstanding the constant and assiduous attention of Dr. Towers, of Brighton, he died on Thursday evening at seven o'clock. The only son of the late Mr. E. Burnaby, of Baggrave Hall, Leicestershire, Gen. Burnaby was born in 1830, and was educated at Eton. Entering the Grenadier Guards, he served at Inkerman and the siege of Sebastopol, where he received the brevet of major, with a medal and clasp. He was Brigadier-Gen. of the British-Italian Legion from 1855 to 1857. In 1864 he married a daughter of the late Sir Wolstan Dixie, Louisa Julia Mary, who died in 1881. He was elected for North Leicestershire, in conjunction with Lord John Manners, at the last general election.

Capt. Henry Rivière, whose death has just occurred at Hanoi, in Tonquin, might have been called the Marryat of the French Navy. An excellent officer, he was also a capital writer of stories, and for the last twenty years his novels and novelettes have supplied unfailing amusement to the readers of the Revue des Deux Mondes. Rivière had not much in common with the Marryat of "Peter Simple," but he had a close kinship of thought and style with the author of the "Phantom Ship" and "Snarley-yow." He made his literary reputation at one stroke with a couple of fantastic stories, "Pierrot" and "Cain," which appeared in 1860. He was at that time temporarily attached to the Ministry of Marine as secretary; and a chief clerk, seeing him one day very busy after office hours, asked what he was doing? "A novel for the Revue des Deux Mondes," said Rivière. "That's right," answered the chief clerk, seriously; "this kind of work is good practice for writing reports." Rivière was always very sprightly with his pen, and the sketches of life in the French Navy which are to be found in most of his novels are fresh and most pleasing, though not abounding in the fun which overflows in Marryat's books. Rivière's best novels are "Les Méprises du Cœur" (1865) and "La Grande Marquise" (1869). He also wrote a very spirited "History of the French Navy under Louis XV." He was one of the most agreeable of men, known to a great many English Naval officers who had met him on foreign stations, and a favourite with them all. In the Church of St. Eustache in Paris there is a beautiful inscription on the tomb of a General who died without having attained the highest rank in the service. It says:—"Le seul grade de Maréchal de France manqua non pas à sa gloire, mais à l'encouragement de ceux qui le prendront pour exemple." So it was with Henri Rivière, who died without having reached the coveted grade of Rear-Admiral; but he was not kept from this honour, like Marryat, for having written things displeasing to the Government. He was killed just when the Minister of Marine was about to submit his name for promotion to the President of the Republic.

Mr. Henry Perry Dicken, Commander R.N., died on Wednesday, at his residence at Heavitree, Exeter, age 88. He entered the Royal Navy as far back as 1808. In 1810 he became a midshipman, in which capacity he served on board the Superb in the Baltic, and was frequently under fire in boats, &c. He was afterwards employed for two years in the fleet off Toulon, and for one year on board the Franchise, in co-operation with the patriots on the coast of Catalonia. Later on we find him engaged in the Severn and the Ramillies, on the coast blockade. He was promoted to the rank of lieut. in 1815, and became a commander in 1858. Mr. Dicken served for three years in command of a revenue cruiser, for 12 years in command of the Falmouth packets, and was employed as agent of the transports during the Crimean War, for which service he obtained the Crimean and Turkish medals.

"On the Watch" writes:—"I notice in your issue of May 5 a paragraph in which appears the following words: 'Owing to the very short service of the Lieutenants of the following Territorial regiments, it would appear to be only fair to equalise promotion in the Army by promoting some subalterns of longer service to companies in these regiments as vacancies occur.' Now, in the regiment to which I have the honour to belong (and it is one of those mentioned in your list, to which you suggest subalterns of longer service should be promoted to) I would point out the great unfairness that would be caused to subalterns in the position I and a good many others are in; far outstripping the justice done to these subalterns of 'longer service,' who you propose to promote. I am, unfortunately, only one year and two months junior to our senior subaltern, yet I am nearly half way down the list of subalterns, and am within a couple of months of four years' service. What chance have I of ever reaching the giddy height of captain, if your suggestion were carried out by the authorities? And I am only one of many in the same plight. We shall have to wait, as it is, in all human probability, ten or twelve years more before being given our companies. Your proposal, if carried out, would not make much difference to those subalterns at the top of the list, but to those in my position it would crush out entirely, and no hope of ever being more than a subaltern until we were bald or grey-headed. Apart from all those considerations, it is usual to fill up the vacant steps by those subalterns who have been on active service and have fairly earned their promotion, and there are at least ten or twelve of those yet to obtain their companies."

The surviving officers engaged in the defence of Lucknow Residency dined together at Limmer's Hotel, on Thursday. There were present:—Gen. Gray (in the chair), Gen. Graham, Cols. Grant, Evans, Boileau, and German; Major Finlay, Surgeon-Major Greenhow, Sir J. Fayrer, Dr. Partridge, Capt. Kerr, Messrs. Capper, Martin, and J. C. Barry.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS. —NEVER AT FAULT.—In all irritations of the skin, sores, ulcers, burns, and scrofulous enlargements of the glands, Holloway's Ointment presents a ready and easy means of cure, which never disappoints the most favourable expectations. It manifests a potent and peculiar power in restraining inflammation, removing stagnation, cooling the heated blood, and checking all acrimonious or unhealthy discharges. Whilst thus acting locally, the Pills are no less remarkable for their power in improving the general condition and habit of body, which renders the cures complete and permanent. Under the general influence of these potent remedies, the puny infant becomes the robust child, the pale and emaciated regain colour and flesh, and the dyspeptic eats freely, without fear.

Army Service Corps—Head Quarters, Winchester House, St. James's Square, S.W.

The Secretary of State for War has approved of the invitation to men of the 1st-Class Army Reserve, which has hitherto been limited to Ireland, being extended to the London, Chatham, and Woolwich Districts, to volunteer for service under the Cape Government. It is believed that there are a number of these men now out of employ to which preference of enlistment will be given, and the establishment of the Cape Infantry (which is at present only open to Reserve men) will be completed. All volunteers for this service will be passed by Col. Carrington, at the Cape Emigration Department, Victoria Street, S.W., to whom all applications must be made.

A correspondent points out that—"It would be well if the anti-contagious diseases agitators could take into consideration the good results of carrying out the intentions of the Act, as experienced by the service and civil population in the Straits Settlements, where, at Penang and Singapore, the inspections are carefully carried out, in great distinctions to the ports in China and Japan. Consequently, no disease was recorded last year from the former ports, although much leave was given by senior officers in ten months, 1882."

The Royal Italian Opera programme of the week comprised, on Monday, "L'Etoile du Nord," in which Madame Sembrich, for the first time in England, appeared as Catarina. On Tuesday, Madame Albini sang in "La Traviata." Madame Marie Durand made her first appearance in England, on Thursday, as the heroine of "La Gioconda;" and Madame Fursch-Madi and Madame Schalchi were both associated with the representation of "Aïda," on Friday. Ponciello's grand opera of "La Gioconda" is in four acts, and the action takes place at Venice, in the seventeenth century. The finale to the third act, preceded by the ballet of "The Hours," is the principal feature of the work. Madame Durand is an American primâ-donna who has gained distinction on the Italian stage, and who recently appeared with great success as La Gioconda at St. Petersburg. The cast also includes Mdlle. Tremelli, Mdlle. Stahl, and M. N. Cotogni, De Reszke, and Marconi. Elaborate scenery and brilliant decorations have been provided.

At Toole's Theatre Mr. F. C. Burnand's merry parody called "Stage Dora" has met with a most mirthful reception. Miss Eliza Johnstone as the Countess Olga, Miss Marie Linden, as the heroine, grotesquely imitating Madame Sarah Bernhardt, Mr. J. L. Toole delighting the spectators by a clever caricature of Mr. Coghlan, and Mr. E. D. Ward faithfully reproducing the stiff deportment of Mr. Bancroft, yield abundant material for laughter.

The long runs now attained at the London theatres are worth recording. At the Lyceum, "Much Ado About Nothing" has been played 212 times. At the Princess's, "The Silver King" has already passed its 169th consecutive night. At the St. James's, "Impulse" has been acted 155 consecutive nights. The revived comedy of "The Rivals" has achieved at the Vaudeville the longest continuous run on record, having been played this week for the 190th time. On this day (Saturday) "Rip Van Winkle," at the Comedy Theatre, will celebrate its 200th consecutive representation; and at the Avenue Theatre the comic opera of "Lurette" has now reached its 70th performance.

Miss Ellen Terry took her benefit at the Lyceum on Thursday night, when "Much Ado About Nothing" was played for the last time but one this season. On this (Saturday) evening, "The Lyons Mail" will be reproduced.

At the Gaiety on Monday afternoon was produced a new four-act play by Mr. Freeman Wills, entitled, "Put Asunder," which, though of inordinate length, gained a favourable reception. The season of French plays will commence on Monday.

At the Imperial Theatre, Mr. Charles Du Val has appeared each afternoon in his mirthful entertainment, called "Odds and Ends." An introductory recital describes some of his experiences in South Africa during the time of the Transvaal war, illustrated by photographic transparencies.

The Strand Theatre will open on Saturday, June 9, with the adaptation, by E. Rose, of Mr. Anstey's popular novel, "Vice Versâ," and a new burlesque by W. Warham, entitled, "Silver Guilt," in which an attempt will be made to parody—good-humouredly—the modern elevated drama. The principal parts will be sustained by Messrs. E. Righton, R. Brough, J. H. Jarvis, W. F. Hawtrey, and E. H. Bell; Misses Edith Bruce, Laura Linden, Nellie Lyons, and T. Hastings. The theatre will remained closed during the week of June 4, to allow of the necessary rehearsals.

On Wednesday next, June 6, a new first part will be produced at Mr. and Mrs. German Reed's entertainment at St. George's Hall, entitled, "Treasure Trove," written by Arthur Law, the music by Alfred J. Caldicott; Mr. Corney Grain's popular sketch, "Our Mess," still retaining its place in the programme.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales will, by command of the Queen, hold a Levée at St. James's Palace, on behalf of her Majesty, on Friday, the 15th inst., at two o'clock.

SPECTACLES v. BLINDNESS.—"Spectacles can only be perfectly adjusted by those having a thorough knowledge of the anatomy of the eye, combined with optical experience."—We have the highest medical authorities confirmed by daily experience, that imperfect glasses, together with the haphazard plan of selection generally employed by the mere vendor, is the cause of most cases of blindness and defective vision. Sir Julius Benedict writes:—"I have tried the principal opticians in London without success, but the spectacles you have adapted suit admirably. The clearness of your glasses as compared with others is really surprising." The Rev. Professor W. A. Hales, M.A. Cantab., 2 Minford Gardens, West Kensington Park, writes:—"The spectacles are perfect, and a most decided boon. I had occasion on Monday to write to Lord ——, and took the opportunity to mention your name and the wonderful power of your spectacles." Dr. Bird, Chelmsford, writes:—"I could not have believed it possible that my sight could have been so much improved and relieved at my age (82). I can now read the smallest type, although suffering from cataract on the right eye." Testimonials from Earl and Countess Lindsay; F. D. Dixon Hartland, Esq., M.P.; the Venerable Archdeacon Palmer, Clifton; Rev. Mother Abbess, St. Mary's Abbey, Mill Hill, Hendon; C. J. Alford, Esq., Gas Light and Coke Company, Horseferry Road, Westminster, &c. Mr. HENRY LAURANCE, F.S.S., Oculist Optician, 39 OLD BOND STREET, W. (late 3 Endsleigh Gardens, Euston Square), personally adapts his Improved Spectacles daily (Saturdays excepted), from 10 to 5. Special arrangements are made for invalids and others unable to wait on Mr. Laurance. Pamphlet, "Spectacles: their Use and Abuse," post free. City Branch, 6 Poultry, Cheapside.

"Fair-play" considers that abolished musketry instructors have a just cause of complaint. "But this," he contends, "is only another instance of the arbitrary and unfair way in which Regimental officers have been treated by the State, first by being robbed of their purchase-money, and then by having their wretched pittance of pay pilfered to suit the requirements of the State, whilst extra work is imposed on them for which no remuneration is granted. Again, a captain is promoted out of his own regiment into another, for which promotion, though his original purchase-money has been appropriated, or, rather, misappropriated, by the State, he must provide himself with a different uniform, and forfeit 50 days' pay as contribution to his new corps, though he has already contributed to the mess and band fund of his late regiment, and should have received promotion in it. If bands are essential to regiments, surely the State should pay for their maintenance, and not compel the officers to do so, the more so as by this action of the State esprit de corps is gradually becoming a thing of the past. It is absurd to fix a rate of pay for regimental officers which they seldom see, and as it is necessary that messes and bands should be kept up, and uniform changed whenever it suits a Secretary of State, it would save regimental officers a considerable amount of trouble and anxiety if their pay was distributed amongst the West-End tailors, less whatever the Government required for the maintenance of messes and bands."

The programme for the Military Tournament at the Agricultural Hall, Islington, from June 18 to 23, has been issued. The competitions include mounted competitions of all kinds, in which sword, lance, and bayonet come into play, tilting at the ring, lemon-cutting, heads v. posts, &c. Trotting v. galloping competitions, between batteries of Field and Horse Artillery, will again be one of the principal attractions, whilst the ride by the Household Cavalry, which last year drew such crowded audiences, will be repeated. Entries must be made by June 7. For forms of entry, apply to the Hon. Secs., New Buildings, Carteret Street, Queen Anne's Gate, London, S.W.

At the concert given on Thursday afternoon at the Royal Albert Hall, under the immediate patronage of the Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and other members of the Royal Family, Madame Marie Roze sang the national song, "Rule, Britannia," accompanied by the Royal Artillery string band, the refrain being repeated each time after Madame Marie Roze sang by the combined bands of the Royal Artillery, the Grenadier, Colstream, and Scots Guards. This novel effect was extremely brilliant, and created such enthusiasm that it had to be repeated.

The third of the four ironclad frigates which the Russian Admiralty decided two years ago upon adding to the Baltic Fleet is to be commenced in a few weeks' time, directly the Dmitri Donskoi is launched at the dockyard at the mouth of the Neva. The first of the series, the Vladimir Monomarchus, was launched last autumn on the Neva from the works of the Baltic Engineering Company, and an effort is to be made to complete it this year in time to proceed to the Mediterranean before the closing of the navigation. The second, the Dmitri Donskoi, will not be finished before the autumn of next year. The third, about to be commenced, is to be called the Admiral Arkas, after the Admiral who commanded the Black Sea Fleet during the Russo-Turkish War. The dimensions of this are as follows:—Length at water-line, 295 ft.; beam (extreme), 52 ft.; draught forward, 21 ft.; after, 25 ft.; displacement, 5,796 tons. It is defended by a belt of armour extending from 2½ ft. above the load water-line to 5½ ft. below; the armour tapering from 6 in. to 4½ in. forward and 3½ in. round the stern, and the plates themselves from 6 in. to 4½ in. downward, 3 ft. below the water-line. The armament consists of four 8½-in. and 6-in. guns in an open battery on the upper deck, besides six Hotchkiss machine-guns. There are two engines, each of 3,500 h.p. indicated; the bunkers contain 1,000 tons of coal, and the speed is estimated at 16 knots. One high-pressure cylinder has a diameter of 60 in., two low-pressure ones diameters of 78 in.; the stroke of the piston is 39 in. The cost of the hull and engines together is expected to reach £350,000. It is not improbable that the fourth vessel of the series will also be commenced in the course of the summer, the contract, in all likelihood, being given to the Baltic Engineering Company, which is now, to all practical purposes, a State concern. The vessels of this series, it may be noted, are quite different from the men-of-war that are being built for the Black Sea Fleet. The former are of the Minin type, and are intended to proceed on distant voyages and harass the enemy's merchant shipping in time of war. The latter are more of the Peter-the-Great type, and are meant to remain in the Black Sea until Russia secures the right of sending her men-of-war through the Bosphorus. Two of these are now being constructed, one at Nicolaeff and the other at Sebastopol. They are 320 ft. long, or 342 ft., including the ram; extreme breadth, 69 ft., depth, 25 ft.; displacement, 9,990 tons, indicated strength of the engines, 9,000 horse-power; armament, six 12-in. guns, placed in three open casemates, and seven 6-in. guns in closed casemates, in the upper deck. The thickness of the armour at the water-line will be 18 in. When finished, these vessels should be able to destroy any ironclad of the Turkish Fleet.

The Novosti, which has purchased and incorporated with itself the Golos, recently published a four-column leader on the Russian Navy compared with our own, the data respecting the latter being derived from Sir Thomas Brassey's work, "The British Navy," to which it specially draws the attention of its readers. Among other things, its remarks upon the excessive number of officers in the Russian Fleet are not without interest :—" At the present moment, the number of effective admirals and officers of the Russian Fleet is 1,650, not including 850 officers employed in auxiliary branches of it; while Germany—which has a fleet as strong as Russia—possesses only 610 officers, Austria 540, and Italy 460. England controls twice as many seamen as Russia, yet to supervise them she only employs 233 officers in excess of our total number. In this manner, we find that there is one officer to every 27 men in the English Fleet, to every 25 in the Italian, to every 17 in the French and German, to every 13 in the Austrian, and to every 7 in our own. Also, that whereas one admiral is found sufficient by Germany to 2,000 men, by England to 1,000, and by France to 700, we require one to every 200 men. Hence, it is impossible not to feel satisfied at the projected reform in the Russian Navy, whereby the number of officers will be reduced to one to every 20 men, and one admiral to every 800."

A few days ago, an explosion took place while a Whitehead torpedo was being handled at the Cronstadt Torpedo Factory, severely wounding five seamen. A commission has been appointed to inquire into the accident, the particulars of which have been withheld by the authorities. In Naval circles at Cronstadt the accident is ascribed to carelessness.

NAVAL NOTES.

It is stated on very good authority that Capt. Robert O'Brien FitzRoy, C.B., will succeed Capt. Alexander Buller, C.B., in the command of her Majesty's gunnery-ship Cambridge in August next. Capt. FitzRoy has had extensive experiences at sea. He commenced his career in the upper grades of the service with so distinguished an officer as the present Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth, and has only recently paid off the Orion, ironclad, in the Mediterranean. It will be remembered that Capt. FitzRoy commissioned this ship in all haste last year, and proceeded with her to join the vessels under Lord Alcester's command, when the gallant admiral was lying off Alexandria.—Portsmouth Times.

A somewhat serious accident has happened to Lieut Edwin J. P. Gallwey, torpedo lieutenant of the Vernon. Whilst hoisting a torpedo into the Vesuvius, torpedo instruction vessel, the tail was in danger of being injured by striking the ship's side. Mr. Gallwey put his hand out to save the torpedo screws, and at the same moment a small line caught in the air lever setting the fans in motion, and these struck his left hand, cutting the tendons of one of his fingers and badly injuring the hand. Though the injury is not as severe as at first believed, it is feared the finger must be amputated.

We mentioned some time ago that the Russian Moscow cruiser Yaroslavl, recently purchased by the Admiralty for the Black Sea Fleet, has had its name changed into the "Pamiat Merkuriya," or "The Remembrance of the Mercury." This title originated in a conflict which took place in 1829 between the Russian brig Mercury, under Capt. Kazarsky, and two Turkish line-of-battle ships, in which the former—so the Russian version runs, although there were imaginary victories of the Vesta description even then—beat off her assailants after a desperate conflict, and successfully escaped to port. In consequence of this, the Emperor Nicholas gave orders that there was to be always a ship in the Black Sea Fleet to be called "The Remembrance of the Mercury," to commemorate the exploit; and a corvette of that name having been recently condemned to be broken up, the title has been transferred to the Yaroslavl, which is the crack vessel of the southern fleet at the present moment. In connection with this circumstance, the Novoe Vremya recalls that another decree was issued by Nicholas in 1827, after the battle of Navarino, by virtue of which that exploit was to be commemorated by a vessel to be called "The Remembrance of the Azoff," the Azoff being the flagship of the Russian Admiral commanding the squadron during the engagement. This decree was observed until 1863, when a vessel of that name was broken up; and even now the flag is preserved in the dockyard at Nicolaeff, in compliance with an order of the Admiralty issued in that year, that it was to be kept "until the next new vessel to receive the appellation is constructed." It is probable that the title will be conferred upon one of the new ironclads now under course of construction at Nicolaeff.

The museum in connection with the Excellent has, with the approval of the Admiralty, just received a somewhat notable addition, consisting of the riding bits of the Inflexible that were struck during the bombardment of Alexandria with a Palliser shell, the peculiarity of the blow being that it distinctly impressed upon them the name of its maker. Capt. J. A. Fisher was at that time in command of the turret-ship, and, as he has since been appointed to the Excellent, it is doubtless upon his recommendation that this historical curiosity has passed to the old three-decker.

Orders have been given to refit the Triumph for a four years' commission as a flagship, when it is intended that her complement shall be the same as that of the Audacious. She will not carry any second class torpedo boats, and most of her internal arrangements will remain unaltered, the engineers' mess not being discontinued on the ground that the wardroom cannot be sufficiently enlarged to accommodate additional officers. For the purpose of determining the extent to which she will require to be opened up and the approximate cost of her refit, it is intended that representatives from the Constructive and Engineer Departments at Whitehall shall visit Portsmouth, and hold a consultation with Mr. W. Owen and Mr. A. J. Durston.

What might have been a disastrous fire in Portsmouth Dockyard was on Friday night prevented by the police. In some cellars near the Saw Mills are about 50 or 60 carboys of acid, as well as a quantity of turpentine; and at about 7 o'clock smoke was seen to be issuing from one of the cellars. The building was immediately entered, when a carboy of acid was found to be smouldering, and emitting dense fumes. This carboy was separated from the others, and carried to the open air. Meanwhile, the fire-engines had been brought to the scene, and every available constable, on and off duty, was summoned. Fortunately, however, they were not required, as after the removal of the carboy all danger was over.

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL.—ITS UNEQUALLED EFFICACY IN CONSUMPTION AND WASTING DISEASES.—Dr. Henry Hanks, author of "Consumption: its Treatment and Curability," writes:—"The superior efficacy of Dr. de Jongh,s Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil over the Pale Cod Liver Oil has proved, in my experience, unequivocal. Patients who have persisted for several months in the use of the latter, with scarcely any perceptible improvement, have, after a brief trial of Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil, acquired such fatness, and those distressing symptons accompanying emaciation have so rapidly subsided, that I have been induced to confide in its reputed remedial powers, and consequently to advise its substitution for the Pale Cod Liver Oil." Benjamin Clarke, Esq., M.R.C.S., F.L.S., author of "Notes and Suggestions on Cod Liver Oil and its Uses," writes:—"The effect of the pale oil on the circulation is so feebly marked as not to be perceptible; so that in some cases of extreme debility, the patient, from the slowness of its action, is in danger of sinking from exhaustion, or the disease, as in consumption, may become incurable from protraction. My inference agrees with the remark that Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Oil effects a cure in half the time that the Pale Oil does." Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil is sold only in capsuled imperial half-pints, 2s 6d; pints, 4s 9d; quarts, 9s; by all Chemists. Sole Consignees, Ansar, Harford, and Co., 77 Strand, London.

THE debate raised by Sir Walter Barttelot in the House of Commons on Friday last was most interesting, and the facts adduced must have carried conviction to all but a few of the most obstinate upholders of our present Army organisation. From the utterances of some of those who spoke on the occasion, we are led to believe that the defenders of our present system think that its only defect is a falling-off in the supply of recruits, which falling-off is of a temporary nature. But this is only one of the shortcomings of the system. It has been condemned also because it fills the ranks with boys, instead of able-bodied men, and, as a consequence, when we become engaged even in a petty war, we either have to send these boys to fight our battles, or call upon our Reserves. We have been taught by sad experience that to have recourse to the former plan is by no means wise. Again, the Short-service system has been condemned because it gives us no skilled and experienced non-commissioned officers to work the men of raw material into shape, and no matured soldiers to assist in maintaining discipline in the barrack-room. We hold that the evils of this system have been fully proved, not only in Zululand and the Transvaal, but also in the recent Egyptian Campaign, when, to put one Army Corps into the field, we had to call up some 11,000 Reserve men, and draw upon our Indian Army. The defenders of short service have tried very hard to persuade the people of England that the Egyptian Campaign was fought by boy-soldiers. Such, however, was not the case, for the average service of those who carried the earthworks of Tel-el-Kebir was over five years. With such a stamp of men we have no fault to find. We saw them when, on their return, they marched past the Queen, and we saw very few indeed of what we should call boys in the ranks. The march of Sir Frederick Roberts from Cabul to Candahar was accomplished by nearly the same class of men. The statistics of crime which have been published, and which were commented upon by Sir W. Barttelot, speak for themselves. We trust the country, careless as it is in Army matters, will read this last debate very attentively, and form an unbiassed opinion; then, if it wants to hear counsel for the defence, let it read the leading article upon the subject in the Times of the 4th inst. Our volatile contemporary, although it still clings to the Short-service system, shows signs of veering round a little, though it seems to experience a pang at the Reserve being sacrificed for the sake of the Line. Lord Hartington has undoubtedly sounded the death-knell of our present system, and has vindicated the opinion of those who have pointed out for some years its many defects. The Times cannot, of course, withstand the temptation of having another thrust at the regimental officers, who, it would appear, are opposed to the Short-service system, because it is troublesome in its administration. Our contemporary says, "In a corps largely constituted of young soldiers, the shortcomings of officers are more apparent." The Times must find a reason for everything, either right or wrong. The present one puts us in mind of the fable of "The Wolf and the Lamb," and the reasoning in both is equally just. What did Lord Wolseley say of the regimental officer in his Egyptian despatch, and what did the Press of other nations say? At home, the poor regimental officer has no men to trouble him, in most instances, and we fail to see that any particular strain is put upon him in the working of the Short-service administration. Before we can give any decided opinion upon the reforms proposed by Lord Hartington, we must know exactly what those reforms are. If his Lordship intends to keep on our present system of six years with the colours and six with the Reserve, with the option of re-engagment after the first six years for another six, to complete twelve years, and the further option of prolonged service to twenty-one years, for pension, then we say that such a modification is a move in the right direction. Such a thing would be an undoubted benefit alike to the soldier, the Army, and the country. But there must be no uncertainty about the terms. It will not do for the recruiting-officer to say, "If the Army wants your services at the end of six years, you will be allowed to re-engage for another six; then, should there be a dearth of recruits, you will be allowed, provided you are a good man, to serve on for pension to twenty-one years." This, we fear, would counteract all the benefits that would otherwise accrue, for what a man or boy upon enlisting wants to know is the exact terms upon which he engages. Give him the right to serve for pension, and we feel sure the country will not lose by it. We gather from Lord Hartington's speech that he proposes to adopt the old plan of letting a man go to the Reserve after three years with the colours. This is clearly a mistake, for three years is not enough to make a man an efficient soldier. But whatever Lord Hartington's ideas may be, the Army cannot fail to feel grateful to Sir Walter Barttelot for the part he has played. He showed clearly that it was absurd to expect the poor class from which soldiers are raised to serve for a total of twelve years for next to nothing. The War-Office reformers have all along expected too much from Thomas Atkins. What they have asked him to do has been to serve his country for six years on small pay, and for another six years on the liberal sum of fourpence per diem; at the end of which he runs the risk of being turned adrift, to shift for himself, or starve. Moreover, for the first six years, he is required to serve wherever he is wanted, in war or bad climates; and as a Reserve man he may be called out for war service again, and be liable to be killed or maimed, in any trumpery campaign. He has to do all this for fourpence a day. It simply comes to this,—our soldiers have discovered the one-sided bargain they made on enlistment, and they will not re-engage, not even when tempted by such an attractive bait as fifty rupees (£5) in India. The first fighting line has been destroyed, for all practical purposes, by a self-seeking ring of theoretical reformers, and now it will take "all the king's horses and all the king's men to put humpty-dumpty together again." However, Lord Hartington has pledged himself to face the difficulty, and he will have the best wishes of all interested in the good of the Army in the difficult task he has set himself.

A NUMBER of Purchase Captains compulsorily retired from the Army under the provisions of the Royal Warrants of August, 1877, and May, 1878, finding themselves placed in a most anomalous position by the issue of the Royal Warrant of June, 1881, addressed on November 14, 1881, a memorial to the Secretary of State for War, setting forth their case, and praying that, as regards rank and pension, they might be put on an equality with the same class of officers compulsorily retired after June 30, 1881. The memorialists, who should not be confounded with those Captains who retired voluntarily, rested their claims to consideration on the following grounds:—By the Royal Warrants under which they retired, all Line Captains who held that rank before November 1, 1871, known as Purchase Captains—were rendered ineligible for promotion on attaining the age of 45. To soften the hardship of this, a decreasing margin of age was allowed for a short time; but the memorialists were in no way affected by it, for having reached the age of 45 years, they had become entitled to the highest pension that they could ever have obtained without further promotion, of which they had no prospect. Not only were they without hope of promotion, but they were threatened with supersession should they continue to serve. To avoid supersession, they retired. Not only were the unfortunate officers deprived of their professional prospects, but they were made to suffer severely from a pecuniary point of view. Under the old system, they would have succeeded to brevet rank and pay, even supposing they never arrived at regimental promotion; consequently they would, under the most unfavourable circumstances, have been able to retire as Brevet Majors on much the same rate of retired pay as has been granted them by the Royal Warrants of 1877-78, and in addition have got the substantial bonus of some £1,100. But the Warrant of 1877 abolished Brevet promotion, except for distinguished conduct in the field, depriving the Purchase Captain of his right to retire as a Brevet Major on full pay at £248 a year, with a bonus of £1,100—the very lowest terms he had a right to expect—substituting compulsory retirement at the age of 45 on a pension of £259 a year, without any bonus, and with the honorary rank of Major. The Royal Warrant of June 25, 1881, shows that such terms were considered inadequate, for it gives to Purchase Captains retiring under its provisions the substantive rank of Major, the honorary rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, and an addition of £50 a year to the pensions granted by the Warrant of 1877, limiting, however, the total pension to £300 a year. It should be added that, in acknowledgment of the fact that something was due to the Purchase Captains already retired, this Royal Warrant confers upon them another step of honorary rank. Now, let us compare the difference between the terms granted to Purchase Captains forced to retire under the Warrants of 1877-78, and the same class of officers retired under the Warrant of 1881. The former have (1), a pension of £259 a year; (2), substantive rank of Captain, entitling widow to the pension of a Captain's widow; (3), honorary rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. The latter have (1), a pension of £300 a year; (2), substantive rank of Major, entitling widow to pension of a Major's widow; (3), honorary rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. On January 18, 1882, a reply was given, declining to accede to the prayer of the memorialists, as "the Secretary of State for War felt he had no alternative but to lay down the rule absolutely not to give any retrospective effect to the Royal Warrant of June 25, 1881, in cases where officers had retired at their own request previously to the issue of that Warrant." It will be observed that the Secretary of State assumes that the memorialists retired voluntarily. The failure of their memorial to the Secretary of State was felt by the retired Purchase Captains to be due to a misunderstanding on his part, and they asked for a reconsideration of his decision in a letter dated January 28, 1882. Failing to obtain it, they resolved to bring their case before Parliament if possible, and on March 16, Sir Henry Fletcher put the following question on their behalf to Mr. Childers in the House:—"Whether those Purchase Captains who, having reached the age or service at which, under the Royal Warrants of August 13, 1877, and May 1, 1878, they became ineligible for further promotion or higher pension, were, in order to avoid supersession, compelled to retire, and retired on pensions under those Warrants, would be placed on the same footing, as regards rank and pension, as officers of the same class compulsorily retired under the Royal Warrant of June 25, 1881, the latter having no stronger claims than the former, while enjoying the advantage of not being liable to supersession on account of age." To this, Mr. Childers replied:—"The question of the hon. and gallant gentleman relates to certain officers retired under the Warrant of 1877, who, if they had remained in the Army until 1881, might have retired on better terms, and the object of the question is to obtain for them that the rank and pension on which they retired should be raised to the level of the officers compulsorily retired in 1881. The ground of the claim I take to be that we have cancelled the retirement of certain non-Purchase Captains, who were compelled to leave the Army at 40 years of age; thus, in a certain sense, giving a retrospective character to the Warrant. The difference, however, between the two cases is, that n the latter there was no question of improving the terms of an already completed retirement, but only of readmitting to the Army certain officers within a few months retired for age, which, under the new Warrant, need not retire. After well weighing both sides, I feel bound to adhere to the rule that no increase of retired pay can be allowed under a new Warrant to an officer who retired under a former one, and that the only boon which could be conceded would be as to honorary rank, and this has been granted." It will be noticed that Mr. Childers, in his reply to the memorial of November 14, and to the application for a reconsideration of his decision, assumed that the memorialists left the service of their own free will, and gives as his reason for refusing to grant their prayer, that they "retired at their own request," insinuating that they had thereby forfeited their claims to consideration; while in his answer to the question put by Sir Henry Fletcher, he simply refused to extend the terms of the new Warrant to those who retired before it was issued. He abandoned his former ground of refusal, and ignored the question of justice or injustice. It cannot be disputed that the officers were forced out of the service, were deprived of their prospects of promotion, and were subjected to considerable pecuniary loss. Surely, then, they should be given what they ask, which is simply to be placed on the same footing as officers of the same class retired under the Warrant of June 25, 1881?

THE case of "Nordenfeldt v. Gardner," which occupied Mr. Baron Huddleston eleven days in hearing, presents many features deeply interesting and important to both branches of the service. The case is interesting, not only so far as it relates to the development and efficiency of battery guns as implements of warfare, but also with regard to the peculiar dangers and difficulties to which inventors are subject, in the attempt to protect their inventions and secure for themselves at least a temporary monopoly of the advantages to be derived from their use. "Patents," said Lord Justice James, on one occasion, "are always a doubtful property," and it is undoubtedly true that of the many thousands of inventions actually patented, manufactured, and sold under the protection of the Great Seal, there are comparatively few that could be successfully maintained on technical grounds, when attacked in Courts of Justice. The Nordenfelt patent for "a new or improved battery gun," has been subjected to this severe ordeal, and has thus far come out of it unscathed. We cannot, of course, venture to predict what might happen in the subsequent stages of litigation, should the case be carried to appeal; but this, at least, can be said with regard to the result of the present trial, that, both on technical as well as substantial grounds, the Nordenfelt patent has undergone a most exhaustive and searching investigation. The action was brought by Mr. Nordenfelt against the Gardner Gun Company, for an injunction to restrain the defendants from infringing his patent-rights by continuing to manufacture a gun which is known as the Gardner gun. The defendants thereupon attacked Mr. Nordenfelt's patent, on the grounds that the invention was not new nor useful, and that the specification did not sufficiently describe and ascertain the nature of the invention, and the manner in which the same was to be performed. The defendants further denied that the Gardner gun was an infringement of the Nordenfelt. These were substantially the issues before the Court. It would appear at first sight that the inventor himself would be specially competent for the task of drawing up a specification which should particularly describe the nature of his own invention, and the manner in which it might be performed or used; but it is hardly an exaggeration to say that the person least fitted to perform this task is the inventor himself. He is apt to assume, or take for granted, a knowledge on the part of the public which the law does not take cognisance of. He is often vague and ambiguous in his language, and is inclined to claim more than he is entitled to. These are all fatal objections to a specification in a Court of Law, and it is not to be wondered at that specifications are so frequently attacked. The task of drawing up the specification is therefore, as a rule, wisely entrusted to patent agents, who are, generally speaking, well versed in the technicalities of their calling. It is, however, an easy matter to pick holes in a specification, and as a learned Judge once observed, it was a matter of astonishment to him that so many specifications had been able to be supported in a Court of Law. The Nordenfelt gun is admittedly a combination of which the elements are old, and the novelty of which is to be found in its principal and subordinate combinations, and it was alleged that the specification was bad, because it did not distinguish what was old from what was new. But the objections to the specification, both on this and other grounds, failed in the late trial, and the principal interest in the case was centred upon the question whether the invention was, in fact, new,—that is to say, whether the gun, as described in the plaintiff's specification, had or had not been anticipated, by prior publication of a similar invention, or parts of it, within the realm. It was alleged that what is called the spreading apparatus, the gun box, the magazine, the feeding apparatus, the driving plate, the trigger comb, the pointing instrument, and the spreading crank were not new; and these separate elements, or combinations, were ingeniously compared, one by one, at the trial, with what were alleged to be similar combinations in guns previously manufactured. The Montigny, the Miles, the Gatling guns, and the Winchester rifle, were chiefly relied upon as containing apparatus and elements similar to those existing in the Nordenfelt gun, and the evidence directed to these issues was both complicated and voluminous. Questions of this kind, of course, must be largely determined by the evidence of scientific or expert witnesses, and evidence of this character is necessarily open to the objection that the witnesses testify more to matters of opinion than to matters of fact. The evidence of experts is, no doubt, often of a partisan character. They appear before the court as much in the character of advocates as in the character of witnesses, and their evidence on this account therefore, should be received with caution, more especially when the antecedents of the witness expose him to the observation that he is directly or indirectly interested or biassed in favour of the party whose cause he espouses. In the present case, the scientific witnesses who were called on both sides were undoubtedly men of great scientific attainments, and their evidence was, of course, of too complicated and technical a character for general comment. But apart from what may be termed the subordinate combinations which Mr. Baron Huddleston has held to be new, the chief merit of the invention, supposing that the subordinate movements effect their object, is the automatic action of the Nordenfelt gun, that is to say, that one motion will charge, will spread, and will fire the gun. This automatic action, coupled with the subordinate movements or combinations, is, as we have already said, the essential feature of the Nordenfelt gun. Mr. William Gardner had already patented both a magazine-rifle and a machine-gun, and was of opinion that, in 1873, the date of the plaintiff's patent, there was only left to be invented little details to do the same thing in a different way, and his view of the case was that at that time the field was practically exhausted; in fact, that Gatling had already done that which Nordenfelt did in a different manner. It was merely "tweedledum" and "tweedledee." Mr. Gardner further denied that either his feeding apparatus or his cartridge guide was any infringement of the Nordenfelt patent. "When I came out," he said, "with this feeding apparatus contrary even to the opinion of the Machine-gun Committee, it was a new revelation, more than the Book of Mormon. The feeding apparatus and the mode of using it are entirely different." The learned Judge, however, has decided that the defendant had substantially availed himself of the plaintiff's invention, and that the differences were merely colourable, and, therefore, granted the injunction as prayed. Upon this point of the case, the learned Judge observed:—"Mr. Aston has well and fully described the previous history and state of knowledge of battery guns prior to the plaintiff's patent, and has pointed out the defects which had to be overcome. I think the evidence shows that there was reasonable objection to the Winchester, to the Gatling, and to the Christophe Montigny, and that the real desideratum was the safe and convenient transfer of the descending cartridges, not perpendicularly from the magazine or cartridge-conductor, to a point concentric with the barrels to be fired, but laterally, so that the dangers of jamming, fouling, and exploding might be avoided, and the cartridges so descended brought opposite to the barrels from which they were to be fired. The plaintiff effects this by a very ingenious mechanism, one altogether new. The motion may be described as effected by a species of partial fall, and then whole fall upon the groove in the carrier-block, upon which it is carried by a lateral motion to the point from which it is driven by the plunger into the barrel. The defendant has adopted the same position, his cartridge falling from the conductor at a point away from the barrel, and to get the cartridges from that point to the point where they may be discharged, he has adopted a partial fall, and then what he says is a push, by which the cartridge is driven, as it were, downwards to a place on a fixed rest, concentric with the barrel. Is this in substance the same thing as the plaintiff's? Mr. Bousfield says it is not, for he says while the mechanical force used by the plaintiff is principally gravity, his client's object is obtained by a push or thrust. I cannot forget that this particular motion is described by his own client as a slide for transferring the cartridges simultaneously from the cartridge-feeder to the spaces in front of the plunger. Are not these means substantially the same, and the differences merely colourable? Upon this there is, no doubt, a conflict of evidence; but applying my mind carefully to it, the testimony of the plaintiff's witnesses carries conviction to my mind, and I find, therefore, that in this respect the defendant has infringed the plaintiff's patent." The utility of the Nordenfelt gun was not seriously questioned at this trial, and the opinion of Lord Alcester on this point was conclusive. "I have the highest possible opinion," says he, "of the Nordenfelt guns for accuracy and penetration, also for range." With respect to the Gardner gun, Lord Alcester said:—"I have seen the Gardner gun. They were sent out too late to be employed. We had three sent out when I was up the Canal. They did not arrive at Port Said until about four days before Tel-el-Kebir was fought. I was anxious to get them up, but they did not arrive. The guns I sent up to Tel-el-Kebir were the old Gatling guns. I would have given anything to have had the Nordenfelt guns up there." Having regard to the very interesting evidence of Lord Alcester, there can be no doubt that in the Nordenfelt gun the service possesses a good and serviceable weapon. Whatever may be the issue of the present contest, it will, at any rate, be satisfactory to the service to know that, whether Mr. Gardner or Mr. Nordenfelt should ultimately succeed in the present litigation, the desideratum of a good, reliable, and serviceable battery gun has at length been supplied. Improvements, no doubt, will hereafter be effected in details, but the principle of fixing the barrels side by side in a plane, and feeding simultaneously, has proved its utility, in contradistinction to the principle of a group of barrels revolving and fed consecutively. Of the latter principle, the Gatling gun is, perhaps, the best embodiment. The mitrailleuse, which was used in the Franco-German war, was a gun similar in many respects to the Gatling, but the latter was practically the only form of gun of this type which has been actually in service in this country. In the latter gun, the group of barrels, which are made to revolve by a kind of hand-organ movement, are loaded and fired consecutively from the feeding apparatus, which is placed above; whilst by the system adopted in Nordenfelt and Gardner guns, the cartridges are supplied to each barrel of the gun simultaneously, and discharged simultaneously or successively, as required. To effect this object by a simple mechanism, and avoid the danger of jamming or explosion, at the same time to combine the various functions of loading, ramming-home, firing, and spreading, in what has been termed an "automatic arrangement," requiring only one movement of a lever, is, of course, a most desirable end to be attained. The judgment of Mr.

Baron Huddleston, if not reversed on appeal, will confirm to Mr. Nordenfelt the monopoly for a period of the very serviceable invention which he has patented. The Gardner Gun Company have entered into a contract with our own Government to supply guns, and so far as this contract with the Government is concerned, the injunction granted by the Court is held in suspense, in order that it might be executed, and a receiver was appointed in respect of payments under that contract. With this exception, the Gardner Gun Company are restrained from manufacturing or supplying the Gardner gun in this country. The Company is not an English corporation, but is a company under the laws of the State of Ohio, in America; their works however, are established in this country, where the guns have been manufactured. Whatever the ultimate result of the present litigation may be, it is, at any rate, evident that the service will benefit from the exhaustive inquiry which will be necessitated; but one or other of the parties to what promises to be a protracted litigation will inevitably suffer severely in order that this result, beneficial as it is, may be attained.

Information has been received at Portsmouth to the effect that the Admiralty have decided to reinforce the British Squadron on the China station, and have ordered the Rupert to be fitted out and proceed with all convenient despatch to those waters, so as to bring the China Squadron nearer an equality with that of France, as far as protected ships are concerned.

The dockyard jetties at Portsmouth have, during the last few days, been lined with an imposing array of various kinds of craft. The Tenasserim—a trim-looking transport—and the ungainly, ex-Arctic vessel, Discovery, loading with stores, at the south jetty; while the Lord Warden, Repulse, Hecla, and Hector pretty well fill up the remaining space. The Warrior's old crew are shaking down into their new quarters on board the Shannon, their former craft lying, in a semi-dismantled condition, in the tidal basin. The Polyphemus is still in dock, as also are all three of her Majesty's yachts. The Calliope, building on No. 3 slip, is to have four six-inch guns mounted on sponsons, two forward and two aft, so it is to be presumed that this arrangement, as fitted forward in the Canada and Cordelia, is approved of. There appears to be no particular hurry about the completion of the Edinburgh, judging from the small number of hands employed about her. Perhaps there is no hope of her guns being ready for some time. This is a vessel which will probably meet with the approval of Naval officers, the arrangements, both for fighting and accommodation, being very good. The plan, which has been adopted in the Inflexible and other vessels, of dividing the space available for the ward room, has been followed here, the ward-room officers having a small reading or ante-room provided, in addition to their regular mess-place.

The Melampus, which has for years done duty as a floating Roman Catholic chapel at Portsmouth, has become so leaky as to render some new arrangement necessary. It would surely be better, and more economical in the end, to appropriate some disused store in the dockyard for this purpose, than to replace the Melampus by another, and perhaps, equally rotten hulk.

The following officers commenced the Half-pay Gunnery course on board the Excellent on Monday last:—Captains H. F. Maclear, H. J. Carr, J. B. Warren, J. G. Hanmer, A. B. Jenkings, H. H. Boys, L. C. Keppel, H. H. Edwards, R. D. King, F. S. Clayton, Sir W. Wiseman, Bart., and A. B. Thomas; Commanders E. H. Oldham, W. L. Morrison, William Marrack, A. Cooke, A. H. Boldero, C. le Strange, and R. W. Craigie. The following officers also joined the Vernon for their torpedo course, having passed the examination at Greenwich:—Acting-Sub-Lieutenants E. E. Hardy, C. E. Madden, E. P. Sears, H. H. Bruce, W. O. Lyne, H. Grant Dalton, M. E. Browning, M. T. Parks, C. H. A. Gleig, J. de M. Hutchison, F. M. Walker, and O. F. Gillett.

The Reserve Squadron will rendezvous at Portland on June 15, and will then, it is said, proceed to Spithead, in time to be reviewed by the Lords of the Admiralty on June 19.

We learn that several German Naval officers have gone to Trieste, to be present at the festivities which, by order of the Emperor Franz Joseph, are to be given at Miramare, in honour of the presence of the English Ironclad Squadron, from June 15 to June 25.

The Admiralty have issued instructions that whenever stores are surveyed, either for condemnation or for stock-taking, the number of actual surveying officers shall never be less than two, in cases where it is possible to obtain the services of officers of any rank. The following alteration is to be made in the Queen's Regulations:—Article 1,827, page 575, add the following, paragraph 4: "4. The surveying officers are never to be less than two in number, where it is possible to obtain the services of officers of any rank."

We regret having to announce the loss of the Lively on the Chicken Rock, off Stornoway, on Thursday evening. All hands and the ship's books and stores have been saved. It seems, however, quite incredible that one of her Majesty's ships should thus be lost in British waters, on a danger so well known, though unmarked, as "the Chicken."

We hear that instructions have been sent to the officer commanding the Dasher in the Channel Islands to abandon to the French certain fishing grounds off Jersey which the island fishermen have been in the habit of frequenting, and about which disputes have arisen. A deputation from the Jersey States are to interview the Home Secretary to protest against this decision.

It is hoped, at the Admiralty, that sufficient pressure may be brought on the Treasury for that Department to assent to the addition of a quarter of a million to the next Navy Estimates, for the strengthening of the Ironclad Fleet.

A correspondent, writing from Gibraltar, May 27, says:—"The Channel Squadron has been here since May 3, and both officers and men have had a very pleasant stay. There has been a great deal going on on shore, commencing soon after our arrival with the Gibraltar Spring Races, and ending yesterday with the Garrison Sports. The races were kindly postponed till after our arrival, in return for which the officers of the Squadron gave a cup to be run for. The Minotaur has been alongside the Mole all the time and the Sultan nearly all; she had to move for a few days to let the transport Calabria go alongside. The Minotaur, Sultan, and Northumberland have given very pleasant afternoon dances, and there have been several dances on shore, wound up by the Queen's Birthday ball at the Convent on Friday. Several men-of-war have passed through during our stay, all homeward bound. The Seagull, from the East Indies; Beacon, from the Mediterranean; Encounter and Lily, from China; and the Jumna, from Egypt. A brigade of seamen, under Captain Fellowes, numbering nearly a thousand, and the Marines of the Squadron, about five hundred, under Colonel French, R.M.A., landed on the 24th to take part in the Queen's Birthday review. They had previously landed twice, once by themselves and once with the troops, to rehearse the programme for the review. The Bluejackets seemed to thoroughly enjoy the soldiering, and went through their part of the performance very creditably. The Neptune joined us on the 19th, and Admiral Wilson shifted his flag to the Agincourt. The ships have all given general leave, coaled, refitted, painted, &c., and are all ready for a fresh start. We leave to-morrow forenoon for Vigo, and ought to get there by the end of the week. We stay there until June 12, and then proceed to Arosa Bay. Much discontent exists throughout the Squadron at our being made to spend our summer away from home again this year!"

We believe it is proposed to build Naval Barracks in Malta in lieu of the Hibernia, that ancient hulk being nearly worn out.

The Danish gunboat Gronsund, lately launched, is so well thought of in Naval circles at Copenhagen, that the Danish Admiralty have given orders to the Government Dockyard at Copenhagen to immediately lay down a second vessel of the same type.

It appears that the 5,000,000 fr. demanded for the Tonquin expedition have long ago been expended; nor is this extraordinary, seeing the forces which have been despatched to the scene of action. There are now two naval divisions en route, the 1st division, commanded by Admiral Meyer, consisting of the ironclads Triomphante and Victorieuse, three cruisers, and a gunboat. The 2nd division consists of the ironclads Bayard and Atalante, three cruisers, a despatch-boat, two gunboats, two transports, and two torpedo-boats, under the command of Admiral Courbet. In the Red River is a flotilla composed of a despatch-boat, three gunboats, and six launches.

The Admiralty are denying any knowledge of the fact that yellow fever has broken out on board the Mallard, and yet, strange to say, the report we published came to us direct from the Admiralty! Furthermore, the Mallard has reached Halifax, contrary to her orders as per the ship's movements issued by the Admiralty, having proceeded there direct from Hayti, to get rid of the epidemic.

The new German Minister of Marine, Herr von Caprivi, last week embarked on board the Kaiser, flagship of the North Sea Squadron, and proceeded with the same to Kiel. The position of a General in the Army who suddenly finds himself (at least, nominally) chief in command of a squadron of ironclads is not to be envied. It is related that Admiral von Caprivi, when proceeding in his barge from Cuxhaven to the squadron off the bar, expressed his surprise that the powerful ironclad Kaiser should be provided with paddle-boxes only, and no wheels, having mistaken the projecting sides of the casemate for sponsons and paddle-boxes. This anecdote, though perhaps not strictly true, is illustrative of the knowledge possessed of Naval affairs by a German Minister of Marine, when first entering into office.

We have repeatedly stated it as our opinion that very few indeed of the merchant steamers on the Admiralty list are sufficiently well built to warrant their being used as auxiliary cruisers in time of war, and we further called attention to the great risk run by several regiments during their passage to Egypt, owing to the actual unseaworthiness of the ships hired to act as transports by the Admiralty. In these opinions we are now entirely confirmed by the evidence given in an arbitration case which is being heard before Captain Castle, Wreck Commissioner, Mr. Scott, Naval architect, and Mr. Grey, shipbuilder, to decide as to a claim for damages, amounting to £60,000, made by the Royal Exchange Shipping Company, the owners of the Monarch Line of Steamers, against the builders of the ships of that Line, Messrs. Patton and Sons, of Glasgow, for alleged misconstruction, as contrary to Lloyds' Rules and Specifications. Strange to say, these were the very ships the Admiralty retained in the Government service after the war was over, and the case now being heard serves to prove how deficient the Admiralty is in regard even to information of the most simple matters of fact. We should have thought the Admiralty surveyors competent to detect the weakness and faulty construction proved and admitted to exist in the ships of the Monarch Line, but it now turns out that this is not the case, and that, somehow or another, the Admiralty accept and employ ships whose construction, according to one of the experts examined, would not render them safe enough to warrant "a kitten" being sent to sea in them, and assuredly not the brave defenders of our country, of whom we have so few. We understand that the Lord-Advocate has been retained by the builders, but that the evidence goes to show, nevertheless, how ill-advised the Admiralty were when they chartered the ships of the Monarch Line. As Mr. Baughan, of the Transport Department, chose these vessels, he should be required to explain his reasons for so doing.

Mr. Krupp has entrusted a French private shipbuilding firm with the construction of a gunboat on his pivot plan. This boat will be armed with a 35-centimètre gun, and is expected to realise a speed of between 18 and 20 knots an hour. Naval men, who have seen the plans, predict a certain failure. The number of patents taken out annually by Krupp is something marvellous. The latest is one for an improvement in the manufacture of compound armour, which consists in the introduction of a sheet of nickel between the steel and iron plates. The power of resistance of the armour is not likely to be increased by this arrangement, which will only add to the already enormous cost.

The new French cruiser Sfax, now building at Brest, of steel, cased with wood, will have the following dimensions:—Length on water-line, 288 ft. 8 in.; breadth, extreme, 49 ft. 2 in.; depth of hold, 26 ft.; mean draught of water, 22 ft. 3 in.; displacement, 4,488 tons. The double-screw engines are designed to indicate 5,000 horse-power. They will not be erected side by side, but one before the other, as is the case in some of our modern cruisers.

The launch of the first-class ironclad Amiral Baudin took place at Brest on June 5. She has been constructed of steel and iron from the designs of M. Godron, of the French Admiralty. Her principal dimensions are:—Length on load-line, 321 ft. 6 in.; breadth extreme, 70 ft.; depth of hold, 28 ft.; draught of water, 26 ft. 2 in.; displacement, 11,336 tons. The vessel is provided with a pair of 3-cylinder twin-screw compound engines, which are designed to develope 8,320 indicated horse-power on a forced draught. Steam is supplied by twelve boilers, each having three furnaces. The estimated speed is 15 knots; capacity of coal bunkers, 800 tons; distance steamed at full speed, 1,650 miles, at a speed of 10 miles, 3,000 miles. The armament of the Amiral Baudin will consist of three (some accounts say four) $14\frac{9}{16}$-in. steel breech-loading and twelve $5\frac{1}{2}$-in. breech-loading guns. The former are mounted in three barbettes, and the latter on the main deck. The armour varies in thickness from $21\frac{5}{8}$ in. to 12 in., and the teak backing is $13\frac{3}{4}$-in. thick. The cost of the hull is 11,400,000 fr., that of the engines 1,560,000 fr. The crew will consist of 500 officers and men. It is reported that the vessel will be pushed forward for commission as quickly as possible. She is unmasted, being provided with a signal-pole only. A sister-ship to the above, the Formidable, is in course of construction at Lorient.

The Shah of Persia is about to order two small vessels of war in England, which are to be employed in the suppression of the slave-trade in the Persian Gulf.

Two further vessels are in course of construction for the Italian Government at the Orlando shipbuilding yard, Leghorn. These are the avisoes Sebastiano Veniero and Andrea Provano, which are of the following dimensions:—Length between perpendiculars, 168 ft. 11 in.; breadth, extreme, 26 ft. 3 in.; draught (mean), 10 ft. 2 in.; displacement, 649 tons; indicated horse-power, 1,000. They will be rigged as topsail schooners, and carry an armament of six $4\frac{3}{4}$-in. breech-loading guns, which will be mounted in barbettes. The vessels will also be provided with torpedo-gear.

There appears still to be a considerable diversity of opinion respecting the merits of Captain Colomb's lanterns for use between decks. That they are more sightly than the old "police" and "wing" lanterns, and a decided improvement upon them in many respects, there cannot be a doubt; but they always find enemies when they are shipped, so there must, presumably, be some defect about them which becomes apparent, probably, at sea. The Neptune's lanterns are now at fault, by all accounts, and a board of officers has been ordered to report on them. The question of lighting between decks is a most important one, and Captain Colomb certainly deserves the thanks of the service generally for the attention he has devoted to it. In almost every ship in the service the lights in the men's messes are absurdly insufficient, it being impossible for more than one or two men to read or write at the table without having recourse to "dips" or "signal candles," improperly acquired, and stuck in their own grease. This is a matter which only wants persistent representation by officers in command to ensure some steps being taken to supply the defect. It may be said that electric lighting is about to supersede everything else, but this cannot be the case for years, and something meanwhile might be done to improve matters, as anyone will admit who has seen poor Jack writing his letter for the mail all in a hurry, lying at full length on the deck by the nearest police lantern, while "Jaundy" shakes the letter-bag at him.

The trial-trip of the Chinese ironclad Ting Yuen, built at Stettin, took place off the port of Swinemuende, on the 10th ult. The results of the same were fairly satisfactory, so far as any observations were taken; but the whole trip partook more of the character of an excursion than that of an official trial. The waters in which the six hours' run was made were so shallow that during the greater part of the same the vessel had only a few feet of water under her bottom, and large masses of sand and mud were continuously thrown to the surface by the revolutions of the propellers. The Ting Yuen did not, as has been stated, take her heavy Krupp guns on board at Kiel, but they were shipped at Swinemuende, by means of a large floating crane belonging to the Vulcan Company. The vessel will shortly proceed to China, under the command of a German Naval officer, and under the German flag. Some difference of opinion exists in German Naval circles as to the course of action the Commander of the Ting Yuen will have to pursue, should a rupture occur between France and China, before he has delivered his vessel into the hands of the latter Government. The Ting Yuen will be rigged as a brigantine for her passage out. At a second trial on Wednesday, in deep water, a speed of $15\frac{3}{4}$ knots was secured, whereas but 14 knots had been contracted for.

It is easy for civilian secretaries, in the enjoyment of large salaries, to advise the Lords of the Admiralty to cancel the circular by which, some two years since, the landing of fresh meat by the seamen in home ports was legalised; but it is to be hoped that their Lordships will not listen to any such suggestion. The practice which prevailed for years before it was brought under official notice, and, save in the case of dishonest ship's stewards and careless paymasters, did no harm to the service, or anyone in it, was condemned in the first instance, on the strength of a paragraph in the Admiralty Instructions, which forbids provisions becoming in any sense "private property;" but, as we pointed out at the time, it is somewhat difficult to draw the line in the case of fresh beef, which, when once issued, undoubtedly becomes the property of the mess for which it is drawn; and, eventually, very much indeed the "private property" of those by whom it is consumed. That a custom should therefore be legalised, by which the members of each mess may avail themselves, in turn, of the opportunity of enjoying a good piece of beef at home, at a greatly reduced cost, seems most natural, the only defect in the circular being that it did not extend the weight of meat permitted to be landed by such individual to six or seven pounds, instead of sticking at the old traditional "four-pound piece." If the system is open to abuses, let some more stringent measures be adopted for checking them; but that there is any sufficient reason for depriving the most well-behaved and respectable seamen in the Fleet of a much valued privilege, it is impossible to believe.

The dimensions of the first-class ironclad gunboats Achéron, Cocyte, Phlégéthon, and Styx, at present building at Cherbourg, and of which mention was made in the Army and Navy Gazette of April 7, are as follows:—Length on water-line, 181 ft.; breadth, extreme, 40 ft. 4 in; depth of hold, 11 ft. 6 in; draught, mean, 10 ft. 10 in.; displacement, 1,630 tons; number of screws, 2. Their armament will consist of one $10\frac{5}{8}$-in. breechloader, mounted in a turret; and two guns of 4-in. calibre, placed on the upper deck. Four more gunboats of the same type are also in course of construction. These are the Flamme (Cherbourg), Fusée, and Grenade (Lorient), and Mitraille (Rochefort). Their principal dimensions are:—Length on water-line, 165 ft.; breadth, extreme, 32 ft. 7 in.; depth of hold, 16 ft. 11 in.; mean draught of water, 16 ft. 11 in.; displacement, 1,045 tons; number of screws, 2. Their armament will consist of one $9\frac{7}{10}$-in. breech-loader and a boat-gun. All the above ironclad gunboats are being built of steel, and will carry, besides their heavy armament, a number of Hotchkiss revolving cannon. The weight of these guns, however, necessitates a large addition being made to the ship's complement, and the German Admiralty having found it necessary to send 38 additional officers and men on board every iron-clad carrying four Hotchkiss revolving cannons, the French Minister of Marine is considering the advisability of taking similar steps.

The Swedish Admiralty have entrusted the Kockums Mekaniska Werkstads Company, Malmö, with the building of an iron corvette cased in wood. As the Swedish Navy at present includes only two corvettes of modern construction, this new vessel, which will be named the Freia, will prove an acceptable addition to the same. Her dimensions are:—Length, 220 ft.; beam, 41 ft.; depth, 21 ft. 4 in.; draught of water, 16 ft. 6 in.; displacement, 2,400 tons. The engines, of 300 (1,800), will be constructed by her builders. The Freia is the first vessel of her class that has ever been built by private contract for the Swedish Government, and the second ship-of-war constructed by the Kockums Company, the first having been the gunboat Urd.

The recent court-martial held at the Royal Marine Depôt at Walmer, on an officer and non-commissioned officer of the Quartermasters' Department, has resulted in an order being issued from the Admiralty, that on no account are weights to be attached to scales that may be used for weighing rations, in order to make them balance. If these scales are not correct, they are to be either properly adjusted or returned into store, and exchanged for others.

It has already been reported in the Army and Navy Gazette that the Italian Government have ordered the construction, at the Government Dockyards of Venice and Castellamare, of two cruisers, resembling in design the well-known Armstrong cruiser Giovanni Bausan, though they are somewhat larger. Their principal dimensions are:—Length between the perpendiculars, 283 ft. 6 in.; breadth, extreme, 43 ft. 4 in.; mean draught of water, 19 ft.; displacement, 3,530 tons. The double-screw engines, which are designed to indicate 6,000 horse-power, have been ordered for one vessel from Messrs. R. and W. Hawthorn, of Newcastle-on-Tyne; and for the other from the Ansaldo Company of Sampierdarena, which has been supplied with the working drawings by the English firm. The armament of these cruisers will consist of two 35-ton Armstrong breech-loaders at the bow and stern, and eight 12-ton breech-loading broadside guns.

The Tonquin affair, now that its importance is better understood, has ceased to excite much enthusiasm in France, although something must be done to avenge the fall of Captain Rivière, who seems to have tumbled into just the same trap, set by the same "Black Flag," as that into which the unfortunate Garnier fell, a couple of years ago. It is something to find the expedition condemned by such a man as Admiral Gueydon, who can speak with authority on such subjects, a Naval officer—the only one—who once held the high post of Governor-General of Algeria, when M. Thiers was President. The Admiral condemns the expedition for several reasons, and above all because France is not a colonising Power. He had some opportunity of judging of this in South Africa. In other quarters, the expedition is condemned because it is supposed to have been undertaken in the furtherance of private speculation; and the stories rife in Paris on this subject are exceedingly scandalous, recalling the Tunisian affair. The prospect, too, of a war with the Celestial Empire is not considered so diverting a matter, since it has become known that China has 300,000 soldiers, trained on the European principle and armed with breech-loaders; that a good many German non-commissioned officers have joined the Celestial ranks; and that "the coming race" are tolerably well provided with ironclads and Krupp guns. According to the Avenir Militaire, the Tonquin affair will be serious enough, should the Chinese help the Annamites in an underhand way. It will be then necessary to send out at least 6,000 men; but should hostilities be declared with China, that will be another matter altogether. In 1860, an army of 40,000 men was required to subdue the country, and a more considerable force would in all probability be requisite now. The magnitude to which the expedition may grow does not, like distance, lend enchantment to the view. A good many French fear, too, that the result will not redound much to the honour and glory of the tricolour. Very severe things have been written on the other side of the Channel of the manner in which reinforcements were shipped off for what must be considered a deadly climate. There was no attempt at selection, as was the case with our Egyptian forces, but the men were taken at haphazard, and packed off in their transports. Now, great fears are expressed that these young soldiers will not be in a condition to uphold the honour of the flag. Everything seems to have been done in a hurry and done badly, and we hear of one gallant Admiral who refused a command because the authorities wished to put his men in one ship and his ammunition in another. Not a few Frenchmen continue to suspect that Prince Bismarck has a finger in the pie, and deprecate this wasting of the national strength, which may at any moment be required for the recovery of Alsace and Lorraine. Then the recent voyage of Field-Marshal Von Moltke on the other side of the Alps has caused a slight flutter through the country, and numerous articles on the famous Triple Alliance and the possibility of a further dismemberment of France. On the other hand, an attempt has been made to excite French public opinion against England, and it is astonishing to find the French Minister for Foreign Affairs trying to work this vein, and plainly referring to us in the Senate as urging China to war. But, then, M. Challemel-Lacour is not a diplomatist, but a professor, and probably Lord Lyons will not be instructed to ask for an explanation of this foolish and uncalled for accusation. A good many papers, and among them the Avenir Militaire, which should know better, take up the same theme, and fall upon perfidious Albion. In ordinary times, this would render the Tonquin expedition sufficiently attractive; but something more than British opposition and British jealousy are wanting just now to gild this Republican adventure, which the Republicans would have so heartily condemned under the Empire. A Parisian journalist, after pointing out that France is under arms in Senegal, Tunis, Madagascar, and Tonquin, says, "It is not Prince Bismarck who would send his uhlans to Hanoi, his white cuirassiers to Tunis, and his artillerymen to Timbuctoo." And the writer then pertinently asks what the people of Strasburg would think of a war with China. We are glad to learn that the stories told of the impaling of the unfortunate Captain Rivière and his companions were not true. At least, they are denied by the French Government; but then the French Government does such queer things, in the way of intercepting telegrams and withholding information.

The admirable arrangements of the civilian Commanders-in-Chief of the Army are beginning to produce unsatisfactory fruits, as the compulsory removal of Captains commences to be felt severely. The senior Captain of the 4th and second Captain of the 31st Regiment, with others, are to be turned out of the service very soon. These officers have arrived at the new age of senility, viz., 43? The officers of the Army are beginning to question whether this new-fangled rule of age disqualification should not be applied with equal rigidity to the Cabinet, Members of Parliament, and the Civil Service as it is to them, as it would cause flow of promotion, and do less damage, perhaps, than it works in the profession of arms.

The numerous appointments in the Prussian Army, announced in the Militär-Wochenblatt, have to some extent quickened promotion, but only in the ranks from commanders of regiments up to divisional commanders. Amongst the Generals newly preferred to commands of divisions are two who distinguished themselves in the Franco-German war, and are known as officers of ability, Lieutenant-Generals von Brandenstein and von Leszcynski. The former was, before the war of 1870-71, chief of the Railway Section of the Great General Staff, and organised the railway transport, upon which depended the successful strategic movements of the German Army to the front. The mobilisation of that Army, worked out in all its details during peace, was a well-known factor in the subsequent victories of the German arms. The principal burden of the work fell upon the Railway Section, and it was the then Lieutenant-Colonel von Brandenstein who, as its head, acted as its chief of the Railway Executive Commission of the Grand Head-quarters during the war. Retiring a few years ago from active service on account of failing health, General von Brandenstein, after the late changes in the War Ministry, has now been placed once more on the active list, and appointed to the command of the 31st Division (Strasburg). His reappointment is looked upon with great satisfaction in the Prussian Army, the General being considered one of its most able officers. Lieutenant-General von Leszcynski, hitherto Inspector-General of Rifles, and who has been given the command of the 15th Division (Cologne), has also had a distinguished career. In the war of 1870-71, he was chief of General von Werder's Staff, and in that position contributed much to the signal successes, attained under difficult circumstances, by Werder's corps in the memorable battle round Belfort, the German operations up to that three days' battle itself having been recognised even by the French as a strategic performance of the first rank. With regard to the present promotions, it may be remarked that they are of an extent such as has not been known for years in the Prussian Army. The number of proportionately young Divisional commanders is now pretty large, while of the Generals commanding Army Corps there are five with over 50 years of service. It is supposed by many that changes in the higher commands have hitherto been postponed in order to give those concerned the benefit of the more liberal provisions of the intended new law regulating military pensions. It is thought that the promotions in the higher ranks just made are only the forerunners of others shortly to follow.

The valuable and instructive letter addressed by Captain Walter, founder of the Corps of Commissionaires, to the Times, deserves attention. The letter is totally at variance with the vague theories and destructive tendencies of the anti-military newspapers, which has done immense mischief by its persistent advocacy of the revolutionary measures for the bouleversement of the Army.

We strongly recommend to the notice of our readers an article in Colburn's United Service Magazine, for the current month, on "Our Citizen Army." The writer, Captain W. F. Leese, Central London Rangers, has succeeded in hitting off most happily the anomalies connected with Volunteering. Unlike most writers on the subject, Captain Leese adopts a moderate tone. He does not pretend to say that the Volunteers are perfect as a military body. He points out exactly where the weaknesses of the system are to be found, and he shows what requires to be done to remedy defects. His paper is especially valuable at the present time. The country has suddenly been awakened to the fact that its defensive forces are not in a condition to justify it in feeling itself secure. Already it has been admitted that the Army is in a deplorable state. Captain Leese, though recognising the claims of the Volunteers to the confidence of the public, tells us honestly what the blots in the system are. His ideas are those of an earnest man, and we have no hesitation in saying that a more thoroughly straightforward exposition of views and opinions has rarely appeared.

The manner in which the German military rifle has been converted into a magazine gun (at present, only 2,000, for experimental purposes) is as follows:—The old butt is removed, and a new one substituted, which contains a tube, or magazine, to hold the cartridges, similar in construction to that of the Spencer repeater. At the end of this magazine nearest to the muzzle of the rifle lies a strong, spiral spring, which is compressed when the magazine is filled, and extends after every shot, forcing a fourth cartridge into the breech-chamber. By a simple arrangement the mouth of the magazine can be closed, when the rifle can be loaded and fired in the ordinary manner. A special feature of the new arm is a contrivance for automatically ejecting the exploded cartridges out of the side of the breech. The Mauser rifle, at present in use, has only an extractor which draws the cartridges into the breech, and the rifle has to be struck sharply with the left hand to remove it. The principle on which the new French repeater is constructed, is similar to that of the German arm; but in this case the magazine contains a far greater number of cartridges, viz., 23. The action of the breech-bolt, in this case, sets in motion a special feeder, which does not allow a fresh cartridge to enter the breech before the exploded one has been ejected. A lever is attached to the lower side of the shaft below the breech, which opens and closes the breech, and sets the feeder in motion. The trials which have taken place at Bar-le-Duc of this rifle are reported to have been very satisfactory. The arm is the invention of a Mr. Mahy.

It is considered by many that the new system of promotion by seniority and selection will produce very great discontent, if some steps are not taken for the protection of regimental officers from the serious evils which now threaten them. It is suggested that the promotion of officers should be protected by a Board of selected General officers, who should consider the cases of all officers for promotion, and prepare the lists for promotion, and that no officer should be promoted or appointed to the Staff without the recommendation of the Promotion Board. The Board of Generals would submit their list of officers "first and fit for promotion" to the Commander-in-Chief, who would be influenced by their recommendations. This is the plan adopted in the German Army, the lists being laid before the Emperor himself, who causes most careful inquiries to be made regarding such officers as are adversely reported upon.

Captain F. W. Campbell, R.A., has succeeded Captain F. J. Roch, R.A., on the Staff of the Director of Artillery and Stores at the War Office.

The revolver "pattern 1879" which has been introduced into the German Army has not given general satisfaction, as it is too long and heavy, and not sufficiently handy. The length is 34 centimètres, and the weight 1·5 kilogrammes. The Dreyse small-arms works at Soemmerda have, therefore, turned out a new Army revolver, the length of which is 27 centimètres, and the weight 1·3 kilogrammes. The arm is provided with self-cocking mechanism, the handle being covered with shark skin. The price is 45 marks.

We find an article in the Standard of the 4th inst. attempting to explain away the palpable evidence of the failure of the Short-service system, and dilating upon its visionary benefits. The article accuses Sir Walter Barttelot of inaccuracy in his figures and exaggeration in his statements, when he made his motion in the House of Commons on the previous Friday. Sir Walter, in a short and temperate letter, written on the 4th, completely disposes of the accusations preferred against him. We hardly expected that what used to be the leading Conservative journal, and the consistent advocate of the interests of the Army in the daily Press, would give insertion to the very worst article on military matters that we ever remember to have read, and that is saying a good deal.

The Council of the Royal United Service Institution notify that the lecture announced to be given at that institution on June 15 by Lord Charles Beresford, on "Machine-guns," will not take place. No reason is assigned for the change of programme.

In order to show that the compulsorily removed Purchase Officers have just grounds of complaint against the War Office, we may mention that a Colonel contested the data upon which the actuarial calculations were made in his case, and requested to be furnished with a copy of it. The reply from the Army Purchase Commissioners was to the effect that "they were unable to comply with this request, as official usage prevented a copy of calculations being furnished." This seems a curious decision, in a case where pecuniary interests were involved.

France has lost a friend, rather than an enemy, in Abd-el-Kader, the redoubtable Emir who for so many years defended, with desperate courage, energy, and talent, his country against the French. In 1843, Marshal Soult is said to have delivered it as his opinion that three men only in the world deserved the appellation of "great," and that these three were followers of Islam—Mehemet Ali, Schamyl, and Abd-el-Kader. They all fought for country and religion, and lost. Abd-el-Kader imitated the example of that celebrated Mameluke chief Mourad Bey, who, after resisting Bonaparte and his Generals in Egypt, allowed himself to be won over by Kléber, and died the friend and ally of France. On several occasions since his downfall did the ex-Emir show his gratitude to France, which paid him a pension of £4,000 a year; and in 1870 he wrote to Napoleon III., who had opened the gates of his prison for him at Amboise, and offered to aid him with his sword. When this letter arrived, the French Emperor was himself a prisoner.

We are unaware whether the various recruiting parties who are employed in London, and are usually to be seen in and about Westminster, are under the direct control of any military authority in town, either as regards discipline, dress, or rations. We certainly consider they should be, as it is impossible to imagine anything more unsoldierlike than the way many of these recruiting parties turn out. They invariably wear their hair too long, which most certainly would not be allowed were they with their respective regiments. The lace on many of the serjeants' caps is contrary to present regulations. They are frequently unshaved; they hardly ever wear gloves; the stripes on their overalls are not chrome yellow; the buttons on their tunics and stable-jackets are dull and dirty; when wearing the regulation dressing-gown, which, for want of a better name, is termed a cloak, it is seldom or ever properly fastened. The strap is always allowed to hang behind, instead of being buckled in front. The spurs are not kept bright and burnished, and the rowels in most instances are blunt, likewise contrary to the standard pattern. We were under the impression that recruiting-serjeants were specially selected for smartness, sobriety, and past good-conduct; if so, all we can say is that the duty must have a very deteriorating effect, as the longer these non-commissioned officers are employed on this service, the more slack they become. They present a marked contrast to the rest of the non-commissioned officers serving with regiments, and the sooner the authorities take notice of their slovenly dress and general unmilitary appearance, the better will it be for the credit of the Army.

Marshal Bazaine's recent defence of his conduct at Metz has naturally attracted the attention of the German Press. The Cologne Gazette concludes an article on this subject with the following remarks:—"In Germany we have no reason to love Bazaine, because, in the first place, he inflicted heavy losses upon us, and again because he is one of the apostles of a war of revenge. But we must admit, in the interest of history, that it has been proved that Bazaine was in 1870 no more of a traitor than MacMahon and Gambetta, and that he enjoys in Germany more consideration than a certain General who has been much talked about recently [General Thibaudin, the Minister of War], who is a supporter of the new political ideas." These lines will, no doubt, be to Marshal Bazaine as so much balm of Gilead; but they will hardly convince French patriots that French soldiers were fairly beaten in the field by German troops. That was a miracle which had to be explained in the interest, not of history, but of wounded amour propre.

Further particulars are published respecting the forthcoming French manœuvres. The latter will include special mountain operations. According to the programme drawn up by General Billot, the predecessor in office of General Thibaudin, they will consist of preparatory marches, marches extending over ten days, and marching manœuvres. The marching powers of the troops engaged will thus be tested to the fullest measure. The preliminary marches extend only over one day, and are intended to thoroughly prepare the men for the ten-day marches and the marching manœuvres. They will be carried on this year between June 1 and August 1 in the 6th, 7th, 8th, 14th, and 15th Army Corps. Ten-day marches in the Alps will be undertaken by battalions of the 22nd, 96th, and 140th Regiments, the fortress battalions of the 52nd, 97th, 99th, and 140th Regiments, battalions of the 3rd, 111th, 112th, and 141st Regiments of Infantry, and batteries of the 9th Regiment of Artillery. A marching manœuvre of thirty days will be carried out, also in the Alps, by the 14th Battalion of Rifles with the 8th Battery of the 6th Regiment of Artillery, by the 3rd Battalion of the 58th Regiment of Infantry with the 8th Battery of the 38th Regiment of Artillery, and by the 24th Battalion of Rifles with the 7th Battery of the 38th Regiment of Artillery. A cantonment with marching manœuvres, extending over thirty days in the Alps, is ordered for the 12th Battalion of Rifles with the 7th Battery of the 6th Regiment of Artillery, for the 13th Battalion of Rifles with the 8th Battery of the 36th Regiment of Artillery, and for the 3rd Battalion of the 36th Regiment of Infantry with the 1st Mountain Battery of the 38th Regiment of Artillery. Manœuvres lasting fifteen days will be carried out in the Vosges by the 5th Battalion of Rifles with the 7th Battery of the 25th Regiment of Artillery, and by the 3rd Battalion of Rifles with the 8th Battery of the 5th Regiment of Artillery. Small detachments of Engineers may be attached to the infantry battalions for the ten-day marches and the marching manœuvres. Reserve officers may take part in the special manœuvres of their respective companies or batteries.

The French cannot tolerate the idea of a Commander-in-Chief such as the Duke of Cambridge or Field-Marshal Von Moltke. The idea with our neighbours is that so high a functionary would necessarily become a danger to the State, and the consequence is that with each change of Cabinet—and such changes are frequent in France—the Army loses not only its War Minister, but its chief of the Staff. L'Armée Française, in an article headed "The Web of Penelope," treats us to some amusing facts resulting from this system. It says that when General Farre was War Minister (after taking the advice of the Infantry Committee), he suppressed the drums, and that it was General Thibaudin who conveyed this decision to the Army. When General Billot became Minister of War (after consulting the Superior Council of War), he re-established the drums, to the great delight of Frenchmen in general. Now that General Thibaudin is War Minister, no one would be astonished if the drum were once more abolished. Again, on February 5, General Billot signed a confidential circular, directing that 50,000 men should be sent home on furlough for the sake of economy; but he had hardly been succeeded by General Thibaudin, before the confidential circular which had created a great uproar in the country was cancelled. A good many men had already left their regiments, but it was deemed expedient to stop all further leave, and to repair the fault committed as far as possible. This decision was well received by the public, who approved of General Thibaudin's determination to maintain the Army in an efficient condition. Now, however, General Thibaudin is about to return to the confidential circular, and fresh furloughs are to be granted as soon as the War Minister is able to find terms for directing this measure,—terms not in flagrant contradiction with his previous decision, and which will excite as little attention as possible. However, as L'Armée Française remarks, "economy is the order of the day, since the soldiers of the Territorial Army belonging to the agricultural classes have been authorised to ask for permission not to join, and the Reservists were called out for only 24, instead of for 28 days." Returning to the series of contradictory orders, the above-mentioned paper adds that on January 29 a circular was issued concerning the non-commissioned officers who are being trained at Saumur to be officers. They were to rejoin their regiments. On March 15, this order was rescinded. On January 27, the President of the Republic, on the report of the Minister of War, signed a decree transforming a Committee of Intendance, and appointing a certain number of intendants to this Committee. On March 24, the President of the Republic, on a report from the War Minister, signed a new decree, striking off the intendants from the said Committee. On March 14, the War Minister published a letter stating that he could not furnish any particulars with respect to the contract for supplying cloth to the Army before the month of June. The next day came a fresh letter, saying that an error had been committed, and that the conditions would be made known in a month. On March 19 appeared a report, approved of by the President of the Republic, delaying all contracts for a year. After enumerating these contradictions, the editor, evidently out of breath, draws rein. He says that he might go on, but that the list would fill the entire journal, and perhaps necessitate a supplement. The French Army, he declares, does not know on which leg to dance, and looking at the picture he has drawn, we can readily imagine the apprehension of those officers who fear that, in the event of a sudden strain, the new system, elaborated with such care, and which has cost so many billions, will be found wanting. It is not enough to have the men and to have the money, there must be organisation and stability of purpose.

Major Van der Goltz, of the Prussian General Staff, has written a work entitled "The Nation in Arms," in which he says that "officers should retain to the end of their career some of the enthusiasm of youth," and that "this can only be possible when their position in society frees them in some degree from the pressure of the daily cares of life." There is much truth in this argument, and it would be well if our own authorities viewed the matter in such a light as to be induced to increase the scant allowance of pay now received by the junior ranks of officers both of our Army and Navy.

The Egyptian Gazette has paid a high tribute to Sir Archibald Alison. It says:—"There were many among the crowd of spectators who, in bidding farewell, could not but feel that in the departure of Sir Archibald Alison they had indeed lost a friend; a friend who has endeared himself not to a limited circle only, but to the whole Army by his never failing sympathy and absence of personal ambition. General Alison leaves behind him in Egypt a reputation for military ability of rare degree, tempered as it is by unusual tact and extreme modesty, gifts which unhappily are only too rarely found associated with military success. These qualities, gainsay it who will, are those which have given Sir Archibald the extraordinary personal influence which so conspicuously exists among those Highland regiments, at whose head he placed himself and personally led over the trenches at Tel-el-Kebir. Under the frigid Scotch nature there is an immense amount of enthusiasm, but only few men are gifted with those attributes which enable them to strike the right chord and evoke that feeling of personal attachment which is felt by all the Scotch regiments that have had the honour of serving under this distinguished General. Few men have so deservedly won a name for themselves so unobtrusively, and the public may perhaps never know how deeply they are indebted to Sir Archibald Alison for the indefatigable work and energy during the four years preceding the Egyptian campaign, which he displayed at the head of the Intelligence Department of the War Office. Consulted upon every important matter connected with military affairs, the success he has attained may be said to have culminated in the brilliant strategy of the late campaign."

When so many commissions are given away to deserving non-commissioned officers of the Army, why are the Serjeants of the Brigade of Guards invariably left out in the cold? With the exception of the necessary promotions to vacancies on the Quartermasters' list, there has been no promotion from the ranks of the Household Brigade for close upon 15 years, the last instance being that of Serjeant John Dalgleish, from the 2nd Battalion Scots Guards, to an ensigncy in the 2nd West India Regiment. Mr. Dalgleish, who was commissioned in November, 1868, died at Cape Coast Castle two days after landing to take part in the Ashantee campaign. In the famous Inkerman Gazette, which conferred a commission on a selected serjeant from every regiment which had shared in the soldiers' battle, three non-commissioned officers of the Guards were chosen for promotion, the three being the late Major J. S. Knox, V.C., who was gazetted from the Scots Guards to an ensigncy in the Rifle Brigade; the late Major John M'Queen, who was gazetted into the 19th Foot; and Serjeant James Cross, who was promoted from the Grenadier Guards to an ensigncy in the 46th, of which he was afterwards Adjutant. A noted Guardsman, whose name crops up in Kinglake, was also promoted in Serjeant James Ashton, whose advancement from the Coldstreams to an ensigncy in the Rifle Brigade was due to his services with the sharpshooters of the Guards under the present General Goodlake. Since the Crimea, the non-commissioned officers of the Foot Guards have seen scarcely any of their number promoted, although their brethren in the Household Cavalry have been frequently honoured.

The number of men in the Army who are struck off regimental duty for garrison employment, and who daily, under the delusive appellations of orderlies or bâtmen, perform the functions of kitchen and scullery-maids in the quarters of married soldiers of various grades, is very great. It can surely be no part of the duties of either an orderly or a bâtman to hand-scrub floors in private quarters, whiten hearth-stones and door-steps, clean pots, pans, and dishes, &c., and keep an eye to the children as well. The wonder is that men can be found willing to perform such menial offices for the sake of, perhaps, a few shillings extra monthly. In these days of short service, when the soldier is barely a sufficient time with the colours to learn more than the rudiments of drill and discipline, it is painful to see young men, with less than a twelvemonth's service, dirty, slovenly, and thoroughly unsoldierlike, acting virtually as charwomen; and their time, every minute of which should be devoted to learning their profession, worse than wasted. That soldiers in the barrack-rooms should take their turn as orderly-men or cooks'-mates is, of course, a necessity. But there can be no military necessity for such a state of things as here described, which, apart from its legitimacy or otherwise, is a downright encouragement of laziness, to say the least of it, amongst that numerous class living in Government buildings, whose real work it is. Commanding officers complain in vain that, what with peace battalions and the numerous garrison duties, fatigues, and guards, they have scarcely any men left to train. With many home battalions skeletons, by reason of the necessity of feeding the linked-battalions, and the Army slowly but surely dwindling away under the influence of Territorialism and short service, is it not time that this scandal should cease to exist? That our small Army should be efficient is demanded on all hands, yet the evil referred to has been allowed to grow to such an extent as to visibly impair the efficiency of the rank and file.

When the promotions were made on July 1, 1881, those officers then holding Staff appointments who were promoted to the rank of Major were retained in their respective appointments. They naturally supposed that they would draw the allowances laid down for the rank of Major. This is, of course, a matter of great importance at Colonial stations. As, however, we have more than once pointed out, such increase of allowances is denied them, on the ground that the relative rank of their appointments is that of Captain, and that they are not entitled to the allowances of their substantive rank. We can scarcely bring ourselves to believe that this can have been intended when the new regulations were framed, for it is manifestly unfair that an officer who by hard work has succeeded in obtaining a Staff appointment, should not receive the same allowances as one of the same rank who is doing regimental duty. If the new regulations are really meant to have this effect, then the importance of Staff appointments has been considerably lowered, and officers will soon begin to ask themselves whether it is really worth their while to qualify for Staff employ. Let us take the case of a Brigade-Major. Before July 1, 1881, if of the substantive rank of Captain, he ranked next after the Field Officers in a brigade, no matter how low his position was on the list of Captains. But now, although the officer may be a substantive Major, he is reduced to the relative rank of Captain. Again, let us consider the case of those officers on the Staff who, on promotion, were at or near the bottom of the list of Majors, and who, owing to their unfortunate position, will be compulsorily placed on half-pay, after their names have, for a certain number of years, appeared in the list of Majors. During the years spent on the Staff they have held the empty title of Major, but have ranked as Captains. Surely these years should not be counted towards compulsory retirement. The case as it now stands is very hard on those who have made the service their profession, and are dependent on it. We feel sure, however, that the matter only requires to be properly represented to ensure its being put right, for we fail to see that any useful purpose will be served by a systematic attempt to lower the social status of Staff officers, in an age when the tendency is or should be to induce officers to study and take advantage of every means of qualifying for the Staff.

It appears there were on January 1, 1883, in the Household Cavalry, 698 men over six feet in height, in the Foot Guards 508, in the Infantry 459, in the Artillery 406, and in the Cavalry of the Line 182.

It seems as if the Army Reserves, other than the First-class and Militia Reserves, are approaching extinction; the enrolled pensioners on January 1, 1883, only amounted to 8,137, the Reserve of 1859 to 1,112, and that of 1867 to 475.

Arrangements have been made for establishing a service of carrier-pigeons in connection with the Intelligence Branch of the Quartermaster-General's Department. The birds will for the present be under the management of Lieut.-Col. Griffiths, 3rd Sikhs, who will be attached to the Quartermaster-General's Department for a few months for this purpose.

"Hopeful" writes:—"There are a great many good points in the revised Musketry Regulations, as published in General Orders 51 and 52 of 1883. But surely the authorities must see that they have made a great mistake in abolishing the instructors in musketry? General Orders 51 and 52 have already been so amended that little of the original text remains. The adjutant publishes them in regimental orders, and everyone is left to act upon them after his own fashion. Can we expect anything like uniformity under such a system? The serjeant-instructor in musketry ought, without delay, to be reinstated, and he could, by being bettered in rank and pay, take the entire charge of the musketry department under the adjutant, keeping all documents relating thereto, and furnishing all returns, including the monthly diary and annual returns, both of which require careful preparation. He could resume his duties on the range, initial and keep all duplicates, and act as umpire in the interests of the public; keep the recruits' return, and do all the work now thrown upon the adjutant and orderly-room clerk, who have quite enough to do, without this extra duty and responsibility. In the meantime, there is but little saved by the present system, as the adjutant is obliged to employ a serjeant well acquainted with musketry in the orderly-room, to act solely as musketry clerk. I hope the authorities will see their way to restoring the serjeant-instructors in a higher position, before musketry matters get into a complete muddle. I refrain from stating what I have already witnessed under the new system, because it is not to be expected that every company officer can at a moment's notice perform with anything like satisfaction the duties of a musketry instructor."

The Standard says:—"The Queen has been pleased to approve of Col. A. S. Cameron, V.C., 25th King's Own Borderers, being appointed Assist.-Qrmr.-Gen. (Intelligence Department), Head-quarters, War Office, in succession to Col. East, half-pay, who has been appointed to the command of a brigade in India, to date from the 27th inst."

The Triumph is to be brought forward at Portsmouth and fitted for a flagship. She is to be repaired for a commission of four years. The work done to her will be similar to that done to the Audacious, which ship she will probably relieve on the China station. She will, however, carry no second-class torpedo-boats during the commission, and the conning arrangements and convalescent and sick bay are to remain as they are at present. The engineers' mess is also to be retained, as it has been found that the ward-room cannot be satisfactorily enlarged so as to accommodate the additional officers.

The Army.

5TH LANCERS. Major Harvey has been granted leave of absence to August, on the completion of his five years as adjt. of the 1st Devon Yeomanry Cavalry.

19TH HUSSARS. Lieut.-Col. J. Duncan, late of the regiment, died at Earlswood, Redhill, on the 28th ult., aged 60 years. A correspondent writes:— "The 28th ult. was witness to one of the most jovial assemblies that have gathered together in Egypt during the occupation. The entertainment was given by the non-commissioned officers of the 19th Hussars at Abbassiyeh, in commemoration of her Majesty's birthday, and to say farewell to several non-commissioned officers about to be discharged. It was attended by representatives of every branch of the service, and members of thirteen different corps were present. The health of her Majesty was drunk with enthusiasm. Several officers of the Egyptian Cavalry were also present, and testified by their presence the good-will existing between the Army of Occupation and the Egyptian soldiery. Several appropriate speeches were rendered. Regimental Serjt.-Major Lima thanked the warrant officers and non-commissioned officers of other corps, and the officers of the Egyptian Cavalry present, for their kind acceptation of the invitation given them, and he trusted, he said, that this would not be the last occasion on which they would meet together with so much good-fellowship. The sickness in this regiment is rapidly decreasing."

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

The Government of India have sanctioned the transfer of the Lieutenant-Colonel of Royal Artillery and the non-commissioned staff of the Royal Artillery district from Peshawur to Campbellpore.

The Committee of the Royal Artillery Institution have decided upon the following subject for the prize essay of 1884: "The Machine-gun: has it a Place in the Field, in a Siege-train, or in a fortress?" Candidates are restricted to officers of the regiment on full pay and members of the Institution, and the essays are to be sent in under seal before April 1 next. The gold and silver medals of the Institution are the rewards.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

The following regulations have been drawn up for the instruction at Chatham of officers of Royal Engineers on furlough from India:—"Study for Promotion.—1. Lieutenants and Captains of Royal Engineers in the Public Works Department in India, when on furlough in England, will be allowed to spend a certain time on duty at the School of Military Engineering at Chatham. 2. The time to be passed on such duty is to be limited to a maximum of six months after the first eight years of service in India qualifying for furlough, and three months after the second period of six years. 3. Officers will be called upon to pass the required examination on the termination of the period of instruction, and prior to quitting the School of Military Engineering. 4. Officers who wish to study for promotion must join at Chatham about March 1 or Sept. 1. Special Instruction.—5. A limited number of officers of Royal Engineers on the Indian Establishment, while on furlough in England, in addition to those studying for promotion, will be allowed to go through special courses of instruction at the School of Military Engineering in the following subjects:—Field works, surveying, construction, telegraphy, photography, chemistry, and submarine mining. 6. The number of officers to whom this privilege shall be granted shall not at any time exceed four. 7. The period spent at the school shall ordinarily be limited to six months, but it may be extended to nine months in special cases, where officers may desire to go through complete courses of submarine mining, and may exhibit special aptitude for that subject. 8. As far as possible, all applications should be made three months prior to the time at which the officers propose joining at the School of Military Engineering, and the officers should specify the subject or subjects which they wish to take up, in order that the commandant may make the necessary arrangements for their instruction. 9. Officers on furlough on medical certificate will only be allowed to go through special courses of instruction when the courses can be completed within the period of their leave. 10. In addition to the above, short classes for instruction in Field Works and Military Sketching commence on April 1 and August 1 in each year, and last three months. General Regulations.—11. Officers who join the school during their furlough will not be allowed thereafter to resume such unexpired portion of their furlough as will carry them over an aggregate absence from India of two years, without the sanction of the Government under which they are employed. 12. The prior sanction of the Local Government will also be required before officers are allowed to undergo courses of instruction during their furlough, when their doing so will necessitate a total absence of more than two years, or to enter on such duty at the expiration of their ordinary furlough of two years. 13. Officers on furlough on private affairs may reckon the time passed at Chatham either as part of their furlough, or as an addition to their furlough (subject to the provisions of paras. 11, 12, and 18). 14. In the former case, they will receive furlough pay during the period with lodging allowance at the rates fixed under Indian Regulations, provided they do not occupy public quarters; and in the latter case they will receive English pay and the allowances and other advantages fixed under Royal Warrant for officers of the Imperial Establishment under similar conditions. 15. Officers on furlough on medical certificate while under instruction may choose at which rate pay shall be issued to them, but in no case will furlough pay be issued after an officer has completed two years' absence from India, or after his leave on medical certificate has expired. 16. Officers on furlough on private affairs are expected to reserve a sufficient amount of the leave granted to them in India, to enable them to return to their duty before the expiration of such leave; in cases in which the balance of furlough remaining available at the expiration of the term of study is only sufficient to allow for the return voyage to India, they will be allowed one month's leave, previous to embarkation, on English furlough pay, officers on furlough on medical certificate—whose leave may expire while they are studying for promotion—will also be allowed, on being reported fit to return to duty, a month's leave on English furlough pay after quitting the school. 17. A certificate of proficiency will be required in all cases to authorise the period passed in study at Chatham to count as service in India. It will not reckon as service for furlough. 18. The time passed at Chatham at the classes referred to in paragraph 10 is not allowed to reckon as in addition to furlough or as service in India."

Scots Guards. Lieut.-Col. F. Gandy, late of the regiment, died at Southport on the 25th ult., aged 70 years.

5th Northumberland Fusiliers. Lieut. Southey, 2nd Batn., a candidate for the Indian S.C., has been appointed to the 16th Bengal N.I., on probation.

25th King's Own Borderers. The return shooting-match between the serjeants of the depôt, King's Own Borderers, and the serjeants of the Berwick Artillery Volunteers took place on the 1st inst., when the Borderers were again victorious. In the evening the Volunteer serjeants entertained their opponents at supper, when a most enjoyable evening was spent. The scores were:—Borderers, 425; Volunteers, 382.

49th Berkshire Regiment. The Gibraltar Chronicle gives a summary of the services of the regiment in Egypt. It says:—"The Berkshire Regt., commanded by Col. W. W. Corban, received orders, while quartered here on July 7 last, to embark immediately in H.M.S. Orontes, lying here empty at the time, for Malta, in connection with the threatening state of affairs in Egypt. The following day they embarked and proceeded to Malta, where the battalion was landed. On July 23 they embarked again on board H.M.S. Orontes for conveyance to Alexandria, where they landed on the 27th, and occupied the Cotton Store at Miner-el-Besil and the Anglo-Egyptian Bank. On Aug. 2 the battalion took over the important police duty of the city, and sent detachments to occupy the tribunal, the arsenal, and other important and responsible posts, and next day the head-quarters marched to the Ras-el-Tin Palace, and formed the guard to the Khedive, being quartered in the portion of the Palace formerly allotted to the harem. A few days later they returned to the Cotton Store and Bank, and again to the Palace on the 10th. On Aug. 18, upon the strategic movement of the 1st Division to Ismailia, the Berkshire were marched to Ramleh, where they occupied the old Egyptian cavalry barrack. On Aug. 19, 20, and 21, the regiment took part in the reconnaissances in front of Arabi's position at Kafr Dowar, and on the 22nd it encamped near Bulkley Station. On Sept. 17 it went to Kafr Dowar, arriving there late at night, owing to the line being broken, and took possession of the large Egyptian camp there. Next morning the enemy's Mariout force, consisting of one regiment of cavalry, several batteries of artillery, and three battalions of infantry, surrendered to the regiment, which afterwards returned to Ramleh. On Sept. 20, two companies, under Major Gavegan, were sent to Tantah, and suffered there severely from the climate, rejoining head-quarters at the Cotton Store and Bank, to which place the regiment had returned on the 21st. The battalion proceeded to Cairo on Oct. 12, where it was encamped first at Gesireh, and subsequently at Abbass'yeh. For his services during the expedition, Col. Corban received the 3rd Class of the Medjidie. Although the Princess Charlotte of Wales's were not fortunate enough to form a part of the force which was despatched to Ismailia, their services were none the less arduous and important, the presence of the small force left in front of Arabi's lines at Kafr Dowar under Sir Evelyn Wood having contributed in no small degree to the success of the operations. His Highness the Khedive has signified his intention of conferring upon Lieut. Burney the Order of the Medjidie, in recognition of his gallantry in saving the lives of two women from the Nile, but no official intimation has yet been published in the Gazette."

ROYAL MARINES.

The men who have been doing police duty in Dublin since November last are being sent back in small detachments to England, there being no further need of their services, which have been invaluable to the police.

The following changes will take place on the 1st prox. in command of recruiting stations Royal Marines:—Major R. C. Allen, R.M.A., to relieve Major and Brevet Lieut.-Col. C. P. Heaslop at Bristol; Major G. A. Heseltine, R.M.L.I., to relieve Major and Brevet Lieut.-Col. P. R. Holmes at Liverpool.

Capt. S. Polkinghorne, R.M.L.I., has been granted three months' leave of absence on medical certificate, for benefit of health, with permission to visit the Continent.

Capt. L. Edye, R.M.L.I., has been ordered to report himself at Aldershot on the 11th inst., to undergo a course of instruction in Army signalling.

Capt. J. A. R. McKechnie, R.M.L.I., has been appointed, as a temporary measure, quartermaster at the Discharge Depôt, Fort Brockhurst.

65th York and Lancaster Regiment. Lieut. Money has been granted leave from India to England for twelve months, on medical certificate.

66th Berkshire Regiment. The verdict and sentence of the court-martial recently held upon Capt. and Pymr. Mayers, upon charges of embezzling sums amounting to over £2,000, have been made known. The prisoner is to be cashiered, imprisoned for two years, and to refund the sum proved to have been embezzled, the last clause being included in order to confiscate any money or pay due to Capt. Mayers from public funds.

78th Seaforth Highlanders. Col. Warren, lately commanding the regiment, has been appointed to the command of the 72nd Regimental District at Fort George.

91st Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. The move of the regiment from the Cape to Ceylon will be carried out at the end of the year.

96th Manchester Regiment. Col. W. A. Barnard died at Surbiton on the 4th inst., aged 52 years. The deceased, who was eldest son of the late Gen. Sir Henry Barnard, K.C.B., served formerly in the Grenadier Guards, which he entered as ensign and lieut., Feb. 23, 1849. He became lieut. and capt., July 14, 1854; brevet major, Oct. 23, 1857, and capt. and lieut.-col., June 19, 1860. Exchanging subsequently to the Line, he commanded the regiment for some years, and ultimately retired by sale of his commission. He served as aide-de-camp to his father at the siege and fall of Sebastopol, from Dec. 13, 1854 (medal, with clasp, 5th Class of the Medjidie, and Turkish medal), and in a similar capacity in the Mutiny campaign of 1857 (brevet of major, medal with clasp).

102nd Royal Dublin Fusiliers. The move of the regiment from Ceylon to the Cape will be carried out in December.

Rifle Brigade. Major Brownrigg was to have vacated his appointment of D.A.Q.M.G. at Rawul Pindee on the 1st inst., after five years' service in the department. Major Brownrigg proceeds to England to join one of the battalions of the Brigade on home service.

Pay Department. A correspondent writes:—"In your mention of the services of the Paymasters who have lately been promoted to the rank of Major, Major Brockman is described as late 80th Regt. I beg to append a list of his services:—Major W. L. Brockman, A.P.D., late 86th (Royal County Down) Regt.; served in Royal Navy with the Baltic Expedition (medal); as ensign in 4th West India Regt., in the operations on the West Coast of Africa, 1863-4; South African War, 1879; Zulu Campaign (medal)."

Veterinary Department. The death is announced from India of Vet.-Surg. E. W. Goldsmith. The deceased entered the service May 17, 1879.

MILITIA.

4th Brigade, North Irish Division, Royal Artillery, assembled at Linen-Hall Barracks on the 28th ult. Notwithstanding that this brigade has not been called out since 1880, and is considerably under its establishment, the manner in which the men responded to their notices was most satisfactory. The regiment has proceeded to Wicklow, at which place it is encamped, under command of Col. Magill.

Bedfordshire Regiment. The annual training of the 4th Batn., under the command of Col. Fellows, took place at Colchester. The officers and men assembled at Hertford on the 7th ult., and proceeded (nearly 800 strong, every officer being present) by the Great Eastern Railway to Colchester on the following day, where they were quartered in huts. The orderly manner in which the men detrained and marched to the camp was much commented on by the staff of the garrison. On the 17th ult., the men's huts were minutely inspected by the Major-General Commanding the District, who was pleased to express himself well satisfied with their uniform and cleanly appearance. On Thursday, the 31st ult., the battalion was inspected by Col. Bancroft, commanding the 16th Regimental District, at Bedford, who, after seeing it put through various manœuvres, ordered Col. Fellows to extend it for the attack. Quarter-column was then formed, and Col. Bancroft, addressing the officers and men, informed them that it would give him great pleasure to make a very favourable report of the battalion. The right-half battalion left the camp at 11 p.m. on Friday, the 1st inst., and marched to the station, where it entrained for Hertford, followed by the left half an hour later, and the men were paid off and all had left the town by 9 a.m. on Saturday, for their various homes in the country.

3rd West Yorkshire. The following from the Yorkshire Post is in reference to the camping ground of the regiment at York:—"We beg to retain our bad opinion of this swamp for Militia camping, until made suitable by thorough drainage and a good supply of spring water. Now that the Army is about ten thousand and Militia thirty thousand men short, we should have thought it better policy to make recruiting popular. A large sum has doubtless been expended in the purchase of this noted duck-and-snipe ground, so unfavourably known in Yorkshire, especially to hunting men, and a larger amount may be wasted in the attempt to drain it and find spring water. We hope some searching Parliamentary inquiry will be made into this sending of Militiamen to a notoriously damp place, where drainage water only exists for drinking purposes, and the expenses that will be caused, which could probably have been avoided by an arrangement of training dates and use of the costly York Barracks. The likely cost of this swamp, and what has already gone in attempting to find spring water, should also be closely inquired into, or it may be supposed that a splendid investment has been made for the nation."

Royal Welsh Fusiliers. The staff serjeants and serjeants of the depôt and 3rd Batn. assembled in their mess-room at Wrexham on Tuesday evening, for the purpose of making a presentation to Qrmr. Perris, 3rd Batn., on his severing his connection with them, on promotion. Qrmr. Perris, on entering the mess-room at 8.30, was most cordially received by the members. Serjt.-Major White, who occupied the chair, on rising and addressing Mr. Perris, said that on behalf of his brother-serjeants he had very great pleasure in presenting him with a regulation sword and a field-glass, heartily congratulated him on his well-deserved promotion, and begged his acceptance of the presentation as a mark of their esteem and regard. Mr. Perris made a suitable reply.

The under-mentioned regiments are ordered to assemble for annual training to-day:—6th Brig., North Irish Division (Mid-Ulster Artillery), at Dungannon; 3rd Batn., Highland Light Infantry, at Lanark Muir, in camp; 3rd Batn., East Lancashire Regt., at St. Ann's-on-Sea, in camp; 3rd and 4th Batns., Liverpool Regt., at Altcar, in camp; 4th Batn., Oxfordshire Light Infantry, at Aldershot, in camp; 4th Batn., North Staffordshire Regt., at Whittington Heath, in camp; 4th Batn., South Staffordshire Regt., at Lichfield Barracks; 3rd Batn., Worcestershire Regt., at Worcester, in camp; 3rd Batn., Royal Irish Regt., at Aldershot, in camp; 3rd Batn., Royal Irish Rifles, at Newtownards; 4th Batn., ditto, at Antrim, in camp; and 5th ditto, at Aldershot, in camp.

The following regiments, on completion of training, will be dismissed to-day:—4th Batn., Bedfordshire Regt., at Hertford; 3rd Batn., Derbyshire Regt., at Derby; 3rd Batn., Dorsetshire Regt., at Dorchester; 3rd Batn., South Lancashire Regt., at Warrington; 4th Batn. Shropshire Regt., at Hereford; 3rd Batn. North Staffordshire Regt., at Lichfield; 3rd Batn. South Staffordshire Regt., at Lichfield; and 3rd Batn. Yorkshire Regt., at York.

YEOMANRY CAVALRY.

Denbighshire Hussars. The regiment, under command of Lieut.-Col. Naylor-Leyland, assembled at Ruthin for four days' drill and exercise and six days' permanent duty, on Thursday, May 24, and was inspected on Friday, June 1, by Lord Ralph Kerr, Inspector of Auxiliary Cavalry. The troop competitions for prizes given by the officers of each troop for sword exercise took place on Wednesday, May 30, and on the following day the winners of the first and second prizes in each troop competed, mounted, for the two cups, presented by Col. Naylor-Leyland and Major Barnes, for swordsmanship, when Corpl. Owen (Llangollen troop) and Serjt. Forrester (Wrexham troop) won the first and second prizes, respectively. On the same day also took place the competition for the fifty prizes of £1 each, presented by Col. Naylor-Leyland to the fifty best-turned-out men. On the following day the Ruthin troop was judged to have the greatest number of well-turned-out men, and the members of this troop will accordingly wear the regimental badge during the ensuing year. On Friday, June 1, the competition took place for Mrs. Naylor-Leyland's £10 prizes for the four best-turned-out men in the regiment, when the inspecting officer awarded them to Pte. Armour (Denbigh troop), Corpl. Hockenhall (Wrexham troop), and Corpls Williamson and Kellett (Ruthin troop). The regiment was subsequently paraded for the inspection, and having executed the usual parade movements, was put through various field movements by Col. Naylor-Leyland. At the conclusion of the parade, Lord Ralph Kerr addressed the regiment, and expressed his satisfaction at the appearance it presented. He considered that the regiment was very well mounted, and that the accoutrements and saddlery were very clean and well fitted; the various field and parade movements (including the cantering past by squadrons) had been well executed, as also the sword exercise and dismounted service. He said that he had heard from his predecessor (Col. Thesiger) of the great improvement which had taken place in the regiment during the past few years, and he added that it afforded him great pleasure to be able to make a most favourable report on the efficient state of the regiment to H.R.H. the Commander-in-Chief.

Royal North Devon Hussars. The regiment came out for permanent duty on May 23, and was dismissed on the 30th. The officers present were Col. Sir Arthur Chichester, Bart., Major Deane, Capts. Basset, Kirkwood, Holley, Lord Ebrington, Davie, Hon. C. W. Bampfylde, and Whyte, Lieuts. Radclyffe and Treffry, Surg. Gamble, Vet.-Surg. Gregory, and Capt. and Adjt. Matheson. The attendance was very good, and in many troops there was not a single absentee. The regiment was inspected on the 28th and 29th ult. in Youlston Park. On the 28th the adjutant worked the regiment for a considerable time in the squadron column movements, which were well executed, and with which the inspecting officer, Col. Mussenden, expressed his satisfaction. They were also inspected in reconnoitring and squadron drill by troop officers. On the 29th, there was a march-past and a field-day under the colonel. All the movements were executed at a rapid pace, with long advances between each, and at the same time with steadiness. Sir Arthur and Lady Chichester afterwards entertained all the officers and the county people, numbers of whom were present, at a large luncheon at Youlston. On Wednesday the regimental and troop prizes were competed for, and the men paid and dismissed. There were 327 of all ranks mounted on the inspection day, not including dismounted men, and sick men, and horses. The payment of men for troop drills promised by Lord Hartington the other evening will be a great boon, and is anxiously looked for by all interested in the welfare of the Yeomanry.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

23rd Middlesex (London and Westminster Rifles). This regiment, under command of Lieut.-Col. Routledge, will in future be designated, officially, the 2nd Volunteer Battalion, Royal Fusiliers (City of London Regiment).

The Canadian artillery team to compete at Shoeburyness this year has been selected by the Committee of the Dominion Artillery Association as follows:—Gunners Huot, Quebec Field Baty.; Dunnett, Ottawa Field Baty.; Maltby, Newcastle Field Baty.; Williams, London Field Baty.; Wilmot, Kingston Field Baty.; one, not named, First Provincial Brigade, Guelph; Russell, Coburg Baty.; Offer, Prince Edward Island; Scott, Cooper, Ward, Dawson, and Swift, Montreal Garrison Artillery; Methot, Quebec. The spare men from the garrison batteries will be selected by the commandant of the team, Lieut.-Col. H. N. Macdonald, Guelph. The members selected by the commandant out of the Royal Military College are Serjt.-Major Vaniffland and Serjt.-Major Nanton. The list from A Baty. was not received. B Baty. selections are as follows:—Serjt.-Instructor Lyndon, Staff Serjt. Kerly, Acting Bombdr. Gauthier. The committee selected Major Short, of B Baty., as adjt. of the team. The team will sail for England on July 14.

The Commander-in-Chief in India has approved of a darker shade of cloth than that now in use for issue to native regiments wearing drab uniform. The lighter-coloured cloth has been found to fade very rapidly, and the Clothing Agency believe that the colour now approved will be of a more permanent character.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

X. Y. Z.—The writer of the first article in our issue of last week takes the first opportunity of acknowledging the mistake he made in the quotation with which that article concluded. As soon as he saw the mistake, he determined to do this; and he would have done so, if no notice had been taken of it. In the "Epistola ad Pisones" of Horace, the line occurs as quoted by you. There was no intention, however, of quoting from Horace, but from the fable of Æsop to which Horace referred.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JUNE 9, 1883.

WE referred lately to the system under which Indian cadetships are given, and we called attention to a case in which favouritism was allowed to carry the day in preference to merit. We have since obtained particulars of another case which has been much discussed among Indian officers. The case seems to be one of such unrighteous favouritism, and so unfair to lads who have no interest, that we give it due prominence, in the hope that allusion to it may in future shame the dispensers of the public patronage from such abuse of power. The facts, briefly summarised, are these:—Twelve Cadets passed into Sandhurst in July.—A, the son of an Indian General officer of some distinction, was one of the number, and occupied the second place on the list of those who were pronounced qualified. Thus, according to the regulations, he should have been admitted the following September. Having waited until the end of August for the usual orders for his admission, and receiving none, his father, acting on the advice given to him by his friends, addressed the Military Secretary at the India Office, and was informed by that functionary "that the Secretary of State regretted there were no vacancies, but that his son would be admitted in the following February." It naturally seemed to the father to be strange that there were no vacancies for Indian Cadets, as they are supposed to be entitled to priority of admission. On the father of the lad casually mentioning the circumstance to an old brother-officer, who had passed most of his soldiering days at home, and was well acquainted with the mysteries of the public offices, the latter remarked,—"Well, that's odd; and you may depend upon it that the whole thing is a dodge, and that your son has been done out of his vacancy by some other cadet who happens to have interest at Head-quarters." "But," was the reply, "the Secretary of State assures me there are no vacancies, and I am bound to accept his assurance without question or doubt." "Oh!" said the friend, "don't you believe it; write up and ascertain if there are any youngsters who passed below your son now at the College, and the chances are you will find there are." It was pointed out that that would be impossible, because it would be dishonourable to treat a young man so, who had won his place by merit; and it was not probable that his juniors, who passed with him on the same day, would have been admitted, when he had been informed there were no vacancies. At all events, the father was induced to address an official letter to the India Office, asking for information, when, to his great astonishment, he discovered that there were five cadets who had been admitted in the September term who had passed junior to his son; whilst he was refused admission on the plea of no vacancy! It appeared to General —— to be almost incredible. He thought there must have been some mistake; so he again addressed the Military Secretary, bringing the circumstances to his notice, and asking for redress, as he felt sure that there had been some departmental error, and no intentional miscarriage of justice. He received a curt reply, to the effect "that when there were more candidates than vacancies for this class—i.e., Indian Cadets—it rested with the Secretary of State to select whom he chose, and that your son could not be admitted until February." What was the result? General —— had to go to the expense of sending his son to school for another term, at an outlay of some £40 or £50; and although the lad had won his entrance into Sandhurst by hard work and sheer merit, and had passed second on the list, those standing 3, 5, 7, 9, and 10 were admitted before him, and he was superseded by five of his juniors, who passed the entrance examination on the same day, and were gazetted to regiments six months before him. His future prospects in life may thus be seriously injured in consequence of this great injustice, for he was superseded by all those who were gazetted to commissions between August and January following. In proof of the reprehensible system of favouritism in high places, the junior Cadet No. 10 failed to pass out in the July or second term, and had to go up again in December of the same year! Therefore, by this system of favouritism, the country is deprived of the services of the most intelligent officers, for it requires no mathematical demonstration to prove that A, who passed second on the list at a public examination, is a better man than B, who passed tenth on the same list; and if proof were necessary, it is confirmed by the fact that B was unable to master the curriculum of the College in less than three terms, when A succeeded in passing out in two.

A strong belief exists at Aldershot that Sir Archibald Alison will succeed Sir Daniel Lysons in command in August next. Should this prove correct, the Aldershot Division may be congratulated on having such a worthy successor to the kind-hearted veteran who is compelled, all too soon, to retire from a service in which not many men of his stamp now remain.

Now that Sir Daniel Lysons' command at Aldershot is drawing to a close, it is permissible to say that he has been very unfortunate during the past three years in not having had the opportunity for instruction or of manœuvring on an extended scale which his predecessors enjoyed. For no inconsiderable period, about half-a-dozen skeleton battalions, a depôt or two of turbulent boys with boy non-commissioned officers, a couple of very weak cavalry regiments, a Field Battery or two, and some departmental details, have formed the whole of the Aldershot command. During recent years, it has been quite evident at Aldershot that our present Army system is unsound and our regiments are deteriorating, despite the statements of the Army reformers to the contrary. Occasionally, a strong regiment of tolerably well set-up and soldierly-looking men has arrived at the station; but it has not long remained in such a condition, for the work of disintegration has soon commenced, and in a few short months the regiment has been reduced to a shadow of its former self. By the rules of the service, Sir Daniel Lysons' period of command would terminate on July 31, just in the middle of the drill season. This would be a most unsuitable time for handing over the command to his successor, whoever he may be, and on this account it is not improbable that Sir Daniel will continue in command for a short period beyond that date.

The subject of reduced non-commissioned officers being allowed to remain in the service is under consideration, and pending further orders, each case as it arises will be submitted to the Horse Guards and dealt with on its merits. It has recently transpired that young non-commissioned officers have deliberately sought trial by court-martial for the purpose of obtaining discharge. On the other hand, to an old soldier, especially if he has given hostages to fortune in the shape of a family, which is too often the case, summary dismissal from the service, without pension, on reduction, is unmitigated cruelty.

The following extract from the Maltese Cross, the regimental journal of the 1st Battalion, 60th Rifles, is not without interest:—"Brigade-Surgeon W. S. Oliver, M.D., has been granted retired pay, with the honorary rank of Deputy-Surgeon-General. Dr. Oliver, who formerly served many years in this battalion, is the inventor of the 'Magazine' equipment, which far surpasses any other in comfort and efficiency; this was the verdict of the Rifle Brigade and 52nd Light Infantry, in which regiments it was practically tested." We may add that this is also the verdict of all those who have had practical experience of the Oliver "Magazine" accoutrements, and are free to speak on this subject without favour or affection. An opinion gains ground in the service that the Oliver equipment never got a fair trial, and that, under any circumstances, it was never intended to adopt it, notwithstanding its undoubted superiority to all others. The new equipment, which is now being issued at Aldershot, is simply the old valise slightly modified. Thus, after years of committee work, reports without number, and Blue-books by the score, the matter is just where it was when we started. The Militia have still the old square knapsack, and as we seem to move year by year in an ever-narrowing circle, it would certainly not be surprising if Tommy Atkins of to-morrow found himself on the road to glory with the knapsack of his grandfather on his back.

It is in contemplation to erect shooting-galleries at Aldershot, in order that the troops may be able to practice long-range firing in quarters by means of the Morris invention. This system of gallery practice has been tested by many officers of experience, who speak highly of it.

We hear that the following modifications of the serjeants' mess system are proposed, and will probably, ere long, be introduced into the service, pressure being brought to bear in certain quarters with this object:—1. No spirits of any kind to be sold in a serjeants' mess. 2. The liquor bar to be closed, and sale of drink cease, at same hour as in canteens; the mess-room to remain open for other purposes till 11 p.m. 3. All beer, tobacco, &c., sold in the mess to be supplied through the regimental canteen. 4. A yearly Government allowance to be made to each serjeants' mess.

"Invisible varnish" is the latest Army invention, and will, we believe, shortly occupy the attention of an Aldershot Committee. This wonderful varnish is to be used in connection with the grey garments of the future, but how we know not. We await with more than curiosity further enlightenment on this extraordinary invention, which may yet revolutionise the art of war.

Colonel O'Beirne will on Monday ask the Secretary of State for War why the Army Pay Department is the only Department that has not an officer to represent it on the Committee which is now sitting, under the presidency of Colonel Harrison, R.E., for the purpose of remodelling the equipment and the uniform of the officers of the Army; and whether it is a fact that there are now 278 officers serving in the Army Pay Department.

The following notices have been given on going into Committee of Supply:—Colonel O'Beirne,—On Army Estimates, to move the reduction of Vote 8 (Army Reserve) by the sum of £5,000.

Mr. Gibson will on Monday ask the Secretary of State for War whether, having regard to the grave charges and insinuations first brought in evidence and in the Press against medical officers in the late Egyptian War, he will take care that the Vote in the Army Estimates relating to the medical service of the Army (Vote 4) is taken at a time when those interested in vindicating the conduct of those officers will have ample opportunities of doing so; can he now name the day on which the Vote will be taken; will adequate notice be given of the day selected for taking the Vote?

Dr. Cameron will on Monday ask the Under-Secretary of State for India whether he can state the total amount charged on the revenues of India, for the year ending March, 1882,—(a), On account of the rank and file of the European troops on the Indian establishment; (b), on account of the officers of the said troops; (c), on account of the rank and file of the Native Army in India; and (d), on account of the officers of the said Native Army.

Deputy-Assistant-Commissary-General A. G. Hipwell, M.A., Trinity College, Dublin, was called to the Bar by the Honourable Society of the Middle Temple, on Wednesday last.

An infantry-brigade drill was held in the Phœnix Park, Dublin, on Friday last. The troops on the ground were K Battery 1st Brigade R.A., 3rd Battalion Grenadier Guards, 1st Battalion 3rd East Kent Regiment, 1st Battalion 11th Devonshire Regiment, 1st Battalion 13th Somerset Light Infantry, 1st Battalion 60th the King's Royal Rifle Corps, and 2nd Battalion 97th West Kent Regiment. After two hours' drill, under Colonel Browne, of the West Kent, acting as brigadier, the troops were dismissed to quarters, the mounted officers remaining on the ground, by order of the Major-General. These were formed in line, a horse's length apart, and put through a course of "drawing and returning swords," "saluting," &c., by Captain Taylor, the General's popular Aide-de-Camp. Colonel Montgomery-Moore, the Assistant-Adjutant-General of the District, took the right, supported by Major Lindsay, Brigade-Major, and Colonel Browne, the Brigadier of the day, then followed the Commanding Officers, Lieutenant-Colonels, Majors, Adjutants, and Gallopers. Several cavalry motions of the sword were gone through, and also a manœuvre not to be found in the drill-book, consisting of the marching-past salute at the halt! Surely, if these practices are necessary, they should be embodied in the Infantry Field Exercise; and officers of long service, extending up to thirty-three years, should not be subjected to the indignity of taking part in an exhibition of this nature. We say distinctly that to order an Assistant-Adjutant-General and several Commanding Officers to fall in and be drilled in a squad with their Adjutants and subalterns is little short of an insult, and we can only wonder that it was tolerated.

One result of the state of utter confusion into which our Military administration has been brought by recent reforms is that any opinion, however unreasonable it may be, can be plausibly supported by figures carefully selected from the mass of statistics with which we have lately been bewildered. This is exemplified by an article in the Pall Mall Gazette of last Thursday, headed, "The Deficiency in the Army." The large number of recruits who enlisted in some particular years since the introduction of short service is dwelt on with evident satisfaction, and the surplus of unformed lads is contrasted favourably with the deficiencies in the supply of fully-grown men in the days of long service. But not a word is said about the quality of these recruits; no allusion is made to their unfitness for campaigning, so clearly proved in Afghanistan and in Africa. What is the use of our getting 30,000 recruits in a year, or even 50,000, when we cannot produce a single battalion fit, or nearly fit, to take the field? The regiments or battalions ordered to Egypt left many thousands behind them whom the authorities dared not send even against Arabi's half-trained levies. The article on which we are commenting endeavours to explain away the importance of the step just taken by the Secretary for War, and deprecates any resort to long service, except as a temporary expedient. Lastly, it reproduces the notion of a dual system of long service for India and short service for a Home Army. This is significant only as being an involuntary admission that short service has failed for India, where half our Regular Army is stationed. But we are not to have two armies and two systems, and hopeless complications, merely to bolster up the schemes of those Army reformers who cannot show a single success, to compensate for a score of failures. Lord Hartington is impressed with the gravity of the situation, and has taken, without unnecessary delay, one of the most effectual steps in the direction of restoring the lost efficiency of the Army. We look with hope, almost with confidence, for the next official announcement of his views.

British officers in Cairo are obliged to walk about in the ordinary black patrol jacket they would wear in England, and their men in thick, grey shoddy, which might not, perhaps, be out of place on a moor in Scotland, but is utterly unfitted for a climate such as that of Egypt. The native Egyptian troops have for the last two months been clothed in white, and the gendarmerie in karki. Whatever may be said of the Egyptian Campaign, the officers and men who took part in it have not suffered from too many personal comforts during the last ten months.

Alexandra, Capt. H. H. Rawson, C.B., flagship of Vice-Admiral the Lord John Hay, K.C.B., Commanding-in-Chief in the Mediterranean, was at Ragusa up to May 30. The Alexandra, Superb, Temeraire, Helicon, Monarch, and Carysfort left Corfu on May 24, and arrived on May 26, the first four at Cattaro, and the last two at Ragusa. The Inflexible rejoined the flag at Cattaro on May 26. The Superb left the Squadron for Malta on June 4. The Helicon rejoined the flag at Corfu on May 24, having been relieved at Constantinople by the Falcon. The Squadron would leave Ragusa on May 31, and reach Spalatro on June 2. The Commander-in-Chief was at Zara on June 5, and would leave on June 8 for Pola. The Decoy arrived at Cattaro on May 29 with mails; proceeded on the 30th to Ancona, and will return to Pola.

Algerine, Com. Fullerton, was senior officer at Cape Coast Castle on May 1; and would remain as senior officer of the West Coast Division, until relieved by the Opal or the Flirt, about the end of May. The Pioneer was at Cape Coast Castle, and would remain until relieved by the Alecto, about the end of May; at the disposal of senior officer. The Bullfrog was at St. Paul de Loanda, and would be relieved by the Stork about May 10; then proceed to St. Helena and Ascension, arriving at Cape Coast Castle about July 4. The Stork was at St. Paul de Loanda, proceeding south to relieve the Bullfrog; she will remain at St. Paul de Loanda until relieved by the Algerine, about the end of June. The Wrangler left the West Coast of Africa Division on April 16 for Ascension, en route to the South-East Coast of America. The Flirt was cruising, and would relieve the Algerine at Cape Coast Castle about the end of May, from Sierra Leone and Ascension. The Opal and Alecto arrived at St. Vincent on June 4, and purposed sailing on June 6.

Arab, Com. Stopford, was at Bushire on May 3; was to meet the Woodlark at Lingah, and then proceed to Jask.

Beacon, Com. A. W. Moore, arrived at Plymouth on June 3 from the Mediterranean, and left for Chatham to pay off on June 5.

Briton, Capt. A. J. Kennedy, is expected at Zanzibar from the Cape of Good Hope during the present month to relieve the Eclipse, ordered home. It is understood she will proceed from Zanzibar to Tamatave to reinforce the English Naval force about Madagascar, which at present contains no vessel nearly as big as some of the French ships in that part of the world. The Dragon and Dryad, the English vessels at present at Tamatave, are sloops, while the French have several new fast corvettes with breech-loading guns about the Madagascar coast.

Canada, Capt. Durrant, went out of Portsmouth Harbour on Thursday for a four hours' full-power trial of her engines, under the superintendence of the officers of the Steam Reserve, and Mr. Durston, Chief Engineer of the Dockyard. After completing an hour's run with her own stokers, the remainder of the trial was to have been completed by the stokers of the Steam Reserve, but as the crankheads of both engines became heated, the trial had to be abandoned. It is not, however, expected that the failure of the trial will delay the departure of the ship, as spare brasses will be substituted for those which have run. She was swung for the adjustment of her compasses and took in her ammunition yesterday and to-day, makes a second trial of her machinery on Monday, and will be inspected by Admiral Hornby on Tuesday. On the 13th she will be joined by Prince George of Wales. He will arrive in the company of the Prince and Princess of Wales, who will go out to Spithead and lunch with the officers. The ship will sail the same evening for a three days' preliminary cruise in the Channel, for trial of engines and to ascertain the behaviour of the ship under sail. At the end of the cruise she will make for Plymouth for examination, and will then sail for the North-American station.

Cleopatra, Capt. Hippisley, was at Hong Kong on April 23; about to sail for Amoy, Loo Choo Islands, and Chefoo.

Curaçoa, Capt. Anstruther, was at Hong Kong on April 26, fitting out; would sail for Chefoo when ready.

Dryad, Com. C. Johnstone, has been nearly three and a half years in commission, and yet, as far as one can see up to the present, no efforts have been made to bring forward a vessel to relieve her. The Eclipse was actually commissioned a fortnight after her, and yet that vessel is now on passage home.

Eclipse, Capt. St. J. Garforth, is at present on her way home, having left Bushire, homeward bound, on April 11. She was ordered to call in at Bahrein, Lingah, and Bunder Abbas—ports in the Persian Gulf—and then proceed to Jask, to await the arrival of the Philomel from Bombay. On being relieved by that vessel, the Eclipse would proceed to Muscat and Aden, en route to England, where she may be looked for about the beginning of July. The "Eclipses" have been very popular in the Gulf, where it is not usual to see so big a ship. The Arab left Bushire for Bussah on April 6, and returned to Bushire on the 21st. The Eclipse was at Aden on May 24.

Euryalus, Capt. Hastings, C.B., bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral Hewett, V.C., Commanding-in-Chief on the East Indies station, is at present at Bombay having her new breech-loading guns fitted. When ready for sea, which will not be much before June, she will proceed to Tamatave, to watch the progress of events there, unless matters have been satisfactorily settled by that time,—a consummation which does not at present seem probable. The southern part of the station was not visited by the Commander-in-Chief last year on account of the Egyptian War, so that an extensive round will probably be made this time, unless something intervenes to prevent it.

Gannet, Com. Bourke, arrived at St. Vincent on June 6, on passage home from the Pacific.

Grappler, Lieut. and Com. Gough, left Gibraltar for Malaga on May 30, and would return on June 3.

Humber, Com. C. H. Hawkins, left Sheerness on Thursday morning, for service in the Mediterranean. She will probably have a nine weeks' cruise.

Lively, Com. A. A. C. Parr, with the Crofters' Commission on board, struck on Thursday evening on the Chicken Rock, a few hundred yards from the shore at Stornoway. The rock is jagged and rough, and the crashing of her timbers as she moved with the swell of the sea and the falling tide could be distinctly heard at some distance. She lies with her forepart upon the rock (which is conical in shape) at an angle of about 45 deg., heeling over to port. Her false keel was carried away when she struck. Her stern is low down in the water, and, having no water-tight compartments, a large quantity of water had gone aft. Com. Parr remained on the bridge while most of the crew were in the boats, lying off the ship, waiting the result of low water. Capt. Parr and the Commissioners were at dinner at the time of the disaster, and the latter were all landed in safety. Later intelligence announces that the Lively has broken her back, and will become a total wreck.

Magpie, Com. the Hon. Foley Vereker, was at Hong Kong on April 26, refitting; about to proceed to Borneo on surveying duties.

Nelson, Comdre. James E. Erskine, A.D.C., was at Sydney, N.S.W., on April 9, when all the ships under the Commodore's command, except the Diamond, were present. The latter vessel was expected from Auckland, N.Z., about the end of April. The Miranda was to leave on April 16 for Fiji, to be present at the burial of King Thakumbau. The Espiègle was to leave about April 23, for Fiji; and the Nelson, with the Dart in company, also for Fiji, at the end of the month or early in May, the squadron assembling at Sura for the opening of Parliament. The Espiègle then proceeds to Solomon Islands, Duke of York, and on to the Caroline Islands, making a somewhat long cruise, being due in Sydney in the middle of September.

Northampton, Capt. Digby, flagship of Vice-Admiral Sir John Commerell, V.C., Commanding-in-Chief on the North America and West Indies station, was at Halifax, Nova Scotia, with the Mallard, on June 5. The Mallard was to be fumigated and thoroughly disinfected. Letters from Commander-in-Chief up to May 24, dated at Bermuda. The Northampton was at Bermuda on May 24; would leave on May 31 for Halifax; arrived there on June 5. The Flamingo was to proceed to St. John's, Newfoundland, about May 31. The Fantôme was to sail on May 25 for Jamaica. The Garnet was on passage to St. Kitt's, to relieve the Dido on the Barbadoes Division, which was to proceed to Bermuda on being relieved by the Garnet. The Tenedos was at Halifax on April 25; will proceed to St. John's, Newfoundland. The Foam was on passage to Halifax, for duty on the Newfoundland Division. The Griffon was at Jamaica on May 19. It is somewhat remarkable that no mention is made of the Mallard in any of the notices of "Ships' Movements" issued this week by the Admiralty, notwithstanding that their Lordships are well aware of the grave anxiety which exists among the relatives and friends of the officers and men serving on board that ship, owing to the reports of yellow fever having committed fearful ravages among them.

Rocket, Lieut. and Com. Orlebar, broke down off Dover on passage home from the Pacific, and was towed yesterday into Sheerness harbour.

Superb, Capt. Thomas le H. Ward, C.B., A.D.C., will leave Malta on the 13th inst. for Trieste.

Swift, Com. Collins, left Hong Kong for Canton on April 25, and was to return by May 2.

Swiftsure, Com. Aitchison, flagship of Rear-Admiral Algernon McL. Lyons, Commanding-in-Chief on the Pacific station, was at Esquimault up to May 11, where she will remain for the present. Comus, on the coast of Peru and Chili, as senior officer's ship during the absence of Commander-in-Chief, was at Callao on March 24. Constance on coast of Chili and Peru, under orders of the Comus. Sylvia in the Straits of Magellan, engaged on surveying service; would proceed to Monte Video in April. Heroine on passage to Esquimault from Callao; left Payta on May 3. Mutine at Esquimault; will remain at Esquimault till arrival of Heroine. Sappho on passage to Esquimault from Guayaquil; left on April 20. Kingfisher will return to Coquimbo after visiting the Society, Cook, and Hervey Groups, and Pitcairn Island.

Thalia, Capt. Brackenbury, C.M.G., left Malta on the 5th inst., and brings home the crew of the Antelope.

Thetis, Capt. Curtis, arrived at St. Vincent on June 6, on passage home from the Pacific.

Vigilant, Lieut. and Com. Lindsay, left Hong Kong on April 21, to rejoin flag at Amoy.

Woodlark, Com. Nesham, has completed her three years' commission, so it is to be hoped that efforts will be made to hasten her relief, as she has spent the whole of her commission in the Gulf, and officers and men have suffered severely in consequence. Was at Jask on May 8; would leave next day for Lingah and Bushire.

Wye, Staff Com. Andrew W. Miller, was docked at Sheerness on Monday afternoon, to be overhauled and repaired.

The Admiralty have awarded the Naval Pension of £50 per annum for Staff Commander vacant by the death of Retired Capt. David Craigie, C.B., on April 8, to Retired Capt. Timothy William Sulivan, from that date; and the Naval Pension for lieutenants of £50 per annum vacant by the death of Retired Com. Henry Batt, on April 5, to Retired Com. Frederick Parke, from that date; also the Greenwich-Hospital Pension of £25 per annum for gunners vacant by the death of Mr. Stephen Lewis, on May 19, to Mr. David Hern, gunner, from that date.

The presence of so many of her Majesty's ships about Tamatave will leave the slave-trade on the East Coast of Africa to be suppressed by the two sailing schooners—the Undine and Harrier—a very unsatisfactory state of things, as these two little vessels, having no steam-power, are unable to assume that ubiquitous nature so essential on the East African Coast if the suppression of the slave-trade is to be a reality and not a sham. Perhaps when Madagascar affairs have subsided into their normal state, or France has worked her sweet will on that island, two or three steam cruisers will be spared to put down this odious traffic, which appears of late, Phœnix-like, to have revived with fresh ardour and in all its hideousness—a state of things brought about in part, if not altogether, by the withdrawal of steam vessels from the East Coast of Africa. —Western Morning News.

The June Navy List announces the deaths of Midshipman J. Blakiston, Assist.-Pymr. H. G. W. Terry, and Gunner W. West, and the following removals from the Active List:—Midshipman C. D. Mackenzie, ill-health; Surgs. G. H. S. J. Bankier and E. D. Maddick, resigned. The following officers have been pensioned:—Chief Boatswains W. Hartland, S. Cuer, and R. Bayley; Boatswains J. Phillips, P. Rickard, and G. W. Baldock.

Mr. Gorst, on Navy Estimates, Vote 5, is to move the reduction of the Vote by £9,181, being the net cost of training Naval cadets on board H.M.S. Britannia.

Staff Capt. Sir Alfred Balliston, upon whom the honour of knighthood was recently conferred, on his retirement from the Navy, received on June 1 a letter from Major-Gen. Sir Henry Ponsonby, K.C.B., stating that he was commanded by her Majesty to send him a cup "as a present from the Queen, in remembrance of the many years during which you have faithfully and zealously served her Majesty on board the Royal yachts." The cup, a silver one, 11 in. high, was in an oak case lined with velvet and silk, and bears the following inscription:—"Presented by Queen Victoria to Staff Capt. Sir Alfred Balliston, in remembrance of his services for 34 years in the Royal yachts. 1883." On the other side is the Royal monogram, surmounted by the crown.

The Admiralty are about to make a clearance of a number of worn-out and useless unarmoured ships-of-war at Portsmouth, which simply serve to swell the dimensions of "Rotten Row," and, in spite of the activity of the water police and the metropolitan police, to encourage piratical raids from the shore. In addition to the craft previously mentioned, their Lordships have ordered the Hunter, Ringdove, Salamander, Spiteful, and Thrasher to be sold out of the service. The Local Government Board are also to be invited to purchase the Donegal, and convert her into a hospital. The stores and fittings on board the vessels will remain the property of the Government.

NAVAL NOTES.

Admiral of the Fleet Hon. Sir H. Keppel, G.C.B., will preside at the next meeting of the Royal Naval Club of 1765, on the 12th inst., when the Prince of Wales will be the guest.

The Frolic, having undergone a thorough repair at Sheerness Dockyard, was inspected on Saturday last by the officers of the Medway Steam Reserve, and reported as being ready for the pendant.

The Goshawk is being brought forward for service on the Australian station at Sheerness Dockyard. Her engines were tested in the steam basin on Saturday last, and the result proved very satisfactory.

The Calypso, 16, steel corvette, was launched from Chatham Dockyard on Thursday afternoon. The Calypso is constructed of steel, but has a wood sheathing. She is fitted with engines of 3,000 horse-power, which will give her an estimated speed of 13¾ knots an hour. Her extreme length between perpendiculars is 235 ft., and her extreme breadth 44 ft. 6 in. Her draught of water forward will be 17 ft. 5 in.; aft, 19 ft. 11 in.; the mean draught being 18 ft. 8 in. She is built to carry 550 tons of coal, but her ordinary complement will be 320 tons. Her crew will number 280, all told. The engines and boilers of the vessel are protected by a steel deck below the load-water line 1½ in. thick. The following will form the armament of the vessel:—12 5-in. breech-loading rifled guns, for broadside use; four 6-in. guns carried on sponsons, to fire right ahead or astern, as well as broadside; two Nordenfelt guns, two Gatling guns, and one 9-pounder and one 7-pounder gun for boat service. She will also be fitted with torpedo apparatus, for torpedoes to be discharged from two ports above the load-line. The launch took place in the presence of some thousands of spectators, and was a perfect success. Among those present were Lord Alcester, Admiral T. Brandreth, Controller of the Navy, Admiral-Superintendent Watson, and the principal officers of the port and garrison. The christening ceremony was performed by Mrs. Watson. After the launch, Admiral and Mrs. Watson gave an "at home" at their official residence in the dockyard. The workmen were granted a half-holiday in celebration of the event.

The Emerald, which was recently paid off at Portsmouth on returning from Australia, is to be fitted after the manner of the Opal and other ships of the Gem class. She will be barque instead of ship rigged. The bilge keels are to be lengthened and broadened to prevent rolling, and the bow and stern guns are to be housed for sea passages, and placed further from the extremities than at present. The bow anchors are also to be placed about 5 ft. further aft.

When the Russian Aral Fleet was abolished a few weeks ago, the Government at St. Petersburg received with favour a proposal of a group of Moscow capitalists to take over the Fleet and dockyard at Kazale, and establish a regular steamboat service on the Syr Daria and Oxus. Gen. Tchernayeff, however, to whom the project has since been referred, does not approve of the scheme, seeing in the projected arrangements that hunger for annual subsidies which lies at the bottom of half the industrial enterprises in Russia. He has, therefore, expressed a strong opinion against it, and has urged that if no company can be found to work the navigation service at its own risk, the matter should be allowed to drop altogether.

ARMY NOTES.

The Cairo correspondent of the Standard telegraphs:—"Gen. Latouche and Mr. Vincent have resigned their commands in the Egyptian Police, and will leave as soon as Gen. Baker shall have replaced them, or modified the present system of administration. From the first, Gen. Baker has had numerous difficulties to contend with, owing to the hasty manner in which the work was commenced previous to his arrival; and the system of dualism, under which the English officers were perpetually brought into collision with the Egyptian Prefect, has for some time been working unsatisfactorily. It is probable that such changes will be made in the whole system as shall relieve both parties of this tension. Want of independence in action, and insufficiency of salary, are complained of by the two gentlemen who have resigned, and these are difficulties which, just at present, it is by no means easy to remedy."

"One of the Permanent Pensioners who have served their Country Twenty-one Years" would like to be informed by some competent authority what is likely to become of those of his class, as it is evident that all doors hitherto open to them to obtain a living are being gradually closed, the last step in this direction being the new Regulations of the Barrack Department. Our correspondent says:—"The class so long known as barrack serjeants, and which appointments have hitherto been filled by pensioner serjeants, are apparently to be abolished, and (like the Militia Staff) are in future to be filled by serjeants serving their Army engagements. The new regulation does not appear quite clear in reference to the pensioner serjeants serving in the above department who are not eligible to cancel their pensions, and go back on their Army engagements, the limit entitling pensioners to do so is within two years discharged and under forty-five years of age. So what are those who are beyond this limit to understand? Will they continue under the old conditions, or does all further advantages to them cease from the date of the new circular? I understand the new regulations to apply only to those who are entitled to cancel their discharge, &c., and object to do so where it is laid down that they shall not make any further increase. Still, it does not appear satisfactorily clear, and I think, in justice to a worthy class of old serjeants, it ought to be thoroughly clear. Some are of opinion that the next step will be to discharge all who are beyond the above limit. I trust not, as that would be a very serious matter. There are many, like myself, who have a very heavy family depending on them, and it is a well-known fact that a barrack-serjeant so situated has a difficulty to make ends meet, and that to endeavour to save a trifle towards a rainy day is a matter entirely out of the question, so that in the event of their being discharged, they would have no option but to become (with their families) chargeable to their parish. The limit for cancelling pension, &c., is drawn much too close. I for one should be pleased to take advantage of the new regulations, but unfortunately have been discharged over six years, and am over forty-six years of age; still I feel I have fifteen or twenty good years' work in me yet, and regret I am debarred from participating in the new regulations. I think to have done full justice to all pensioners serving as barrack-serjeants, option ought to be given up to the age of 50 years. Perhaps the authorities may see fit to extend the limit."

The Press Association learns that the Duke of Connaught will not take up the command of the Meerut Division in Bengal until Nov. 1 next, when Lieut.-Gen. Sir R. Bright's term of command lapses.

A correspondent writes:—"Allow me to point out the injustice of giving medals, &c., to men of both services who were not actually engaged with the enemy under fire. I have seen several letters on the subject. One of them stated that an officer was engaged once—at Tel-el-Kebir—being under fire for the period of four minutes, and obtained four decorations, the (1) Egyptian medal and clasp; (2), Khedive's bronze star; (3), C.B.; (4), Medjidie or Osmanieh. Another letter stated that an officer had seen very hard work, and been in every action at Alexandria and Ismailia, except Tel-el-Kebir, and only obtained a medal with no clasp, and, of course, the bronze star; and it does seem strange that the latter officer should wear the same decorations as the men of Sir E. Wood's Brigade, who arrived after all serious business at Alexandria was ended, and who never saw a shot fired, and also men of her Majesty's ships of the Channel and Flying Squadrons who only lined the Canal, and also men of her Majesty's Indian troopships, who did nothing but eat, drink, and sleep. It seems hard that men should wear the same decoration who have not done the same work, and that the 'idlers' on board her Majesty's ships, &c., should be decorated the same as men wounded at Kassassin. The line ought to be drawn somewhere."

The Times say:—"The temporary arrangement by which the Home District and the Woolwich District, although commanded by two separate General officers, have but a single principal medical officer, does not give satisfaction. Owing to the numerous stations in the Home District, and the demands it makes upon an official's time, a separate principal medical officer is ordered for it. The system also of keeping the principal medical officer's office here detached at the distance of a mile from the General and staff offices is very inconvenient, leading to much useless correspondence and much trouble to individuals. All the offices of staff officers of a district should be close together, and where possible under one roof."

"Tailor" writes to us from India:—"Having observed in the newspapers that in future grey, undress uniform is proposed for the Army, I desire to impress upon the authorities the necessity of making the compensation to be given to officers and men somewhat more liberal than it was on the occasion of the last change. And in proof of this necessity, I give you my own case: Having had a kit of old uniform that would have lasted me three years with but little outlay, in April of this year the change became necessary, and I ordered a kit, which cost me at home £47 3s., which, with the cost of carriage and the loss of nearly 25 per cent. by exchange, may be put at about £50. I received from Government £15. The kit I ordered was on the smallest possible scale,—a doublet, trews, pantaloons, claymore, and belt. This will last me for five years, so that there is no question of my requiring new uniform at once, or shortly. The case of many officers who will be shortly be turned out by the age clauses of the present regulations will doubtless be considered in view of the proposed change and its consequent allowance."

ENDOWMENT FUND.

CORPS OF COMMISSIONAIRES.

THE Committee of the Endowment Fund, Corps of Commissionaires, beg to announce the receipt from Major-General Cameron, C.B., Commanding the Northern District, of £500 (five hundred pounds), being the first instalment of donations received, principally from Militia, Yeomanry, and Volunteer Regiments stationed within his command, to be specially applied for the endowment of such officers as may be placed in charge of divisions of the Corps within the Northern District.

The Committee trust that the example they have the pleasure to notify will be largely imitated in other parts of England. It will take a capital sum of £2,500 to secure an annual income of £100 (half the salary of an officer in charge of an out-quarter district), and on the receipt of such an amount they will be glad to sanction the appointment of an additional officer of the Staff.

The following proposed districts are the most important:—The Yorkshire, including Bradford, Leeds, Halifax, Huddersfield, Sheffield, and York; the Midland District, including Birmingham, Derby, Leicester, and Nottingham, where a Division has already been formed; and the Western, including Bath, Bristol, Cheltenham, Gloucester, &c. In all these places Divisions of the Corps will be established as soon as the Committee are provided with sufficient funds to pay a district officer.

Independently of the expense of officers, the cost of each Division may be roughly estimated at £200 (two hundred pounds) per annum. This latter, and, in fact, every expense, except the officers' salaries (paid by the Endowment Fund), is defrayed by the men themselves, who are thus performing a great service to the State as well as a duty to their own families.

The following statement shows the financial position of the Endowment Fund up to March 31, 1883, but in addition to this sum invested at 4¼ per cent., and producing about £870, there is an additional income from the Times Crimean Fund of nearly £300, and from annual subscriptions of £360; being a total from all sources of £1,530.

Any annual deficit in the current expenditure has to be met by drawing upon the capital account, and as in the past year no less than £300 has been taken from the casual donations received during this period, the Committee are most anxious to see an equilibrium between the current income and expenditure.

Divisions are established in Belfast, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Liverpool, Manchester, and Nottingham. At all these centres, as well as at the Head-quarters of the Corps, every information respecting the Institution may be obtained.

Subscriptions may be paid through any of the Officers of the above Divisions, or to Messrs. Cox and Co., Army Agents, Craig's Court, Charing Cross, London.

Subscribers living within the limits of the Northern Command may forward their remittances to Major-General Cameron, C.B., commanding the District.

Regimental donations to the Officers' Endowment Fund are by the fundamental rules of the Institution restricted to the officers of the corps subscribing, and are not received from non-commissioned officers or privates of the same.

All private donors are requested to forward their subscriptions in their individual capacity.

Non-commissioned officers coming direct from the Staff of Militia, Yeomanry, or Volunteer Regiments, who have qualified as Perpetual Governors of the Institution, can join the Corps between the ages of 43 and 48 without paying the usual extra fees for over age.

Statement showing from what sources the Donations and Subscriptions to the Endowment Fund of the Corps have been derived from its commencement in March, 1864, to March 31, 1883:—

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—THE FEMALE'S FRIEND.—So soon as the human functions are disordered, they should be rectified. It is a hopeless delusion to leave the malady to its own course. A few appropriate doses of Holloway's Pills at particular periods will prevent many a serious illness. They arrest all morbid influences, and prevent disease from extending and affecting more distant organs. Their primary action is upon the blood, stomach, liver, kidneys, and abdominal or pelvic viscera. Their secondary action strengthens the nervous centres. No drug can be at once so harmless, yet so antagonistic to disorders affecting the female sex. The most perfect reliance may be placed upon their purifying, regulating, and renovating virtues. They may be safely taken by females of all ages.

2|- TEA OF EXTRAORDINARY QUALITY,

As Supplied to Dukes, Earls, Barons, and the County Families of England.

THE unprecedented depression in the Tea Market now enables COOPER COOPER and CO. to offer such value in Tea as would, a few years ago, have been considered simply impossible, but is now a realised fact, for at

TWO SHILLINGS

A POUND,

COOPER COOPER and CO. are able to supply Tea of amazing strength and exquisite quality, while the choice kinds at Three Shillings a pound, which are coming to hand in lessening quantities year by year, COOPER COOPER and CO. have the greatest difficulty, after ransacking the markets of China and India, in procuring in sufficient quantities for their consumption. These choice and selected Teas COOPER COOPER and CO. have the honour to supply to many Foreign Princes, Potentates, Ambassadors, &c.

THE enormous success—without competitors and with no rivals—which has attended the sale of COOPER COOPER and CO.'s Teas is perhaps unparalleled in the annals of this or any other trade, and can only be accounted for by the way in which their business has been conducted, which has gained the patronage of all classes. COOPER COOPER and CO. number among their customers Princes, Dukes, Earls, Barons—in fact, a large per-centage of the entire Peerage—Church dignitaries of every grade, and ministers of all denominations, County Families from every county in Great Britain, and from all classes of the community. COOPER COOPER and CO. are also shipping their Teas every day to foreign parts. Paris would appear to draw its supplies from COOPER COOPER and CO.'s Stores, and in almost every large city, and especially in the seaport towns of Europe, Asia, Africa, and America—in fact, to the very ends of the earth—COOPER COOPER and CO.'s Teas and COOPER COOPER and CO.'s name are known.

COOPER COOPER and CO. have their own Agents in China and India, and are consequently able to sell their Tea at a price which is actually under that which wholesale merchants, brokers, &c., charge to ordinary dealers. They are enabled to do this as they have not the expense of travellers, and no bad debts to provide for, their terms being strictly for nett cash before delivery. They also save an immense amount by keeping no horses and vans—many houses having from 20 to 100 horses, vans, and two men to each, to deliver, sometimes, half-a-pound of tea miles and miles away, this overwhelming expense having all to come out of the quality of the Tea.

COOPER COOPER and CO. have, in fact, no expense but indispensable rent and labour, which in consequence of still-increasing business, amount only to a fraction on the price of the Tea they sell.

COOPER COOPER and CO. may mention that they include among the regular buyers of their Tea a great many London Tea Brokers, from the simple fact that it can be purchased cheaper and better from them than from the importers themselves.

COOPER COOPER and CO. sell their Teas for ready money only. They have thus no provision to make for bad or doubtful debts.

AND now a word about this year's crop. It is hardly satisfactory on the whole, but some of the choice crops secured by COOPER COOPER and CO. are simply delicious, COOPER COOPER and CO. are still enabled to sell the very best at Three Shillings a pound, and it is veritably a marvel of goodness—a "thing of beauty" and "a joy for ever." But the most astonishing thing of modern times is the Tea at Two Shillings a pound which COOPER COOPER and CO. are now selling. The rich and wealthy buy this Tea. Ladies drink it in their boudoirs and at their early drums, and, as one of our country patrons writes, "It is lovely."

COOPER COOPER and CO. may add that Indian Tea is becoming day by day a greater favourite among the best judges, and this year's crop has been prepared with greater care than ever. It is strong, pungent, with most agreeable flavour, and the better it is known, the more it will be liked. The Tea is 3s a lb., for the best.

COOPER COOPER and CO. charge threepence a package (of any size) for delivering their Teas at any of the Railway Stations in London, or any place within the limits of the London Parcels' Delivery Co., thus putting all on an equality; those who send for their tea, and those who require it sent.

COOPER COOPER and CO. do not pay railway carriage, but are willing to compound for the same on receiving the sum of 6d. in addition to the price of the Tea, to any Railway Station in England, on quantities of the value of £2 and upwards. Families residing in the country can thus, by clubbing together, have their Tea sent almost carriage free, as well as save about 9d a lb. in the cost.

Surgeon T. Osburne, A.M.D., and Quartermaster and Hon. Captain L. Gorman, A.H.C., are struck off the strength of the Army in Egypt from 10th inst. Surgeon J. S. Forrester, A.M.D., proceeds to England at his own expense, on reduction of establishment. Surgeon W. H. Lewis, A.M.D., is transferred from Alexandria to Cairo, for duty.

The detachment of Royal Highlanders at Ismailia moved to Port Said on Monday, the 28th ult.

Major Hutton, late Assistant-Military-Secretary to Sir A. Alison, left for England per French mail steamer on Tuesday, the 29th ult.

Lieutenant the Hon. G. A. Anson, U-1, R.A., has been appointed to G Battery, R.H.A., vice C. S. B. Parsons, seconded.

Lieutenant-General F. C. A. Stephenson arrived in Egypt on the 24th ult., and assumed command of the troops from that date. Lieutenant-Colonel F. L. Campbell, Scots Guards, is his Assistant-Military Secretary, and Lieutenants F. W. Romilly and R. Cutlar Fergusson, Scots Guards, his Aides-de-Camp.

The s.s. Calabria took home the following officers:—Lieutenant-Colonel Coghill, C.B., 19th Hussars, in command; Lieutenant Sir G. Thomas, Bart., R.H.A.; Surgeon-Majors Warren and Tanner; Surgeons Miller, Hubbard, Rowney, and O'Keefe, A.M.D., on reduction of establishment; Veterinary-Surgeon Evans, A.V.D., duty with Commissariat and Transport Corps; Captain Mortimer, A.P.D., invalided, all for England. Further, the following details:—36 for England, 15 for Malta, and 27 for Gibraltar.

Her Majesty's Birthday was celebrated with the customary honours on Thursday, the 24th ult. A Royal salute of 21 guns was fired from the citadel at noon, and by 5 o'clock the place—Mehemet Ali at the foot of the Mokhattam Hills—was surrounded by several thousands of inhabitants, representing all classes, nationalities, and creeds. A little before 6 the different regiments appeared on the ground from their several barracks, and quickly took up their positions. Major-General Graham, in the absence of the General Commanding, who had that day arrived at Alexandria, took up his place at the saluting-post, and immediately afterwards the sound of the Egyptian National Anthem announced that his Highness the Khedive had arrived. His carriage was drawn up immediately by the side of the General, from whence, surrounded by his Ministers, he watched the proceedings with the greatest interest, rising from his seat when the British National Anthem was played. The 1st Brigade was under the command of Brigadier-General Arbuthnot, and the second under that of Colonel Leith, C.B., Cameron Highlanders. The colours of the 42nd were trooped, after which three ringing cheers were given for the Queen, and the troops marched past in review order.

Did you ever hear of the Bosphore Egyptien? It is not a geographical expression; it is the title of a small sheet of paper which is printed here, and styles itself a "journal." It has a "Directeur Politique"—tremendous man!—"P. Giraud, Redacteur-en-Chef," and a "Directeur Administratif," who is no less a person than "J. Serrière," a printer in Cairo, who is also "propriétaire gérant." This organ is good enough to protect the interests of France in these parts, and it must be an inexpressible comfort and support to the troubled Government of M. Grévy to hear from the banks of the Nile the sympathetic cries of "P. Giraud" and the enthusiastic hurras of "J. Serrière," and to know that there is a watchful, if somewhat noisy and ill-conditioned, poodle on guard over French interests at Cairo, and everywhere else. It somewhat detracts from the value of the moral value of P. Giraud's support that he seems incapable of writing the truth, but that defect constitutes a source of inexhaustible amusement for the readers of the journal, and it is the only sort of compensation they can get out of it for their piastre. The Bosphore of to-day, May 26, opens with a vigorous article, in which "Giraud" orders France not to attend to interested protestations against her action in Madagascar, and assures her that "all Europe, except two or three Powers" (such as Germany and England perhaps?) "applauds her civilising and beneficent work" among the Hovas and Malgashes. "Giraud" does not hesitate to appeal to the "Treaties of 1815" (which would, one might suppose, be a very disagreeable authority for his Chauvinistic citizenship to refer to) as the formally established foundation recognised by Europe of "exclusive rights, never since denied, in Madagascar!" "a territory which has been considered French since the end of the reign of Louis XIII." (!) With superb impudence, M. Giraud goes on to assert that English agents—Protestant Missionaries—making the most of the wound inflicted on France in 1871, effected in Madagascar "what they tried to do in Tunis, and like the Jew Levy of La Goulette, set about to ruin French influence;" and then, apparently under the idea that Sir S. Baker and Colonel Gordon were Protestant Missionaries, with as much ignorance as falsehood remarks that they came to Egypt for the repression of slavery or for scientific discovery, and found themselves, one fine day, Governors-General, with enormous powers. "Ces agents qui n'ont aucune position officielle au début," &c. Now, surely "Giraud" must know that "Baker" was specially selected by the Khedive at the time to put down slavery in the Soudan, and went there ad hoc, with those very considerable powers—the rank of Pasha and the position of Governor-General. He must be aware that "Gordon" was specially sought out in Europe, and begged by the Khedive to proceed with similar powers and in a similar capacity to the same region for the same purpose. But why drag them in? What had they to do with the ruin of French influence in Egypt? The English agents who ruined French influence in Egypt were the Ministers in Paris who ordered Admiral Conrad to steam gracefully out of Alexandria Harbour on July 11, 1882, and the Government of France, which refused the appeal made to them by England to co-operate with us in the suppression of Arabi's rebellion. But these Missionaries, it appears were so indefatigable that the situation in Tananarivo was no longer tenable for French residents since last January, and very late in the day "la parole est donnée au canon," which was mute in Egypt. But the eagle eye of Giraud, which ranges all over the world, and detects from Madagascar, Tunis, and the Soudan every secret machination of "la propagande Britannique," is not the less observant of the miserable "defectuosities" of the British race near at hand, and in the number which contains the masterly article of the political director there is a severe analysis of the review at Cairo on the Queen's Birthday. The Khedive said it was the most beautiful military spectacle he had ever seen. There were other and more experienced critics who said that it was a very successful review. Giraud, however, thinks differently. "The movements were slow," he says, "the concentration pitiable; it needed the English Staff one hour and three-quarters to collect and form in column their 4,000 soldiers. The cavalry arrived the first—fine uniforms, no discipline—the ranks were indifferently of four, or three, or two." (!) (What do you say to that, Colonel Coghill, or whoever you are? Probably the critic confounded the officers and the men). "The men spoke and laughed by the side of their officers, who paid no attention to them." The Artillery are not praised. Then come the Infantry, "which was remarkable for its bad marching, and its unsoldierly uniform, and by the inattention of the men to the step." The "Higlanders" were alone a "little distinguished. Their three battalions made a fair show, and marched like soldiers; and, indeed, every one knows that in the foreign Army of Occupation, it is only the Scotch who have gained some sympathy and some popularity among the natives" (especially at Tel-el-Kebir)! From such specimens you may judge of the nature of the current which flows through the limited channels of Le Bosphore Egyptien.

(FROM AN OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENT.)

On Monday next, the summer drill season will commence in earnest, and continue till the end of August. During the months of July and August, manœuvres on a large scale are proposed. No definite programme has yet been laid down. Owing to the races at Ascot, little has been done during the week. Musketry was suspended on Tuesday and Wednesday, and permission given to officers and men to attend the races. Many availed themselves of this privilege, Ascot Heath being within easy distance of the Camp. On Monday last, the Infantry battalions were formed up in columns of brigades, on Long Hill (in the vicinity of the Long Valley), at 6 a.m., for the purpose of practising the formations and dispositions for attack, in accordance with instructions which were circulated. The parade had been ordered for 10 a.m., but the weather being very warm, and every signs of it continuing so, Sir Daniel, who is ever watchful in these matters, and never unnecessarily fatigues those under his command, issued a supplementary order on Sunday afternoon for the troops to form up at the earlier hour, each man to have a cup of coffee before starting. The morning proved extremely cool and pleasant, and the troops were exercised for two hours, apparently much to the satisfaction of the General commanding, who was particularly pleased by the manner in which the troops were handled by their brigadiers and battalion commanders. The troops returned to quarters about 8.30 with good appetites for breakfast, and much better satisfied than if they had been exercised during the heat of the day. Another unfortunate serjeants'-mess caterer has been degraded, and his prospects in the Army irretrievably ruined. A farrier-serjeant of the 4th Brigade, R.A., has been tried by district court-martial on two charges,—first, for embezzling mess moneys; second, for attempting to commit suicide. Finding, guilty; sentence, to be reduced to the ranks, to be placed under stoppages to make good £21, and to be imprisoned, with hard labour, for six months. The General Commanding, in consideration of the prisoner's hitherto blameless service of 16 years, remitted three months of the imprisonment. It is evident that serjeants' messes, as at present managed, are a fertile source of crime. The 87th Royal Irish Fusiliers and 31st East Surrey Regiment are being supplied with the new valise equipment. Every effort is being made to induce men of the Militia at present up for training to enlist in the Regular Forces, but hitherto with but little success. There is no disguising the fact that service in the Army is far from popular at the present time. The fifth annual Army Rifle Meeting will take place at the Cæsar's Camp ranges, Aldershot, on July 26, 27, and 28 next, when prizes to the value of £500 will be shot for. The South Middlesex Militia (5th Royal Fusiliers), 750 strong, and the 1st Surrey Militia (3rd East Surrey Regiment), 700 strong, arrived for annual training on Monday. The 2nd Middlesex Militia (7th King's Royal Rifle Corps), 800 strong, arrived on Monday and Tuesday. This battalion is encamped on Swan Inn plateau, and attached to the 3rd Brigade. The Wexford Militia (3rd Royal Irish Regiment), 770 strong, ex Jumna, from Kingstown, will arrive to-day (Saturday), and will be encamped on Church plateau, and attached to the 3rd Brigade. The Royal South Down Militia (5th Royal Irish Rifles), 680 strong, from Belfast, will arrive at the Camp probably to-day (Saturday), and will be encamped on Rushmoor, and attached to the 1st Brigade. The Oxford Militia (4th Oxfordshire L.I.), 650 strong, from Oxford, will arrive on Monday next, and will be encamped on North Cove Hill plateau, and attached to the 3rd Brigade. The company of the 85th King's (Shropshire Light Infantry) so long on detachment at Portland rejoined head-quarters yesterday (Friday). The addition of eight battalions to the command—two of Regulars and six of Militia—brings up the effective strength of the Division to about 14,000, something very unusual for Aldershot. Quartermaster J. Horn, being under orders for Cork, has handed over the Adjutancy of the Depôt and Training School to Quartermaster J. Buckley. Major R. H. L. Anstruther, Rifle Brigade, at present Garrison Instructor, will vacate that appointment in August next, and proceed to Halifax, to take up his new appointment on the Staff of Lieutenant-General Lord A. G. Russell, C.B., commanding in Canada. Surgeon-Major C. F. Pollock, M.B., has been ordered to Aldershot, for duty. The War Game Committee appointed in March last, under instructions from the Horse Guards, of which Major-General Willis, C.B., is president, will assemble on Monday next, in the Garrison Instructor's Office, South Camp, to proceed with their revision of the rules for playing the game, the immediate matter for consideration being the system of rudimentary tactical instruction, as carried out on the modelled ground in the Garrison Instructor's Offices. It was promulgated in the command on Thursday, in the case of Private Richardson, 84th Regiment, who was tried in April last for fraudulent enlistment, that her Majesty the Queen, in consideration of the prisoner's gallant and good conduct while on active service in Egypt, has been pleased to remit the unexpired portion of the imprisonment of 56 days awarded. A Battery, 1st Brigade, R.A.—3 officers, 151 men, and 84 horses—will arrive from Shorncliffe on the 16th inst. T Battery, 1st Brigade, R.A., will march on the 13th inst., en route to Okehampton, proceeding thence, on completion of gun-practice, to Shorncliffe, there to be stationed.

DRINK IN THE ARMY.—THE HOUSEHOLD CAVALRY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—Will you give me leave to point out that the whole contention of the advocates of total abstinence amongst soldiers, in the recent debate on the Army in the House of Commons, really went the whole length of making that long-suffering and much-tortured thing "temperance" to mean mere teetotalism? Untold mischief is after this sort done to a cause which all right-thinking men respect, and which therefore ought not thus incontinently to be put in peril, when drunkenness and moderation are thus cursed and linked together as the great woe; whilst of the two evils, moderation is pronounced to be the greater sin. "Moderation is the fons et origo of drunkenness," said one of the leading oligarchs of the teapot, not long ago. Soldiers, it seems, must be reckoned one of two things,—teetotallers or drunkards. There is no "option," local or otherwise, in the matter. I assert, I am ready to prove, that they need be neither. It is, moreover, with some specific knowledge of soldiers as they really are, that against this misleading and pernicious reasoning I now ask your leave to protest. I have been intimately associated here with the three Regiments of Household Cavalry for just ten years. I esteem them highly, because I know them well. That which was said on unimpeachable authority of their admirable conduct in Alexandria and Cairo is every bit as true of them in London and Windsor. They are foremost amongst the best-behaved soldiers in the world; there is nothing to beat them. And yet they take no harm, although they take no pledge. They are in number about 1,200, and I do not know of a dozen of that number who pretend to be teetotallers. I do not believe that there are even six. That is to say, the flower of the British Army is temperate, and is not teetotal. These very simple figures are surely very strong and suggestive facts. There is, of course, Sir, no known remedy, humanly speaking, for the confirmed drunkard of any class, who, unhappily, takes too kindly to every stimulant save that of self-respect, but rigorous total abstinence. I, therefore, ask to claim for our soldiers of the Household Cavalry—Gentlemen of the Bodyguard—that theirs is, after all, the worthiest standard, inasmuch as, under all circumstances and conditions, home and foreign, they have made it clear in their own ranks that moderation, and consequently self-respect, are really the highest forms of true temperance.—I am, &c.,

Chaplain to the Household Troops at Windsor.

SIR,—Having seen in your columns at different times letters from officers on behalf of the above object, I rely on your well-known sympathy with such cases to take the liberty, as its promoter, to offer a few words of explanation as to its origin, about which I cannot but think some misunderstanding has caused the material expression of sympathy to fall short of what his own old-fashioned ideas of esprit de corps and reverence for the memories that won such glories for the British Army led them to expect. Since 1814, a cemetery, in which were interred the officers of the Guards who fell before Bayonne, April 14, 1814, has existed. Since 1858, the writer has taken part with H.M.'s Consul in different repairs to the same; in 1875, further repairs were needed, and whilst seeking subscriptions, in combination with H.M.'s Vice-Consul, Miss Holburne, of Bath, on hearing of the same, forwarded £10 for immediate wants, and expressed a desire to do something for the memory of a brother, Capt. Holburne, 3rd Guards, supposed to be buried there. Finding, however, that his remains lay really with those of three brother-officers, buried on another spot, unenclosed and neglected, she honoured the writer with a request to do all possible to purchase or rent this ground, and, after enclosing the same and erecting a handsome obelisk to her brother's memory, and renewing the tombs of his brother-officers, she, with the consent of the Guards, totally restored the old cemetery, and invested £420 in Consols for the perpetual maintenance of the two, naming a friend in England, the chaplain pro tem. of Biarritz, and the writer, as trustees for that purpose. It was known all this time that numerous grave-marks to other members of the Army existed, though fast disappearing, throughout the line of action of the campaign, some few of which had, by the care of the late Emperor Napoleon III., been collected at Toulouse, and thus a feeling to do impartial justice to all was roused; and, seeing that the erection of a new English church offered the opportunity of commemorating all alike in the country where they fell, and on ground the property of our community, the idea of the memorial was started in 1876. Please remark the date. The adhesions were not at the first such as might have been expected, and since then the wars in South Africa, Afghanistan, and Egypt have occurred, which militated against the memorial, and more recently the well-justified appeal for the Crimean graves. Spite of all that, Biarritz was first in the field, and it can only be that some idea of its being a purely sentimental notion, without any consideration as to the doings at the Guards cemetery as to its origin, warred against it, and that hindered the obtaining the requisite funds. It will be seen that comparatively few regiments concerned came forward early, either with information or subscriptions, the Guards and Highland regiment and the 20th forming exceptions. The greatest pains meanwhile were taken to complete the work correctly and with beauty worthy the cause, and no hesitation was felt at accepting the responsibility in defraying the cost, trusting that the old English feeling would at last prevail. As a last attempt to prove this, no fewer than 600 circular letters (printed at private cost, perforce, as personal writing was out of the question) have just been issued, not only to all regiments directly interested, but to the whole of the forces, Regular and Auxiliary, for aid. The amount required from each battalion to make up the £330 wanting is so trifling, it was hoped an immediate response would be the result, especially since any surplus was to be applied to some other military institution. It is now a fortnight since the first appeal went out, and two regiments have responded only. I therefore make so free, though a civilian, to apply to the publicity of your columns to aid and stimulate the cause. The example of the old officers of the 51st, the result of the report of one of their number—an eye-witness to the work—ought to have some effect; and though there is some cause for discouragement, hopes are still entertained. I enclose the last report, and the testimony of eye-witnesses, in case you, Sir, may find time and inclination to add a word in favour of a work erected to the memory of those who did so much to sustain the glory of British arms, and to show to future generations what could be done under a system which, in spite of all it has effected, has fallen in disfavour with the present reforming age. The new system, be it remarked, seems to be totally unfitted for any nation which has colonial possessions and a voluntary system. As Germans themselves say, it is only fitted for their own national position, where all the fighting that may occur must either be on their own dung-hill, or in the immediate neighbourhood. But I must not intrude too much on your valuable space, and if you indulgently insert as much of this letter and of the accompanying matter as you deem proper, I shall only be too grateful, and feel sure the result cannot but aid the cause. I am old enough to remember in my childhood all the enthusiasm still remaining for the deeds of those times, which, without detracting from more modern achievements, were certainly the most important as to general results in Europe of the century. Begging to be forgiven the liberty I take, as a desperate resource, in thus appealing to you, allow me to remain, your obedient servant,

PHILIP A. HURT,
Trustee for Miss Holburne's Fund for the Guards'
Cemeteries, St. Étienne, Bayonne.

P.S.—As proof of the bonâ fide nature of the present application to you, I may appeal to some of the names on the list as proofs of the personal and individual interest that has been excited, and the small sum still wanted from each battalion can surely be no injury to other causes. Their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales and Duke of Connaught both subscribed to myself personally on the spot, but before the completion of the work.

SOME MAGAZINES.

The almost monthly issue of either an entirely new magazine, or of one formed on the lines with which we have long since become familiar, is so general that fair attention is oftentimes denied to what deserves a much better reception. The publication for the present month is an entirely new production. It is not musically named To-Day, but the editor seems inclined to side with some one who has inquired, "What's in a name?" All he hopes to do is to help to instruct the public mind, and introduce to its notice sufficiently genuine material to justify a verdict of approbation. So far, the editor of To-Day has abundantly shown that he is not a novice, but that he has formed a very sound idea of the kind of literature best calculated to prove attractive. In the present number we find considerably over two hundred closely-printed pages, which treat of a variety of matters, many of them with marked ability. "A Story of To-Day" tells something in Wilkie Collins's style of a dark deed that was done in "Smith Street." This is a sort of pabulum which will allure a large section of youthful readers, provided the facts are handled with skill and discretion. Amongst the miscellaneous articles, "Keats and Shelley" deserves marked attention. In a remarkably interesting paper, entitled, "Old England and Old Russia," the reader will find some strange facts narrated, not the least of which being a full description of Russian life and a Russian coronation as they took place 300 years ago. This article is exceedingly instructive, and may be read with advantage by very many whose ideas about Russia are somewhat misty. It is not from want of inclination, but from want of space, that we must leave unnoticed for the present no small amount of attractive reading.

In the June number of Belgravia, Mr. Wilkie Collins's powerfully-written serial is concluded. "Heart and Science" is a work of great merit, one that affords the most convincing proof that the author of "The Woman in White" has not lost one whit of his original powers. It has been objected that he "repeats himself" in several of his works, and that, therefore, the characters are not original. Be it so. If Mr. Wilkie Collins can continue to produce such works as "Heart and Science," it is of little consequence. His dramatic power in the construction of plot and his consummate skill in the delineation of character continue as fresh as ever. We should like, just for experiment's sake, to let some 'prentice hand test his power in sketching such characters as those of "Zoo" and "Bengulia."

Messrs. George Routledge and Son are publishing, in a remarkably neat form, "Robinson's Country Series," which contain a great deal of useful matter connected with the garden, the greenhouse, and the orchard. For example, "The Apple in the Orchard and Garden," "The Potato in the Farm and Garden," "Fruit-culture for Profit." The books which form this series are unquestionably attractive and equally so instructive.

The officers lately taking part in the war in Afghanistan dined together at the Grosvenor Gallery on Saturday evening. Lieut.-Gen. Sir F. Maude, K.C.B., V.C., presided, Col. Gerard, C.B., occupying the vice-chair. There were present:—Sir Lepel H. Griffin and Sir B. Russell, K.C.B.; Major-Gens. Sir C. Arbuthnot, K.C.B., Sir J. Hills, K.C.B., V.C., Hitchings, C.B., A. H. Lindsay, C.B., and Sir C. H. Palliser, K.C.B.; Brigdr.-Gen. S. Edwards; Cols. E. Chapman, R.A., C.B., and Fryer, C.B.; Lieut.-Cols. A. Conolly, C. W. Gorham, R.A., H. M. Pratt, R.A., Burnley Campbell, and J. Jopp; Majors Viscount Melgund, E. Harvey, R.E., and H. V. Coward, R.A.; Capt. R. Pole-Carew (Coldstream Guards); Lieut. G. Daly; Messrs. B. E. W. Copland Crawford (60th Rifles), Robert Boteler, J. Hunter (9th Lancers), F. H. Cunningham, and Surg.-Major Markey.

"W." considers the question mooted in our issue of May 12 by "One Interested" is more important than would seem at first sight. He says:—"There are in some of the new 'territorial' regiments, officers who, having entered the service before 1873, and not having been promoted since June 30, 1881, are, until 1888, entitled to battalion promotion, in contra-distinction to the liability to linking rules, and to territorial-regimental promotion to which those officers, who come under those two categories, are respectively subject, and to part of which, at least, all officers will be subject after 1888. In the territorial regiment to which I have referred for illustration, the captains of one battalion are in the peculiar state described in the above paragraph, and are all senior, to the number of four, to the senior captains of the other battalion, both in service and commission. These latter officers are virtually at present under the battalion rule as regards promotion, which they have the prospect of obtaining immediately, and thus in 1888 will be in a fixed superior position for regimental promotion to the detriment of the officers senior to them in the service, but junior on the regimental list. I would, however, suggest that perhaps 'One Interested' would find upon enquiry, that in cases in which an officer considerably senior would be passed over, and thus be put in a worse position in 1888, when battalion promotion will cease for everybody, that the step in the other battalion is generally offered for his voluntary acceptance, so that we shall not be in a necessarily inferior position in 1888, when regimental promotion becomes obligatory upon all infantry officers. If I am not correct in assuming that such offers have actually been made in similar cases, I dare say that the acceptation of the suggestion may be supported by others interested. The importance of the question, and the detail necessary for explanation, as well as the probable effect on the future prospects of the juniors in the same battalion to those who are more immediately interested, must be my apology for the length of this letter."

SENIOR COMMANDERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—There is an old adage about the not over-rich Peter being robbed to satisfy the claims of his brother Paul, and it is generally used as a reproach—or, to say the least, a reflection—on the wisdom of any one employing such means. When, however, one sees that the present Admiralty have robbed the Senior Commanders of their long-since earned promotion, to give it to those who had the good-fortune to smell powder at Alexandria, it becomes not only a want of wisdom, but an act of cruel injustice. As a retired officer, I cannot be accused of any personal motive in speaking thus strongly, especially as I have personal friends both amongst the fortunate promoted, and those who have been unjustly left with sick hearts from hope deferred. Nor for a moment do I wish to underrate the services of those who at Alexandria gained their promotion; but surely, if special promotions are given, they should not be given at the expense of those who have served their country long and faithfully, and whose only fault is that they did not happen to be at a certain place at a certain time. I make no doubt that it will be said that the same is done in the Army; but the fact of special promotion in a regiment cannot be as prejudicial to others as where all are on a roster, as in the Navy. There the getting or not getting promotion in due course means either your future life is made, or you are actually put back, perhaps the chance of attaining flag rank cut from under your feet, and a wasted and embittered life the reward of half a lifetime's faithful service. The prizes of the Navy are not so many or so great, that a mere accident should be able to snatch them from those who have honestly earned them; and were it not for the dignity and devotion to discipline of that class of officers who never agitate, and for whom no one, either in or out of the House, seems to care, such glaring injustices would have long ere this have had to be remedied.—I am, &c., A RETIRED LOOKER-ON.

SUB-LIEUTENANTS, R.N.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—Could you inform me, through the medium of your widely-read paper, as to the prospects of promotion for the sub-lieutenants now at the top of the list? We are now nearly through the fifth month of the year, and there has been no batch of promotions from the Sub-Lieutenants' List. This is the only year since 1870 (13 years) in which there has not been a batch of promotions before June. Previous to 1878 there were always two, and often three, before that month. The prospects of the ordinary sub-lieutenant now seem to be getting worse and worse. It seems hard that all hope of getting on in the service should be crushed, before they reach the rank of lieutenant, with only a prospect of standing fast another 15 years in that exalted rank. To be left near the top of the list now means waiting on without hope for another six months. At the present rate of progression, the intervals will soon be twelve months. The average seniority of the first 20 sub-lieutenants now on the list is over four years and ten months. It was stated, at the time the promotions for Egypt were gazetted, that they would in no way interfere with the ordinary flow of promotion. What do we see? The unfortunate seniors guilty of the crime of not having been present at the bombardment of Alexandria not only passed over by the lucky ones who were, but left to cool their heels at the top of the list for another six months, and, as far as one can guess, likely to be another six.—I am, &c., STILL ASPIRANT.

"Abolished" writes:—"In firing at the 'figure' target, which is one of the practices which qualify a man for marksman, ten rounds are to be fired between 285 and 140 yards, i.e., between 285 and 240, between 240 and 180, and between 180 and 140; but it is not laid down how many rounds are to be fired between these distances; in other words, they have not been divided into three parts. Thus the captain of one company may allow his men to fire them in one two and two fours, while another may divide them into two threes and one four. Some captains, on the other hand, may only fire one round between 285 and 240, and the other nine rounds at the shorter distances. This will be very unfair to the marksmen of a battalion, some companies having a better chance than others of getting the requisite seven hits out of the ten."

"Miles" writes:—"I am told on very fair authority that out of 63 captains who went up for the last special examination in January, no less a number than 42 failed. I should like very much to know if such be the case. If what I am told is true, it is quite evident that the examiners hold a very different opinion of the capabilities of the British officer to H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge and Lord Wolseley. I look upon it as a question of theory versus practice. No doubt many of those 40 were among the number so often alluded to by Lord Wolseley in his speeches; if so, would it not be as well if he did a little more than praise them? Good service, I maintain, should rank quite as high as theory. Making officers of long service into schoolboys will deprive the Army of many a good officer, and the sooner successful praise overrides antagonistic theory the better."

"Dissatisfied Scribe" writes:—"Next to the pleasure of seeing one's name in the monthly Army List, comes that of reading something connected with our special duties, or our particular corps or department. How joyfully, then, must the paymasters' clerks of regimental districts have read the few touching lines near the end of the latest contribution to the official library:—'The fee of 1s. hitherto paid for filling up the enrolment parchment of a transfer to the Army Reserve is not admissible for a paymaster-serjeant or staff clerk after this.' There is the news in a nutshell. This is what the subordinates of the Army Pay Department have been waiting for. Not only are they to do the work hitherto done by the pension staff serjeant, but they are to do it for nothing."

"SAPO CARBONIS DETERGENS" is a physician's name for a remedy prescribed for the past quarter of a century for every variety of skin disease. The public have found that as a preventive of small-pox, scarlet fever, and measles, it is unequalled. See that the Latin name described above, and the words "WRIGHT, SOUTHWARK," are on each wrapper, and branded on each tablet, without which none is genuine.

EXTRA PAY AND ALLOWANCES TO SENIOR LIEUTENANTS, R.N.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—The First Lord of the Admiralty, in resisting the proposal to increase the pay of Senior Lieutenants, stated that the greater number of them were in receipt of extra pay as first, gunnery, torpedo, &c., and, although it was not actually said, still it was pretty strongly inferred, that those who arrived at senior rank on the bare 10s. a day were only themselves to blame. In speaking of senior lieutenants, I refer to those over eight years' seniority (popularly known as the "rope-yarn" majors), and who, in common justice, should be granted an increase of pay. Taking the ironclads of the Channel and Mediterranean, we find in the six ships composing the former there are 20 lieutenants over eight years, 10 of whom receive the bare 10s. In the seven ships in the Mediterranean there are 16 senior lieutenants, seven of whom get no extra pay. The Minotaur is the only ship whose senior lieutenants all get extras. The Sultan has three senior lieutenants, who get nothing but their pay. Now, these represent about the pick of the Service,—certainly not the failures. As an instance of the way senior men are jammed up together, the fourth lieutenant of the Téméraire has eight and a half years' seniority, and the fifth lieutenant of the Sultan over nine. We are told that we get the pay we entered for, but it must be remembered that when we entered, a lieutenant was promoted at the age of thirty-one, and then he went to the top of the list for promotion. Let us look at the top of the list of those now for promotion. I take it to be represented by Lieuts. Needham, Jolliffe, and Garbett, the two former in their seventeenth year,—what cruelty it is to tell them that "the average age of promotion to post-captain is thirty-nine"! They must be over thirty-seven. But the worst has yet to come; they were exactly two years sub-lieutenants,—soon we shall have men at the top of the list who will have four and a half years' junior time, and will be so much the more older. In fact, for the general run of Lieutenants of 1872-3-4, their chances of promotion are hopeless. At present, they are the strength of the service, and as they are working hard, with no future prospects, they ought to be paid for it. What makes the Lieutenants feel the hardship so much is that they are certain that neither the country nor Parliament would grudge it, if only the Admiralty would consent. In one thing Lord Northbrook was right, that for actual money the Lieutenants do not care; what they want is promotion, but that not being forthcoming. They feel entitled to some reward for their services; at present, they get neither one thing nor the other. Looking at the matter from a semi-comic view, the wear and tear of continual watch-keeping in sea and harbour is strongly shown by the great number of senior lieutenants who are bald. It is no joke to keep watch from the age of fourteen up to thirty-five, without a break.—I am, &c.,

ROPE-YARN MAJOR.

The Standard says:—"At the instance of the Postmaster-General, for the employment of men of the Army Reserve and pensioners of the Army for duty in the service of the new parcels post, the War-Office authorities have accorded their entire co-operation, and the invitation to men of both classes will at once be issued, by the distribution of posters to all post-offices in the United Kingdom and recruiting head-quarters. The rate of pay proposed will be at the rate of from 16s. to 18s. per week, in addition to their pension or reserve pay. The usual restrictions will be observed as to character. No man whose character on discharge or on pension was not good will be accepted. The Postmaster-General will consider all applications, and state to whom all such applications are to be made."

"Bullet" writes:—"There seems to be a pretty general acknowledgment that in the Army it would be undesirable to completely get rid of long-service men. At present the only means of remaining in the service is to become a non-commissioned officer. A great many men will not do so. It also seems that the present shooting of the Army is not what it should be. Now, it is impossible to make every man a good shot, despite the Musketry Regulations, which give the lie to themselves by allowing 'blind men' to exist in the service, and making provisions as to how they are to be dealt with. Would it be a good idea to keep men who are exceptionally good shots and of good character, who may wish to re-engage to complete 21 years? A leaven of old non-commissioned officers is not the only thing; old soldiers are a great consideration, and these two qualifications would ensure that the old soldiers were efficient soldiers, besides being a good example to their younger comrades."

The following general order has just been issued:—"Her Majesty has been graciously pleased to command that the Honourable Artillery Company shall, in consideration of its antiquity, take precedence next after the Regular Forces. The order of precedence of the Auxiliary Forces after the Honourable Artillery Company will be:—1, Militia; 2, Yeomanry; 3, Volunteers."

SPECTACLES v. BLINDNESS.—"Spectacles can only be perfectly adjusted by those having a thorough knowledge of the anatomy of the eye, combined with optical experience."—We have the highest medical authorities confirmed by daily experience, that imperfect glasses, together with the haphazard plan of selection generally employed by the mere vendor, is the cause of most cases of blindness and defective vision. Sir Julius Benedict writes:—"I have tried the principal opticians in London without success, but the spectacles you have adapted suit admirably. The clearness of your glasses as compared with others is really surprising." The Rev. Professor W. A. Hales, M.A. Cantab., 2 Minford Gardens, West Kensington Park, writes:—"The spectacles are perfect, and a most decided boon. I had occasion on Monday to write to Lord ——, and took the opportunity to mention your name and the wonderful power of your spectacles." Dr. Bird, Chelmsford, writes:—"I could not have believed it possible that my sight could have been so much improved and relieved at my age (82). I can now read the smallest type, although suffering from cataract on the right eye." Testimonials from Earl and Countess Lindsay; F. D. Dixon Hartland, Esq., M.P.; the Venerable Archdeacon Palmer, Clifton; Rev. Mother Abbess, St. Mary's Abbey, Mill Hill, Hendon; C. J. Alford, Esq., Gas Light and Coke Company, Horseferry Road, Westminster, &c. Mr. HENRY LAURANCE, F.S.S., Oculist Optician, 39 OLD BOND STREET, W. (late 3 Endsleigh Gardens, Euston Square), personally adapts his Improved Spectacles daily (Saturdays excepted), from 10 to 5. Special arrangements are made for invalids and others unable to wait on Mr. Laurance. Pamphlet, "Spectacles: their Use and Abuse," post free. City Branch, 6 Poultry, Cheapside.

Amusements.

The programme of the ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA has included during the week a variety of lyrical attractions. "Carmen," with Madame Pauline Lucca, was presented on Monday; "Mefistofele," with Madame Albani, on Tuesday; "Lohengrin" was given on Thursday; "Les Huguenots" on Friday; and "Il Trovatore" is to be repeated this (Saturday) evening. Next week, further opportunities will be afforded of hearing the new opera of "Gioconda," founded on Victor Hugo's play of "Angelo, Tyrant of Padua," of which an English version was given at the Haymarket Theatre about a quarter of a century since. The opera was originally produced at La Scala in 1876.

At the LYCEUM, Mr. Henry Irving has reproduced "The Lyons Mail," Mr. Charles Reade's effective version of the old French melodrama, first produced at the Paris Gaieté in 1850, and, after being adapted at the Princess's Theatre for Mr. Charles Kean in 1854, brought out in 1877 with so much success by Mr. Irving at his own establishment. The present revival once more exhibits Mr. Irving's skill in representing the dual characters of the murderer Dubosc and the innocent Lesurques, and in many respects the contrast of the double impersonation is now more strongly marked than before. Miss Ellen Terry strengthens the present cast by playing the subordinate character of Jeannette; Miss Millward develops much tenderness as Julia; Mr. Thomas Mead repeats his excellent embodiment of the elder Lesurques; Mr. Fernandez and Mr. Terriss are admirable as Choppard and Courriol; and Mr. Andrews makes prominent the small part of the boy Joliquet.

The GAIETY commenced, under the direction of M. L. Mayer, its annual season of French plays on Monday night with "Lili," a saucy vaudeville in three acts, by MM. Hennequin, Millaud, and Blum, first produced at the Variétés, Paris, in January last year. Mdlle. Judic resumes her original part, associated with M. Dupuis, M. Lassouche, and other members of the French Company. Many of the airs, composed by M. Hervé, have already become familiar to the music-halls of this country. In her variety of impersonations, ranging from youth to old age, Mdlle. Judic displayed to advantage her peculiar powers. The hilarious, if not strictly decorous, comedy of "Niniche" was acted on Wednesday night, and next week the company from the Gymnase take possession of the theatre. In the sixth and last week of the season, Madame Sarah Bernhardt is announced to appear in "Fédora," and some of her later impersonations.

"The Queen's Favourite," a clever adaptation by Mr. Sydney Grundy of Scribe's drama of "Le Verre d'Eau," produced at the Français in 1840, has provided Miss Geneviève Ward at the OLYMPIC with an effective character as the scheming Duchess of Marlborough in the reign of Queen Anne, a character to which she gives an artistic and vivacious rendering. Other parts are well filled by Mr. W. H. Vernon as the counter-plotting Lord Bolingbroke, Miss G. Kellogg as the vacillating Queen, and Miss Lucy Buckstone and Mr. Bindloss as the needful pair of young lovers.

With this week, Mr. Robert Buchanan's drama of "Storm-Beaten" will be withdrawn from the ADELPHI, and a new play by Mr. Wilkie Collins, in four acts and five tableaux, will be produced under the direction of Mr. Edgar Bruce, with the title of "Rank and Riches." Miss Lingard, Miss Myra Holmes, Mrs. Billington, Mr. Sugden, Mr. Alexander, and Mr. G. W. Anson sustain the prominent characters.

The STRAND THEATRE will be reopened this evening with Mr. E. Rose's adaptation of Mr. F. Anstey's popular novel of "Vice Versâ," and a burlesque by Mr. W. Warham, on "The Silver King" at the Princess's, imitatively named "Silver-Guilt."

Mr. John S. Clarke will occupy for a limited period the OPERA COMIQUE, appearing in his familiar embodiments of Major Wellington de Boots in "The Widow Hunt," and Timothy Brown in "My Neighbour's Wife."

The comic opera of "Estrella" was brought out on Wednesday at the FOLIES DRAMATIQUES. Mr. Parke is the contributor of the libretto, and Mr. Luscombe Searelle is the composer of the music. The reorganised company now includes Miss Constance Loseby, Miss Sallie Turner, Mdlle. Camille Dubois, and Messrs. W. S. Rising, Aynsley Cook, G. Temple, F. Desmond, and Philip Day.

At Mr. and Mrs. German Reed's entertainment at ST. GEORGE'S HALL, a new first part was provided on Wednesday night. The novelty is entitled "Treasure Trove," and Mr. Albert J. Caldecott has furnished some tuneful music to the smooth lyrics supplied by Mr. Arthur Law. The little vaudeville, cleverly supported by Miss Fanny Holland, Miss Marion Wardroper, Mr. Corney Grain, Mr. North Home, and Mr. Alfred Reed, met with a favourable reception, and most of the songs were encored. Mr. Corney Grain's divertingly satirical sketch called "Our Mess," supposed to be illustrative of military life at Aldershot, was afterwards repeated, amidst continuous roars of laughter. All our readers ought to visit St. George's Hall.

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL.—ITS GREAT VALUE AS A NUTRIENT FOR WEAKLY CHILDREN.—In cases of languid and imperfect nutrition often observed in children, the surprising efficacy of Dr. de Jongh's Oil is thus described by Dr. Edward Carey:—"It is in the diseases incidental to childhood, that mainly depend on the mal-assimilation of the food in the pale cachetic child, when the anxious practitioner has exhausted the whole range of alteratives and tonics, that Dr. de Jongh's Cod Liver Oil will come in and satisfy his most sanguine expectations. Where the powers of life are low, it affords nourishment to the body when none other can be borne; it furnishes the frame with fat in a truly wonderful manner; and administered as it is in Holland, to the delicate and puny child, who, though not considered ill, is in that state of impaired health which would favour the development of disease, its extraordinary effects will soon be visible, after having taken it for a short period, in a return to health and strength which were before unknown, and which will be accomplished by no other remedy with which we are acquainted." Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil is sold only in capsuled imperial half-pints, 2s 6d; pints, 4s 9d; quarts, 9s; with his stamp and signature and the signature of his sole consignees on the capsule and the label under wrapper, by all Chemists. Sole Consignees, Ansar, Harford, and Co., 77 Strand, London.

"One of the Eight Hundred" writes:—"Permit me, before the Egyptian Campaign becomes a thing of the past, to bring to notice a body of men who have entirely been left unrewarded for their services by the 'powers that be.' I refer to drafts of the Royal Irish Regt., Royal Irish Fusiliers, and Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, to the number of about 800, who embarked at Portsmouth on Sept. 4, 1882, on board the transport steamer Duke of Devonshire, and who were originally intended to have formed a reserve depôt at Alexandria. These drafts were composed chiefly of Army Reserve men, besides a few who had volunteered for active service with their regiments. They left England fully equipped for service in the field, and consequently had to make away with all their small kit, &c., for the loss of which they have not been compensated as other drafts who arrived in the country but a few hours before them have. On reaching Malta, the s.s. Duke of Devonshire received orders to proceed with all possible speed to the front of operations. Some little delay occurred in the Suez Canal owing to so much traffic, but Ismailia was reached and the drafts landed on the morning of Sept. 17. Here, under a scorching sun, and on burning sands, very hard duty had to be performed night and day, having only the bare sands to lie upon, and I therefore submit that these drafts endured greater hardships than many others who arrived days in advance of them. On Oct. 1 each draft joined its own regiment at Cairo, and was under canvas for some time, I myself till about the end of December, thus suffering precisely the same inconveniences and discomforture as those who have lately received the medals and gratuity. Simply because we did not land before Sept. 15, although actually in the country before hostilities ceased, we are excluded from receiving either medals for the country, or the gratuity as a reward for the arduous duties performed, and to compensate us for our 'hard-lying,' the majority of whom had left situations, homes, and families in response to the call of their country. I trust this will meet the notice of the proper authorities, and that they will see their way clear to give us at least some reward, after so freely bestowing them upon those who landed prior, many of whom having endured less hardships and privations than those for whom I appeal."

Under instructions from the Horse Guards, it is notified that in future lieutenants of the British service who are serving as probationers for the Indian S.C. will not be recommended for promotion to captain in their British regiments.

WE publish in another column a letter upon the present position of Regimental Officers. The grievance put forward by our correspondent, "A Disgusted Mud Major," is a real, not an imaginary one, and should receive the earnest attention of the Secretary of State for War. There can be no doubt that recent Army reform has materially altered the prospects of officers. Under the old system, it took from twenty-two to twenty-three years for an officer to work his way up through the regimental grades to the much-coveted rank of junior Major. This was a turning-point in his career. Once he became a Major, he left for ever behind him the monotony and drudgery of every-day company duty, a long continuance of which naturally damped the ardour of the most zealous soldier. Field-rank not only gave additional pay and well-earned repose, but there were fresh duties to perform, and this, in itself, acted as an incentive. The position was also clearly defined, and carried with it respect from all subordinates. The barrier between Captain and Major was very great, and only the most intimate contemporary ever thought of addressing a Major without giving him his proper title. As "A Disgusted Mud-Major" points out, all this is now changed. In most regiments Majors have been pulled down from the pedestal they formerly occupied, and are deprived of the respect which used invariably to accompany their rank. From the time when all these new Majors were created, there seems to have been a determination neither to look upon them as Field Officers, nor to treat them as such. The reason for this lowering of the rank is to be attributed to two causes, namely, a certain amount of jealousy on the part of the old Majors, who looked with disfavour upon this sudden inrush into their ranks, and the fact of the duties which the Majors of 1881 are called upon to perform being such as to deprive them of that respect which they would otherwise command. Our correspondent's case is undoubtedly a hard one, but, unfortunately, we know of many much harder. Our correspondent has under twenty years' service. We could point out many Majors of over twenty-three years' service doing Field Officer's work and that of Captain also. We are not surprised that the rank has been lowered, for no one knows exactly what the Major of to-day really is. One day he may be seen in gold-lace and spurs doing garrison duty, turning out the guard as Field Officer of the day, when the guard presents arms to him; on another occasion, he will be found, with his spurs plucked out, going round the men's dinners,—a duty he has performed, perhaps, for twenty or four-and-twenty years; then, as Captain of the week, he will be called upon to turn out the regimental guard, which does not present arms to him, though the sentry does. In face of such a state of things, it must be admitted that the present Major occupies a perfectly anomalous and undignified position, and the sooner he is removed from it, the better it will be for the service. It has always been a wonder to us how the regimental officer has so loyally carried out all the changes that have recently taken place in the Army. Patiently and conscientiously he performs the same duties that he has done for many years, and, in some instances, without the smallest hope of reward. Is there any other profession in existence the members of which are kept at the rudimentary drudgery for so long a time? The wonder is how any intelligent man can be induced to select the Army as a profession. There is in it only one road to success, and that is to change the spiked helmet for the cocked hat and feathers of the Staff. The man who makes the Army what it is, the regimental officer, who has to go through years of toil in teaching and drilling our young soldiers, is the one who gets least out of the service. All that he has to look forward to is, if he is lucky, the command of his regiment for four years. In our recent campaigns, has it been the regimental officer who has come in for the good things? No. Not only has he had to drill his men in time of peace, he has also had to teach them how to bear privation in time of war, and then lead them on to death, the glory being reaped by others. It is only fair, then, that his regimental career should be made as pleasant as possible, and that he should be relieved as early as possible from the monotony of purely routine duties. It seems to us that no more fitting time could be found for improving the officer's professional status than when he is promoted to the rank of Major. We have not been quite able to discover any advantage in the change of our regimental system as regards officers. As far as we can see, the only use of the second Lieutenant-Colonel is to criticise the actions of the Lieutenant-Colonel in command, and the increase of Majors has always been to us a mystery. Had we, when we tried to Germanise our Army, adopted the German system of four strong companies, instead of eight weak ones, there might have been some reason for the wholesale creation of Majors. We fail to see, however, that it requires a Major to command thirty or forty boys, when, before the introduction of short service, a Captain was in the habit of commanding with apparent ease from seventy to 100 men. That the present position of what our correspondent calls the "Mud Majors" should be taken under consideration, is evident, but we do not think that the grievance would be done away with by taking from all the Purchase Captains their companies when they become second senior Majors, because it might so happen, especially as far as the first twenty-five regiments are concerned, that three, if not four, of the senior Majors might be in the one battalion, then a junior on the lower scale of pay would enjoy advantages denied to a senior on the advanced scale. It may be as well to point out that the real reason for the creation of these superfluous Majors was a miscalculation of the result of the rule by which it was laid down that all Captains should be shelved at the age of 40. When too late, it was discovered that the number of Captains who would thus be retired would be altogether too alarming. Rather than acknowledge the ugly position of affairs, and admit the error that had been fallen into, the expedient was adopted of levelling up the senior Captains, so as to obviate the necessity of getting rid of them at the early age first fixed upon. Thus it is that the long-suffering and gullible British taxpayer is burdened with these expensive mementoes of the incapacity of those who have been vainly endeavouring to provide John Bull with a workable Military system, based on a German model.

IT cannot be denied that, notwithstanding the concessions made in the recent Army Circular to the officers of the Army Pay Department, will there still remain one or two well-defined grievances which will seriously interfere with the popularity of that branch of the service. These grievances must be remedied, if it is desired to make the Pay Department anything more than a kind of honourable retirement for men who have failed to make their mark elsewhere. Officers are continually heard to say that they joined the Pay Department much against their will, merely to avoid retirement. Under such circumstances, it can hardly be expected that these men will display that zeal in the discharge of their duties which the very nature of those duties renders necessary. This being so, it is maintained, with some show of justice, that rank in the Department should be still further levelled-up, up, and that all Chief Paymasters should be Colonels, and that all Staff Paymasters should become Lieutenant-Colonels after five years in the rank, on the same principle that officers of the Commissariat and Ordnance Store Departments and Army Medical Department are promoted. That the question of rank is not a mere sentimental grievance, recent events have too clearly proved. It is notorious that as soon as prospects of increased promotion were opened out to the Army, many officers, whose services the Department would have been glad to obtain, withdrew their names and returned to their regiments. Let us take the case of five Departments, viz., the Commissariat, Ordnance, Medical, and Chaplains' Departments. How do these Departments stand as regards relative rank? The Commissariat, Ordnance, Medical, and Chaplains' Departments have each five grades, those of Major-General, Colonel, Lieutenant-Colonel, Major, and Captain. The Pay Department has but four, those of Colonel, Lieutenant-Colonel, Major, and Captain. We will now take the numbers in each rank, extracted from a recent Army List. The Medical Department has 11 Generals, 30 Colonels, 198 Lieutenant-Colonels, 233 Majors, and 414 Captains. The Commissariat, 3 Generals, 11 Colonels, 19 Lieutenant-Colonels, 41 Majors, and 69 Captains. The Ordnance, 1 General, 8 Colonels, 7 Lieutenant-Colonels, 26 Majors, and 48 Captains. The Chaplains, 1 General, 23 Colonels, 7 Lieutenant-Colonels, 12 Majors, and 37 Captains. The Pay Department, on the other hand, has no Generals, no Colonels, and only 12 Lieutenant-Colonels, to 109 Majors and 149 Captains. Thus, in a strength of 82, the Chaplains have 1 General, 23 Colonels; in a strength of 141, the Commissariat have 3 Generals and 11 Colonels; in a strength of 89, the Ordnance have 1 General and 8 Colonels; in a strength of 887, the Medical have 11 Generals and 30 Colonels; while in a strength of 270, the Army Pay Department has no Generals nor Colonels. There is a wide-spread feeling among regimental officers that service in the Pay Department is a snare and a delusion. Only those who see compulsory retirement staring them in the face will accept transfer to the Pay office. The aim of the War Office should be to popularise the department, but we fear it will never do this until the Department has a chief of its own at Head-quarters. This chief should be appointed without a moment's delay, for the idea of a civilian clerk being placed in charge of a department of soldiers is the very height of all absurdity, and the only wonder is that matters have run as smoothly as they have under such objectionable circumstances. The Department has simply been given a stone, where it asked for bread. Presumably the object of the framers of the revised Warrant was to fill up existing vacancies; but we venture to predict that they have gone out of their way to make the Department unpopular, and to place it in a position of inferiority when compared with other branches of the service. The standard for admission to the Department has been lowered by the recent changes, so as to include subalterns of not less than ten years' service; but a reference to the Army List shows that this source of supply is a very shallow one. Subalterns of ten years' service and over belong almost exclusively to the Royal Engineers, the Guards, and Indian Staff Corps. Even supposing that the prospect of becoming a Paymaster with the rank of Captain might prove a sufficient attraction to induce some Subalterns to volunteer for the Department, the Warrant has been framed so as to neutralise any advantage, by laying down that a Paymaster must serve ten years in that rank before attaining that of Major, or a total service of twenty years. The fact has evidently been lost sight of that under the old regulations a subaltern appointed Paymaster attained the rank of Major after a service of fifteen years, ten of which as Paymaster, whilst a civilian appointed to a paymastership succeeded to the rank in fifteen years. Now, in order to render the Department attractive, the period of service to qualify for the rank of Major has been prolonged to twenty years. It must be remembered that twenty years ago the rank of Major was of considerably greater value than it is at present. Every substantive Major of the Line serving on July 1, 1881, became a Lieutenant-Colonel, the senior Captains of regiments Majors, consequently, the rank of Major after fifteen years' service given to Paymasters under the old regimental system, was equivalent to that of Lieutenant-Colonel now-a-days. It is not conceivable that officers can be found so blind to their own interests as to surrender their combatant commissions, and enter a department which entails considerable responsibilities, when the Commissariat and Ordnance branches are equally open to them, and offer much better terms. Looked at from all stand-points, therefore, the revised Warrant is clearly a failure. It is simply the emanation of a civilian brain, and it serves to show the undesirability of allowing a civilian to control a military department. The framers of the new Warrant doubtless will contend that it ought to satisfy the wants of everybody. Those, however, who know what the feelings of soldiers are must see that it can do nothing of the sort. It is simply another proof of War-office pigheadedness and incapacity.

THE Danish Ordnance Select Committee have issued their Report on the experiments made in March last with armour-plates on the Island of Amager, near Copenhagen. A copy of this report has been forwarded to us by Mr. Nielsen, Director of Shipbuilding and Engineering, of the Danish Navy, to prove that our correspondent was at fault when he reported that the English plates were better than those of French manufacture which competed at the trials. We have, therefore, gone very carefully through the report, but fail to find the evidence of our Copenhagen correspondent in any way shaken. On the contrary, the facts previously reported in these columns appear to us to be more than confirmed by the results of the trials; while the conclusions arrived at by the members of the Select Committee seem drawn from false premises. During the trials, five rounds were fired at each of three targets, each target being composed of two plates, 100 millimètres in thickness. These three targets represented the Creuzot, the Marrel Frères, and the English Works, and when examined after the firing, were, according to the report before us, found to be in the following condition. The Creuzot steel plates were reduced to "fragments." The wrought-iron plates supplied by the Messrs. Marrel Frères were "very much cracked," while two shot had gone through. But the compound armour-plates supplied by Messrs. Cammell and Co., of Sheffield, remained "whole," having, however, been penetrated by two 9-inch shot, which, nevertheless, did not get through the backing or inner skin. We have quoted the actual words used by the Danish Ordnance Select Committee in their report, and, no doubt, many of our readers will wonder how it came to pass that the Committee reported in favour of steel plates which they describe as "in fragments" after the firing, when they also are forced to admit that the English compound armour-plates, when placed to the same ordeal, remained "whole." The reasoning of the Danish Committee is as follows:—"From this, it appears that the plates themselves have suffered in proportion to the number of shot kept out. The latter being the main point, it must be acknowledged that next to the steel plates, the greatest resistance has been rendered by the iron plates, which thus have discharged their duty best; whereas, the compound plates are inferior to the other sorts in both respects. It remains undecided whether the steel plates can keep out a 9-inch and the iron plates a 6-inch shot." Turning now to the drawings of the plates, showing the effect of each shot, we find that the Creuzot steel plates were, indeed, reduced to fragments by the five shots fired at them, so much so, that very little of those plates, only a small portion of the left-hand lower corner of the target, remained attached to the backing. Indeed, the ship's side was entirely exposed to the sixth shot, had one been fired; and the only conclusion we can draw from the results, as tabulated by the Danish Select Committee, is that steel disintegrates under concussion, forming crystals, which, no longer adhering together, crumble into fragments. Hence it follows that, in action, a concentrated broadside would so break up the steel armour at that spot at which the shots took effect as to denude the side at that spot of its protective armour, and leave it bare and fully exposed to the deadly effect of the next broadside or shot striking at the same spot. The wrought-iron plates would be much in the same condition, but the compound plates, while effectually keeping out the lighter projectiles, would allow those of the heavier ordnance to penetrate, but force them to so far expend their energy in the act as to be unable to get through the backing or inner skin. Having undergone this punishment, the compound plates still remain "whole," and continue to protect the side of the ship, instead of crumbling off "in fragments," as do the Creuzot steel plates. It was on these grounds that the English, Italian, and Russian Committees reported in favour of, and that their respective Governments adopted, compound armour-plates, in preference to steel plates, for protecting the sides of armour-clads. But the members of the Danish Ordnance Select Committee, wiser in their generation, reverse the cumulative decisions of other nations, and, notwithstanding that steel, having been crystallized, falls in fragments from the target, and thus denudes it of all protection, still pronounce in favour of this metal, because the plates composed of it have kept out all the five shots fired at them, forgetting that, after that last shot, there was no steel armour left, while the compound armour-plate remained "whole." Neither the English, nor the Russian, nor the German, nor the Austro-Hungarian, nor even the French Government allow themselves to be influenced by the apparent results of the Spezzia experiments of last November, and all maintain their faith in compound armour, notwithstanding that then the compound plates fell from the target, owing to defective bolting, while the Creuzot plates, with their twenty bolts to the English six, remained firm. In Denmark, however, the result is reversed. The Creuzot steel plates break up into fragments and fall to the ground, while the English compound armour plates remain "whole," and yet the Danish Select Committee chose the steel plate as the best! After the Spezzia trials, Messrs. Schneider, of the Creuzot works, circulated photographs showing the compound armour-plate broken and fallen to the ground, and the Creuzot steel plate "whole" and still adhering to its backing, and claimed the victory. But naval and military experts were not to be deceived so easily. Further trials were ordered, and Admiral Acton, Minister of Marine, recently stated, in the Italian Chamber of Deputies,—"These recent results, relatively unfavourable to the Schneider armour, caused no little surprise to those who had an impression of the goodness of the Schneider metal, gathered from the photographs and drawings showing the 48-centimètre compound armour fallen from the target after the second shot from the 100-ton gun, while the Schneider plate only partially fell at the third shot. But, admitting what has been stated, I would remark that, if the fourth shot had failed to bring the Creuzot plate from its backing, it would only have been by reason of its better bolting." Then, alluding to the Gâvres experiments, Admiral Acton remarked that here "the armour was all well bolted, and in the same manner the Cammell compound plate of fifty tapered to forty centimètres covered the target until the fourth shot; while the Schneider after the second shot could no longer resist, and either fell or was perforated." The Danes would, therefore, do well not to allow themselves to be influenced by the results of a single experiment, for, in point of hardness, "compound armour is far superior to Schneider." This is a most important fact, for in modern men-of-war the turret or battery must be so protected that the enemy's projectiles shall neither penetrate, nor so demolish the armour as to expose the backing. "Compound armour, so long as its pieces remain together, behaves better against perforation than any other. In compound armour the projectile makes a clearly defined penetration, whilst Schneider armour has its metal dislodged, presenting phenomena analogous to those produced upon the old iron armour, although in somewhat minor proportions. We have seen that the fragments which remain attached to the target can be perforated, and, in fact, at the second shot fired at Ochta, near St. Petersburg, and at the fourth shot at Spezzia, this happened to the Schneider plates. In compound armour, however, it is pretty certain that, with good and numerous bolts, the fragments would remain fixed to the target, and would not be dislodged." Such is the present aspect of the question. We have quoted at length from Rear-Admiral Acton's speech to show how, after that speech was delivered, the advocates of steel plates have shifted their ground, and now argue that "plates in fragments" are superior to "plates that remain whole," on the false premise that "plates suffer in proportion to the number of shots kept out;" and "this being the main point," conclude that the Creuzot steel plates "in fragments" are better than the English compound armour-plates which have remained "whole." We think it a pity that the efficiency of a Navy and the safety of a nation should be imperilled by sophistical arguments such as those employed by the Danish Ordnance Select Committee.

We are requested to state that there is no foundation for the report current in some of the daily papers that a Naval review will be held at Spithead on the assembly of the Reserve Squadron for the annual summer cruise, but that the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty will take the opportunity of the Squadron being together to inspect the ships before they leave.

Rear-Admiral Salmon, V.C., was at Cape Town on May 22, when the Boadicea had been five weeks in the fine new graving dock, over which the Harbour Board has sole control. The managers of the dock evinced the greatest eagerness to do everything that was asked of them by Captain Church, and nothing could well have exceeded their civility. This large dock is capable of taking in the largest ship yet built, and is especially well adapted for men-of-war. The good people of Cape Town availed themselves of the visit of the Boadicea to testify to Admiral Salmon their delight at the recovery of Mrs. Salmon from her dangerous illness, and a round of gaiety made the five weeks the Boadicea has been in dock fly fast. Captain Church and the officers gave a splendid ball in the Exchange, which is admitted by all in Cape Town to have been by far the best entertainment of the kind ever given in the colony. The leading merchants at the Cape gave a return ball in excellent style, and the members of the Civil Service Club entertained Admiral Salmon, Captain Church, and the officers of the Boadicea at a dinner, which the "Rag" would find some difficulty in equalling. Numerous private parties on shore also testified to the high esteem in which all on board the flagship are held in the colony. The Boadicea will be ready for sea about June 22, and will then most probably visit the east coast as far as Durban, before returning to the Cape for the remaining winter months of the commission.

Without communicating with Lord Charles Beresford, the Council of the Royal United Service Institution last Saturday advertised that the lecture on "Machine Guns," announced for June 15, would not be delivered by that distinguished officer. This arbitrary conduct is all the more remarkable, that the Council asked Lord Charles Beresford whether he would like to put off his lecture, and only advertised it as countermanded after receiving that officer's reply that he would prefer to be allowed to stick to the date assigned to him. Since then Lord Charles Beresford has heard not a word from the Council, and must have been somewhat astonished at the advertisement they inserted—we now find by mistake—in our columns last Saturday. The lecture was duly delivered yesterday afternoon, but want of space prevents our noticing many of its important and interesting features this week.

Unforeseen difficulties have been encountered by the Government in passing the Bills granting a lump sum to Lords Alcester and Wolseley, and it is not expected that these officers will receive the grants a grateful country in no manner begrudges them for some time to come, owing to the obstruction of the Irreconcilables in Parliament. The Ministry are entirely to blame for the present state of affairs, as their conduct is only open to one assumption, and that is, that the Government first proposed to grant Lords Alcester and Wolseley a pension to disarm the opposition of the opponents to such grants, ultimately only appearing to give way, and adopt their suggestion that a lump sum would be more in accordance with their views. But, even after having adopted the suggestion of the Radicals on this point, and proposed to grant Lords Alcester and Wolseley a lump sum each, to enable them to maintain with dignity that new state in life which they have been called upon to assume, the Government find the whole of their policy which created the situation called in question, and their traversers unwilling to give way an inch.

Naval and Military correspondents furnishing service information to the Press cannot be too particular as to accuracy, especially when dealing with what concerns individual officers. A statement appeared last week in the Western Morning News to the effect that the officer who is to succeed Colonel Mawbey as Commandant of the Royal Marine Artillery at Eastney, on July 3 next, would only enjoy the command for a few months, as General Schomberg, C.B., the senior General of the corps, must retire in October, and thus advance the new Commandant to the rank of Major-General. On this point, the informant of our contemporary is in error, since General Schomberg does not retire for age, under the Order in Council of November 29, 1881, until October 5, 1886; and thus, so far as General Schomberg is concerned, the new Commandant may run out his three years in command.

"Flags, National and Mercantile, House Flags, and Funnels," is the title of an unostentatious-looking but most highly useful little book, compiled by Mr. James Griffin, J.P., one of the members of the well-known firm of Naval publishers whose establishment on the Hard at Portsmouth has already been of great use to the Navy. In time of war or in time of peace, this work will be found equally useful on board all ships, whether belonging to the Royal Navy or to the Merchant Service, as, with this book in hand, it is possible to distinguish nearly every line of merchant ships plying their trade upon the ocean, and thus establish at a glance the nationality of the steamer or sailing ship in sight. The work is one that no officer should be without, and the publishers invite all shipowners whose house flags and distinguishing marks have not yet been noticed to send in particulars of the same. Ships registered in this work would have to repaint on changing flags in time of war.

The Duke of Marlborough will on Monday inquire of the Government, in reference to the loss of her Majesty's ship Lively, whether any representations have been made to the Board of Admiralty or other department with the view of having the rock known as the "Hen and Chickens" buoyed; and, if so, for what reason a precaution apparently so necessary for the safety of her Majesty's ships has not been taken; also to inquire whether any similar representations have been at any time made with reference to a well-known danger called the "North Shoal," off the west coast of the Orkneys; and whether, in view of the recent catastrophe, the marking of that danger by means of a buoy will be seriously considered; and to move for any correspondence on the subjects.

The Admiralty have informed Captain Pollard that he must either resign the command of the Defence, or submit to be tried by court-martial for hazarding the safety of that ironclad in the Mersey. Captain Pollard has elected to be tried by court-martial, and it is expected the trial will take place at Portsmouth. Commander Parr and the officers of the Lively being placed upon their trial at the same port, for the loss of their ship.

A correspondent, holding a position of high command in the Navy, writes to call attention to the uncompromising opposition maintained towards scientific inventions having for their object the facilitating of navigation, by the Hydrographic Department of the Admiralty. Sir William Thompson's automatic sounding apparatus and patent compass are two cases in point. Although the value of these instruments is now universally admitted, the Hydrographic Department stand in the way of their general adoption in the Navy, and the reason why is anything but clear. The Phœnix and the Lively might have been saved from wreck, had these instruments been in use.

Lord Alcester has at last made up his mind as to why he did bombard the forts of Alexandria. It was not in retaliation for the previous massacre of Europeans, as stated by Lord Alcester shortly after landing in England, after vacating the command of the Mediterranean Fleet. Lord Alcester, replying to the inquiries of a correspondent as to the action of the British Fleet at Alexandria, now says:—"I never bombarded the city of Alexandria. I attacked the forts and batteries of Alexandria, situated at some distance from the city, not in consequence of the massacre, but because the party of Arabi, then in power, continued, in defiance of my repeated warnings, to make preparations for sinking her Majesty's ships under my command. If I had not done so, I should have been unworthy to hold her Majesty's commission." At the Mansion House, however, Lord Alcester said:—"The extreme difficulty that attended the work I had to do was in the early part. It was impossible after the massacres that took place at Alexandria on June 11 to do anything in the way I should have liked. Had it not been for the enormous European population and Levantine population, subjects of European Powers, I think it very possible that with the small force we had we should have endeavoured to have settled matters on the following morning; but that was impossible in the circumstances. There is a distinguished diplomatist present who will bear me out in saying that, had we attempted to seek that redress which we were entitled to demand, the lives of the enormous European population of Cairo and of Egypt generally would have been placed in peril. I was told in distinct terms that I must do nothing. I was requested to do nothing until measures could be adopted to remove the European population. The massacre of Alexandria took place on June 11. I will ask you to pay attention to what I say now. The last vessel containing refugees from Egypt was towed out of the harbour of Alexandria at 4 p.m. on July 10, and we attacked the batteries at 7 o'clock on the following morning. Therefore, there was no lack of promptitude in endeavouring to redress the grievances we had to obtain redress for." From this it is evident that Lord Alcester was not cut out for a politician.

Vice-Admiral the Lord John Hay arrived at Fiume in the Alexandra, accompanied by the Téméraire, on June 10. Lord John at once landed and called on Count Szapary, Governor of Fiume, who returned the visit, and in the evening entertained the Admiral and the officers of the English ironclads at dinner. On Tuesday last Count Szapary gave a grand ball and garden party in honour of the English officers. The whole town was en fête, and after the banquet the guests descended by a special staircase into the great square of the town, where dancing was carried on, the square, like the palace and its surroundings, being brilliantly illuminated. On Wednesday the Vice-Admiral gave a luncheon on board the Alexandra, and afterwards accompanied the Governor and a select party on a special trip through the harbour. Lord John Hay inspected the Naval Academy in Fiume, and expressed himself pleased with the arrangements. Count Szapary and his family breakfasted with the Admiral on Thursday. Afterwards the officers of the Alexandra gave a dance, to which the members of the Fiume aristocracy were invited. The marines and sailors had leave to go on shore, and though they went in large numbers, not the slightest excess occurred. Subsequently, the Alexandra and Téméraire left for Lussin-Piccolo, at the entrance to the Gulf of Quarnero, on their way to join the rest of the Fleet at Trieste. A ball was to be given there on board the Monarch, and Captain Burton, the English Consul, was to entertain the officers of the Fleet and the local authorities at a garden fête. The Monarch, Inflexible, Carysfort, and Decoy received much attention at Trieste, from the fact of their having taken part in the bombardment of Alexandria. The festivities included a grand ball and garden party at the Castle of Miramare.

At the dinner of the Royal Naval Club of 1765, on June 12, Admiral of the Fleet Sir Harry Keppel in the chair, at which H.R.H. the Prince of Wales was the guest, an Admiral who commands in chief at one of our principal Naval ports, and who is not a member of that club, made his appearance at the festive board, and insisted on taking his seat, although uninvited, and told it was not the club to which he belongs. The members of the Royal Naval Club of 1765 are furious.

Rear-Admiral Sir Anthony Hoskins, K.C.B., hoisted his flag on board the Hawk at Sheerness on Wednesday, and proceeded to Spithead, to assume the command of the Reserve Squadron. A correspondent serving in the Mediterranean brings to our notice an episode in the Egyptian Campaign which has escaped notice, though well deserving a place in the records of that war. According to our correspondent, Lieutenant Cecil Burney, R.N., of the Carysfort, was landed at Ismailia, in charge of two Gatling guns. Here he appears to have been forgotten or lost sight of, for he advanced with the division of the Army under General Willis, and found himself, on August 24, on the extreme right of that officer's command when the battle of Tel-el-Mahouta commenced. During the day, the Egyptian troops pressed hard on the British right, and General Willis and Staff watched the advance of the enemy in this direction, not entirely without apprehension. No one knew the Gatlings were there, hence Lieutenant Burney was left to act on his own judgment and responsibility. Like a true seaman, this young officer preferred close quarters to long bowling, and waited for Arabi's troops to get well within point-blank range before opening fire. Then the Gatlings were allowed to rattle out their deadly fire, and much to the relief of General Willis, the enemy was seen to halt, waver, break, and fly, utterly routed. Away galloped the General to ascertain the cause of the sudden stampede of the Egyptians, and on coming up to the Carysfort's men warmly complimented Lieutenant Burney and those under his command for their coolness and gallantry. Sir Garnet Wolseley did the same. But as no senior Naval officer was present, no report was made officially of this episode in the campaign, which now reaches us from an authentic source. Indeed, we are assured that much astonishment is expressed throughout the Mediterranean Fleet at Lieutenant Burney's name having been omitted from the list of those thought worthy of some special mark of distinction in recognition of their services, but we fail to see how the Admiralty are to blame, if, as stated, no official report of the occurrence ever reached them. Still, it is not too late to rectify an unintentional omission. Lord Wolseley and General Willis can either confirm or contradict the report, and we therefore hope the Admiralty will take the case into their consideration.

A correspondent with the Channel Squadron writes from Vigo on June 4 as follows:—"We left Gibraltar this day week (May 28), and have had a pleasant and uneventful passage. We started in the afternoon at about 2 o'clock, leaving the Northumberland behind to await the arrival of the P. and O. mail steamer, which was due that day. We passed the steamer the Nizam off Tarifa, and the Northumberland joined us during the night. Next day was devoted to steam tactics, with 'Clear ship for action' for evening drill. On the 30th, the ships spread for target practice in the forenoon. About noon the troopship Himalaya passed, standing towards the Straits of Gibraltar. On Friday, the glorious 1st of June, we passed the Bowlings early in the morning. The Squadron proceeded for the day in groups of two, the Minotaur and Neptune forming one group, and working independently. The Admiral spent part of the day on board the Neptune. In the afternoon a French man-of-war passed us, standing to the southward, and exchanged salutes with the Minotaur. The next day a slight fog was experienced in the forenoon, but did not last long enough to occasion any delay, and we arrived and moored off the town of Vigo about 3 o'clock. We did not make sail at all during the trip, as head-winds were experienced the whole way. The country about here is looking very green and pretty, and there is great abundance of fruit and flowers, always welcome on arrival in harbour. We found our mails waiting for us. The post comes in every morning and brings us our daily papers, only four days old. On the passage out from England of the Neptune, it was found that the heat from the funnels was such as to destroy all the gear on the mainmast, and render it quite unserviceable. Previous to leaving Gibraltar she unbent sails on the mainmast, and sent down all yards except the topsail; as soon as she had moored on arrival here she sent up yards and bent sails, which seems a rather amusing reversal of the natural order of things; but, of course, it was for the sake of uniformity of appearance. It is supposed that her rig will be permanently altered the next time she goes home. A Spanish frigate, the Lealtad, arrived to-day and exchanged salutes with the Minotaur. The Squadron regatta is fixed to take place the week after next at Arosa Bay."

The General Orders for the current month contain a statement showing the relative rank of Warrant Officers in the Army with those in the Navy. Conductors of supplies and stores and 1st-class master gunners are to rank with gunners, boatswains, and carpenters in the Navy, but will be senior to them. All other Warrant Officers in the Army, such as serjeant-majors, schoolmasters, and bandmasters, will rank with midshipmen and clerks. This is giving relative rank to the Army at the expense of the Navy. As midshipmen rank with ensigns in the Army, we presume that serjeant-majors, bandmasters, &c., may now claim the same rank, and we may soon expect to hear of Midshipman H.R.H. Prince George of Wales being told to give precedence to Serjeant-Major Pipeclay or Bandmaster Clarionet. If midshipmen in the Navy rank with ensigns in the Army, and warrant officers in the Army rank with midshipmen in the Navy, what is the relative rank in the Navy of ensigns in the Army? Lord Dundreary is evidently wanted to solve the riddle, as we are getting very much "mixed," it seems.

In a debate on recruiting in the House of Lords on the 12th, Lord Ellenborough expressed his belief that the Volunteer movement had caused the greatest injury to recruiting for the Army. This opinion seems to be groundless, for the vast majority of the Volunteers are men whose occupations and positions in life are settled, and who would not join the Regular Army under any circumstances. We have no doubt that the Volunteer movement induces a taste for a military life, and thus aids recruiting. The Duke of Cambridge showed his knowledge of the working of our military system (such as it is) by expressing his dissent from Lord Ellenborough.

Lord Eustace Cecil will on Monday ask the Secretary of State for War whether it is true that, in consequence of the large number of Reserve men brought up for rioting and drunkenness before the magistrates at Portsmouth, and who are at present waiting to be sent home, the commanding officers of the forts at which they are stationed have given notice that they will no longer advance money to pay fines, the result of which will be that the men will now invariably be sent to prison; and, if so, whether he will find some remedy for a state of things which, if allowed to go on, may have a serious effect in deterring men from re-enlisting or joining the Reserve.

We regret exceedingly that we are unable to notice, as fully as it deserves, a letter from Sir Edward Sullivan, which appeared in the Morning Post of yesterday. Unfortunately, the time and the space at our disposal are so limited, that we cannot do more than urge all who are interested in the efficiency and the reality of our Army to read Sir Edward Sullivan's admirable letter. Many, perhaps, will differ with him on some points; but the cogency of his arguments will be admitted by all unprejudiced readers, as surely as the keenness of his sarcasms will be felt by those who tried to ruin the British Army, and have nearly succeeded.

The Fourth Annual Military Tournament will be opened at the Agricultural Hall, Islington, on Monday next, and will continue throughout the week. As the proceeds will be devoted to a most deserving object—to increase the Cambridge Fund for Old and Disabled Soldiers—we trust that our readers who may be in town during the week will give the tournament their support. If it is conducted as successfully as last year, it will well repay a visit. Great credit is certainly due to the honorary secretaries, Colonel the Hon. P. S. Methuen, C.B., and Captain Tully for their exertions in organising the affair.

We understand that an attempt will be made to retard the promotions which are due in the Corps of Royal Marines in the course of a few weeks. There are officers who view with distaste the compulsory-retirement regulations, and would not be averse to upsetting the Order in Council which was promulgated two years ago. In the interest of the whole corps, we trust that no individual interests will be allowed to stand in the way of the general advantage which is secured by a steady flow of promotion. It must be remembered that the disasters which would be entailed on many officers by interfering with compulsory retirement in the higher ranks, though they may not be felt immediately, are very real, and far outweigh any injury which could be sustained by an officer who has reached the highest grades of the service being compelled to retire when his term of office has expired. When young officers are compulsorily retired, unless they have obtained promotion before a certain age, it would be simply cruel to make exceptions to the rule compelling their seniors to go, and thereby postponing the promotion upon which their whole career, to say nothing of their income, depends. The Order in Council is one of such recent date that it is scarcely possible to believe that the Admiralty will allow it to be set aside to serve any single officer's interests, when the interests of every officer in the whole corps are more or less involved in its impartial operation.

The total establishment of non-commissioned officers and men of the several Cavalry and Infantry regiments in Egypt and the Mediterranean, of their twin battalions and depôts, on April 1, 1883, was,—Serjeants and farriers, 1,703; trumpeters, buglers, and drummers, 594; rank and file, 26,822; total, 29,119. Horses, 400.

If, as we hear was the case, the late Sir W. Palliser was about to prosecute an official charge of a grave character against certain persons connected with the War Department, which he had already formulated and put into print at the time of his sudden and lamented death, it is a circumstance which adds additional weight to the demand for an official inquiry. A great Government department—like Cæsar's wife—ought never to allow itself to be placed in a position to be even suspected, and on public grounds alone, therefore, it is incumbent that there should be a rigid and impartial investigation of the facts. This is not a party question, but one which concerns the public generally, and more especially at this moment, when the whole armament of our Navy is being changed.

There is one subject on which all military men whose opinions are worth recording are unanimous,—we mean their decided objections to the construction of the Channel Tunnel. In the evidence of General Sir Lintorn Simmons, and later in that of the Duke of Cambridge, these objections are stated so clearly and so strongly as to be absolutely unanswerable. We trust that no speculative or merely commercial considerations will be allowed any weight in comparison with the safety of the country.

The Army has been so upset by recent changes that officers and men have long since learnt that it is no use to be surprised at anything. Hitherto, in arranging Colonial reliefs, regiments have invariably been selected for service which, during their previous tour of foreign service, did duty in India, regiments which had been in the Colonies going to India. But all this seems now to have been changed, for it is currently reported that the 87th Royal Irish Fusiliers are to go in September to Bermuda, a station from which they returned as recently as December, 1877. We cannot bring ourselves to believe that this move really is contemplated. If it is, it clearly proves the slipshod manner in which matters are worked now at the Horse Guards or War Office, or whatever department it is that really orders these things in this age of Army mismanagement.

We understand the reason of the delay in filling up the numerous vacancies in the list of Major-Generals on the Active List of the Army is owing, as usual, to disputes between the War Office and the Treasury.

The annual changes of stations of Cavalry regiments in Ireland have now been decided upon, and will be carried out as follows, viz.:—1st Royal Dragoons, from Dublin to Newbridge; 2nd Dragoons (Royal Scots Greys), from Ballincollig to Leeds; 5th Lancers, from Newbridge to Dublin; 11th Hussars, from Leeds to Cahir; 18th Hussars, from Longford to Dublin; 20th Hussars, from Cahir to Ballincollig; and 21st Hussars, from Dublin to Athlone.

We stated in our last issue that some important modifications are in contemplation in the regulations for the management of Serjeants' Messes. We cannot help feeling that any changes on the lines laid down would be a most ill-advised move, and would render the obtaining of good non-commissioned officers almost impossible. It is hard enough now to persuade men to take a stripe. The greatest inducement to them to accept promotion is the prospect of obtaining the comforts and conveniences of the serjeants' mess. The mess is the only place the serjeant can resort to, to get away for a short time from the men; and in it he should have as much comfort and latitude allowed him as is consistent with his position, which our would-be Army reformers seem to forget is a very responsible and respectable one, and one of which the prestige should be raised by every means possible. On the other hand, power should be placed in the hands of Commanding Officers of closing altogether, or curtailing considerably, the privileges of a serjeants' mess in which irregularities are found to exist. The Commanding Officer is the best judge of whether the serjeants of his regiment are worthy of their privileges, and in his hands should rest the power to augment or withdraw them.

Lord Wemyss will on Thursday, July 5, move, "That, having regard to the defective state of our Military organisation, and to the great importance of the Militia force, it is essential that the Militia be recruited up to its established strength; and that the Militia Reserve should, as intended by its originator, the late General Peel, be borne in excess of the Militia establishment."

The General Orders for the Army, dated June 1, comprise 20 distinct paragraphs or orders, most of them relating to points of detail, and not calling for special notice. The chest-measurement for recruits for the Royal Artillery and the standard of height for the Foot Guards are reduced. The most important order is that headed "Extensions of Service;" yet it is the last in the series, possibly that it should not attract unnecessary notice. It does not occupy as much space or look so imposing as three preceding orders, announcing merely the adoption of Territorial titles by certain Volunteer Corps, and the change of designation of a regiment of Yeomanry Cavalry. These orders are not called what they are—changes of title or designation—but they bear the pompous, indeed, the ridiculous, heading of "Army Organisation.

The number of horses of the 19th Hussars in Egypt, on April 1, 1883, by an official return was:—Fit for duty, 310; at grass, 150; sick or lame, 21; total, 481. At the Depôt of the regiment there were 27 fit for duty, 3 sick or lame; total, 30.

This extract from a private letter from Lieutenant-Colonel —— will be read with interest:—"I was much impressed with Captain Walter's excellent letter in the Times, and can endorse every word of it. My experience is very considerable, as I have been doing regimental duty for nearly 28 years; so I ought to know something about it. I have no hesitation in affirming that all four battalions of my regiment are worse in every respect than they were 20 years ago—in numbers, physique, dress, drill, discipline, marching power, carrying power, and all that makes a soldier. 'Yes,' replies a Liberal War-Office official, 'but you had no Reserve then.' No Reserve then,—why, the 1st Battalion when I joined it, turned out eight companies of 90 men on parade; we left four companies of 50 men each at Malta, and four companies of nearly 120 men each in England, which latter soon increased to 240 men each—a pretty good Reserve, that, for one battalion!"

The question of constructing the railway from Sibi to Quetta is again under the consideration of the Indian Government. We always expected that when this railway was actually begun and abandoned, "official economy" would probably reconstruct the works at no distant date.

An official Return of the services and ages of the non-commissioned officers and men of the several Cavalry and Infantry regiments in Egypt and the Mediterranean, on April 1, 1883, gives the following results:—One Cavalry regiment, 17 Infantry battalions. Under 1 year's service, 848 men; between 1 and 2 years, 3,759; between 2 and 3 years, 2,537; between 3 and 4 years, 2,135; between 4 and 5 years, 1,291; between 5 and 6 years, 759; between 6 and 7 years, 490; between 7 and 10 years, 514; between 10 and 14 years, 697; between 14 and 18 years, 455; 18 years and upwards, 229; total, 13,714 men. Their respective ages are:—Under 18 years, 187 men; between 18 and 19 years, 128; between 19 and 20 years, 711; between 20 and 21 years, 2,828; between 21 and 24 years, 4,758; 24 years and upwards, 5,102. A Return also gives the services and ages of the non-commissioned officers and men of the corresponding or twin battalions, where they are at home, and of the depôts, of the regiments serving in Egypt and the Mediterranean. Under 1 year, 2,702 men; between 1 and 2 years, 1,755; between 2 and 3 years, 1,311; between 3 and 4 years, 1,298; between 4 and 5 years, 1,365; between 5 and 6 years, 1,367; between 6 and 7 years, 831; between 7 and 10 years, 892; between 10 and 14 years, 1,686; between 14 and 18 years, 1,298; 18 years and upwards, 642; not reported, 59; total, 15,206. The ages of the men are:—Under 18 years, 253; between 18 and 19, 143; between 19 and 20, 1,845; between 20 and 21, 1,757; between 21 and 24, 3,564; 24 years and upwards, 7,585; not reported, 59.

We heartily congratulate Lord Wolseley on the success of the Ministerial proposal with regard to his pension. His Lordship must have felt himself in a most uncomfortable position lately, and it is as well, perhaps, that the settlement of the matter was not longer delayed, for there is unmistakeable evidence all through the country that some people blame his Lordship to a greater or less degree for the present lamentable condition into which the British Army has been brought, under the influence of short service, localisation, territorialism, and the thousand and one other "fads" included in that most comprehensive term "Army reform." The few members of the party of progress have had rewards literally showered upon them, but what about the many men who were far-seeing enough to recognise the pitfalls which stood in the way? We could name cases by the hundred in which officers of recognised ability have been subjected to all manner of pains and penalties because they would not blindly follow where others wished to lead. What is to be these men's reward now? The party of progress has made much capital for itself out of the work of demolition. Will it be allowed to make further profit, now that the fallacy of reform has been openly exposed.

Trials have lately been made near Berlin with a new military single-loading rifle, the invention of a Mr. Garve. At a range of 350 yards the deviation is said to exceed eight inches. The lock and breech mechanism of the new rifle consists of only three separate parts, as compared with sixteen of the Mauser. In firing against time, ten shots more per minute were discharged from the Garve than from the Mauser.

The Autumn Manœuvres of the 11th German Army Corps, consisting of thirteen regiments of Infantry, six of Cavalry, three of Artillery, one Army Service Corps (Train) battalion, one battalion of Pioneers, and one school of non-commissioned officers, will be held in the neighbourhood of Frankfort-on-the-Main during the month of September. The following troops will participate in the same:—Infantry regiments, Nos. 32, 80, 81, 83, 87, 88, 94, 95, 97, 115, 116, 117, and 118; Cavalry regiments, 5th, 23rd, and 24th Dragoons, 13th and 14th Hussars, and 9th Uhlans; Artillery regiments, 11, 25, and 27; the 11th Pioneer Battalion, and the Biebrich non-commissioned officers school. The whole corps will be reviewed by the Emperor near Homburg on September 21, after which the corps manœuvres, extending over six days, will commence. A sham-fight is to take place on the 24th. The head-quarters of the Emperor will not remain stationary at one place, as has always been the case up to the present, but it will be changed from Frankfort-on-the-Main to Homburg, and then to Wiesbaden. It is expected that during his stay at the latter place, the Emperor will unveil the national monument on the Niederwold. On the conclusion of the above manœuvres, some interesting siege operations will be undertaken against the Fortress of Coblenz, in which the river monitors Rhein and Mosel will participate. Major-General von Adler, Inspector of the 1st Division of Engineers, will have charge of the operations, assisted by Colonels Sobbe, Chief of the General Staff of the 8th Army Corps, and Hassel, Chief of Department in the great General Staff. Siege operations will be commenced on October 1 by a cannonade of Fort Ehrenbreitstein, on the right bank of the Rhine. This work, which in the days of smooth-bore guns was one of the strongest in Europe, is now within easy range of several mountains accessible to artillery. The main body of the besieging force will be posted on the banks of the Moselle, and commence an attack on the Karthause, a strong fort on the left bank of the Rhine. This fort commands the town, being situated on the summit and side of a hill in its rear. The head-quarters of General von Adler will be at the village of Moselweiss. The garrison of Coblenz will make a sortie to the right bank of the Rhine, crossing the river by the railway and boat bridges, under cover of the monitors and Forts Ehrenbreitstein and Karthause. The monitors will not attempt to ascend the Moselle for the purpose of dislodging the enemy, as impassible obstructions are supposed to have been placed there. Coblenz is the connecting-link between the strong fortress of Mayence and Cologne, and would prove impregnable so long as either of these places held out; but there can be no doubt that, if left to its own resources, and deprived of all succour from outside, Coblenz would be speedily reduced by an enterprising enemy.

LORD MORLEY'S COMMITTEE.

SIR,—Lord Wolseley, while "not at all wishing to find fault," has succeeded in conveying to the public the impression that any rough-and-ready arrangements made by well-intentioned people for the care of the sick and wounded in war, quite excell the best attempts the Army Medical Department, organised for the purpose, can make under the present system. He appears to have paid a visit to a hospital in Cairo, and to have interviewed therein a "hospital doctor" with whom he was "very angry." At this interview, he made his views as to the deficiencies known to the "hospital doctor," and said he "would come back in a week; and he came back in a week," to find himself "naturally very angry," for the second time, with the hospital doctor, who had the bad taste to shelter himself behind the Commissary-General of Ordnance. Lady Strangford wanted no Commissary, and her poor sick men had no flies about them, and all her patients had beds; but Lord Wolseley is unable to say how long Lady Strangford had been there. But that was a difficult problem, of course; and there was "no excuse whatever" for the hospital doctor at Cairo. Lord Wolseley does not state whether the hospital doctor he mentions was Dr. Hanbury, the responsible head of all hospitals and medical arrangements; but he came back in a week. He may have addressed Dr. Hanbury in the course of that week as to the horrors—easily removable, according to him—which the men endured in hospital, but he does not say he did so. This looks like ignoring the principal medical officer, and it certainly was not dignified to attack a man who had no better shelter than a Commissary of Ordnance. Once was all very well, but Lord Wolseley returned in a week to renew it. "Go out and buy whisks yourself, and I will pay for them." "Never mind the Commissary of Ordnance." Here was a general officer, commanding-in-chief, lecturing a "hospital doctor," instead of consulting the head of his medical staff. If Lord Wolseley had shown his anxiety for the sick in the latter way, and mentioned before the Committee the results of his doing so, he would have probably had better results than returning after a week more "angry" than before with the hospital doctor, and he would have offended nobody. Whether the existing system or the regimental is the more advantageous generally, for war and for peace time, I cannot say, but in arriving at a decision either way, I doubt if the Committee have been aided by the "illustrations of the system," given so very apologetically, but so very studiedly, by Lord Wolseley. The effect of what he is reported to have said cannot be other than to damage the reputation, not merely of the system at present in force, but of the members of the Medical Department of the Army as a body. And this will be the effect, even if Lord Wolseley had repeated a dozen instead of half-a-dozen times the phrase "I made great allowances," which so little conceals his apparent intention. Lord Wolseley's remedy is to let a military officer, not a medical military officer, direct in all administrative matters. He says if a military officer were there, then there would have been—what he appears to wish it supposed there was not—sympathy for the sick and suffering men. A military officer's sympathy would doubtless have caused him to bring whisks with him from England, and mosquito-curtains. But the medical officer was reduced to "acting according to his lights," and "according to the customs or the habits that he had been brought up in." Lord Wolseley and his Staff could get excellent bread. Their great sympathy helped them here, no doubt. It does not appear that it extended far beyond themselves, nor does it seem to have struck Lord Wolseley that even had the medical officers the power to do it, they would have had little chance in the competition with his Staff officers for the excellent bread put on his lordship's table. Would not these very Staff officers have probably said, "Who authorised you to purchase food supplies?" The sick come from the healthy. Why did not Lord Wolseley make provision for good food supplies for his men? Money was no object. "A penny or a pound a loaf, it did not matter." Why did he not arrange all to his satisfaction before he left England?—but then he was Sir Garnet Wolseley. He was acting according to his lights then, and the rabble had not run away, and none could tell that they would run. He thinks medical officers should have more "initiative." The very liberal initiative he gives them in the matter of purchasing bread, he initiated after "the battle." His "lights" had brightened. What about the price of bread, indeed! "Be a Commissary yourself. Buy whisks, or whiskey, or bread, anything,"—after "the battle." "I'll pay for them!" He was "acting according to the customs or the habits that he had been brought up in." The battle was over, and nothing remained but to get angry with the hospital doctors. Everything should be in apple-pie order in half-a-day. A doctor is to be provisioner-general, the Commissariat to be abolished on the spot, and the Medical Department is to initiate everything, except sympathy. That is not according to his, a doctor's, lights, nor "to the customs or habits that he has been brought up in." So a military officer is to provide the sympathy. But the last thing Lord Wolseley would think of would be to find fault, and as for throwing blame on anybody in particular, such a thing never even entered his mind! In this matter, Lord Wolseley is in this position, a difficult one to anybody but Mr. Gladstone. He approves the present hospital system in his book, and says it is the only possible system. Before the Commission he says that he blames the system, and gives his charming "illustrations" of it. Now, if the system be right, why does he blame it, and not the doctors? If the doctors are personally to blame, why does he make allowances—"great allowances"—for them on account of the system? The real question is, why does he pretend to make allowances? He has thrown much odium on the medical officers, and deprived himself of any reason for having done so. They must try to live it down.—I am, &c., BLESSÉ.

SIR,—In the notices which have been published of the Report of the Committee for Inquiring into the Organisation of the Army Medical Department, I think that a great injustice has been done to the Medical officers in charge of the hospitals at Cairo and Ismailia by the prominence given to Lord Wolseley's evidence. His lordship expressed his anger and surprise that the doctors had not purchased bread such as was to be found on his own breakfast-table, and bedsteads similar to those he had seen in Lady Strangford's hospital. The comparison is not a fair one. Lady Strangford was supported by a committee, and supplied with funds with which she could buy whatever and wherever she pleased; and as far as bread and other food was concerned, Lord Wolseley's cook was probably in an equally favourable position. Without touching the question as to how far volunteer ambulance societies can be utilised by the Military authorities in time of war, I would venture to suggest that if a Red Cross commissioner were attached to each army in the field, there would be no difficulty in supplying hospitals with such additional comforts as may be procurable, and which, perhaps, are not included in the official stores.—I am, &c., JOHN FURLEY.

SIR,—Now that at length the Report of Lord Morley's Committee on the state of the Army Medical Department is made public, together with their recommendations for the repair of certain deficiencies, a grievous feeling of disappointment amongst a large proportion of members of the Army Medical Department is apparent, that no mention is made of a return to even a modified form of the regimental system. We have frequently been told the regimental system was dead and buried; yet, besides the many complaints made against the present system, the action of the authorities immediately the Egyptian campaign was determined on, was to appoint a medical officer to every regiment, battery of Artillery, or Engineer company that was sent to Egypt. This action on their part, no doubt, led all persons of common-sense to infer that if such an arrangement were necessary during warfare, it would be well that it should exist in times of peace, so as not to be totally unaccustomed to it, and unprepared for it on the outbreak of a war. I myself, quite unexpectedly, was sent at a short notice to embark in medical charge of a regiment not a single individual of which I had ever seen before. Unfortunately, I was made to feel I was quite an outsider amongst them, and I cannot help thinking it would have been far better both for them and for their medical officer, had he been regularly appointed to that regiment, and had not been a stranger to them, or unaccustomed to serving with them. Our disassociation with regiments has certainly been carried to great lengths, and the loss this entails on combatant officers and men, as well as their families, has been too often touched on in your columns to need allusion from me. This loss has been made greater by the employment of civilian practitioners at a number of home stations to do military medical duty, and solely on the score of cheapness, while we are sent to spend nearly three-quarters of our service abroad. The surgeon A.M.D. is selected by competitive examination, and is further trained at Netley and Aldershot, to make him perfectly acquainted with his military duties before he is put to perform them. All this training being necessary to secure efficiency, it must surely be giving officers and men and their families less than they are entitled to, to allow their medical welfare to be looked after by a practitioner who has had a much lower degree of training, simply because he is cheaper. To enable us to secure a greater amount of home service than the small portion allotted to us now, amongst many other reasons, made many of us look forward to belonging to regiments again; but this does not appear to have been recommended by the Committee. Those who hold the reins of office, and who appear to influence the medical journals, wish to wield the power altogether; and so, I suppose, things must go on as they are, and the desired change will not take place after all. Yet, if a vote were taken on the subject, the combatant officers, I believe, to a man, would vote for a return to the regimental system, and I think a very fair proportion of the A.M.D. would vote for a modified form of it; at all events, more than enough of us to fill all the appointments of regimental surgeons that would be required.—I am, &c., VERITAS.

SIR,—If the medical journals were to advocate a thorough reform of the service which they represent, instead of going into hysterics over the unpleasant revelations in the published Report of Lord Morley's Committee, they would, I think, in the end, find it more satisfactory for the future of their profession. Ten years of a bastard unification has led to the results we must all deplore. The doctrinaires have had it all their own way for that period. Surely the time has arrived when the Army should insist on having efficient medical officers who would sympathise with the men, live with their brother-officers, and not as aliens in mutton-chop lodging-houses, where they must lose the instincts and feelings of a soldier. When a senior surgeon-major, in a recent pamphlet, makes the following admission, viz., "No matter how good a physician or surgeon a man may be, no matter how hard he works at his profession, no promotion can be gained, nor can he extricate himself from the dead-level of mediocrity," the condition must be very bad indeed. Why is this? Because there is a hopeless stagnation in the ranks of the senior surgeons-major; the good, bad, and indifferent are promoted indifferently as they rise to the top of the list, and placed in positions of responsibility they were never fitted to fill, and in which they have made themselves ridiculous alike to their subordinates as well as to their military superiors. Men are actually looking forward with certainty to promotion who cannot ride a horse or put in a turn of foreign service, and are suffering from physical infirmities of various kinds. Other men promoted in a haphazard way for war service are allowed to retain their appointments for indefinite periods. If the Military service suffers from such a state of things, a drastic remedy will alone lead to efficiency. The self-evident remedies are a stricter non-selection for promotion to the ranks of brigade-surgeon, deputy-surgeon-general, and surgeon-general. Officers not promoted, and who have lost their health in the Army from no fault of their own, being given (if senior enough) the pension of brigade-surgeon, on next quinquennial period, on the report of a Medical Board. For the incompetent there can be little sympathy. If they have failed to learn manners or medicine in the ample time given them, they should not be allowed to block promotion to those who are quite willing to do both.—I am, &c., CHIRURGICUS.

SIR,—The evidence collected in connection with this inquiry is a fair survey of the Muir-Munro scheme in activity. With the exception of the few supporters and advocates of so-called unification, the great majority of military men, combatant and non-combatant, were strenuously opposed to the abolition of the old system of regimentalism, and many prognosticated its failure on being submitted to the test and strain of war. Has it not proved so? It is additional evidence that the less there is of departmentalism in the British Army, the better The supremacy of the civilian element in War-Office administration is, I think, an error, if not a wrong. Departmentalism, I fear, we must have, but the more of the soldier element in it, the more sympathy there will be with the Army generally. A combatant officer, at all events, should preside over each of the Departments. If this had been the case, would there have been the mistakes and misunderstandings which we know took place in the Medical, Supply, and Transport Departments during the recent campaign? By the chiefs of the expedition the medical officers are at one time blamed for their want of foresight and exertions, and at another lauded for their devotion and energy. The fact throughout was that there was an absence of organisation. For an explanation of the real causes of the disasters, those who are interested in the matter should peruse that celebrated despatch of Lord Clyde's on "Red-tapeism," which was published by his order when Commander-in-Chief in India, and on an occasion when he found that the hospitals of three of her Majesty's regiments had been devoid of quinine for several months. Trusting that the many recent military reforms will prove to be cyclical, and finally land us in a thorough and intensified scheme of regimentalism,—a system which reformers will find hard to improve upon, as pre-eminently adapted to the many and peculiar claims of our Indian, colonial, and home requirements, and in which all the factors which constitute unity will, if permitted, blend most harmoniously, I am, &c., IN STATU QUO.

The Egyptian Gazette has the following:—"In the inquiry into the alleged breakdown of the Army Medical Department in Egypt, Lord Wolseley appears as the chief complainant. But we cannot help thinking that he might be called upon to defend himself on a similar charge. While he affirms that on August 26 the hospital at Ismailia was without fly whisks and mosquito curtains, and had bad bread supplied, what was the state of his own department—the fighting line? The troops at the front were being rationed on a third of an Egyptian rye-bread biscuit for a meal; the horses were without any food at all, as they would not eat the Egyptian barley; and at the first brush with the enemy the guns became destitute of ammunition. In the words of a staff officer in a lecture recently delivered by him at Woolwich, 'the advance held a position of importance; there was no food for them anywhere along the line; they must starve anywhere. So the General decided they had better starve where they were.' Fortunately for the General, being British soldiers, they did so. It was three days before they got any provisions. If this was the state of affairs, we can readily understand that every nerve was being strained to push material to the front, and to ignore the wants of those in the rear. The doctors' demands for bedsteads and better bread, &c., would be as nothing compared to the cry for the absolute necessaries of life and defence from the front. On the other hand, if Lord Wolseley had time to make himself cognisant of the deficiencies, why did he not, as he could have done by a scratch of the pen, give the head officers the means of remedying them? It would have been more useful then to have lifted a hand to help these men out of their red-tape bondage, than merely to have stored in his mind the memory of these facts for their future condemnation."

SOLDIERS' BALANCES UNCLAIMED.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—The letters which have from time to time appeared in your valuable paper suggesting greater publicity for the lists of "Soldiers' Unclaimed Balances" have borne fruit, and your readers will be glad to know that Sir Walter Barttelot, M.P., has given the following notice:—"Sir Walter Barttelot.—Army (Soldiers' Balances Unclaimed).—Address for return showing the total receipts from soldiers' unclaimed balances since the passing of the Regimental Debts Act, 1863; the payments made thereout within seven years of the soldiers' decease; the amount of the payments made subsequently; the names and descriptions of the deceased soldiers; and the amount awaiting distribution in each case at the date the amounts were last advertised in the London Gazette." This return will not only be valuable as proving the great need of further publicity; it will give an impetus to recruiting, and tempt a better class of men to enter the Army, as young men intending to enlist would see that it is possible for private soldiers to set apart considerable sums of money for a rainy day.—I am, &c., EDWARD PRESTON (Author of "Unclaimed Money").

1 Great College Street, Westminster, June 13.

The Directors of the Briton Life Association (Limited) have issued their report for the year ending Dec. 31, 1882. The total year's income was £22,819 4s. 3d.

"SAPO CARBONIS DETERGENS" is a physician's name for a remedy prescribed for the past quarter of a century for every variety of skin disease. The public have found that as a preventive of small-pox, scarlet fever, and measles, it is unequalled. See that the Latin name described above, and the words "WRIGHT, SOUTHWARK," are on each wrapper, and branded on each tablet, without which none is genuine.

The Army.

1st Life Guards. The Prince of Wales visited the Windsor Cavalry Barracks on Saturday afternoon, and was present at the fête which annually closes the gaieties of the Ascot week. His Royal Highness, who wore the dark blue undress uniform of the Household Cavalry, drove on the Earl of Fife's drag, from Cowarth Park, Sunningdale, to Spital, which was reached shortly before 2 o'clock, where he was received by Col. Duncombe and the officers of the regiment. A large and brilliant company assembled on the lawn beneath. After witnessing the opening play in the cricket-match between the 1st Life Guards and the I Zingari, the Prince of Wales and the rest of the visitors lunched with Col. Duncombe in the officers' mess. At half-past 3 o'clock his Royal Highness went to the Riding-school to see a "musical ride," by non-commissioned officers and troopers of the regiment. The ride was directed by Capt. and Rdgmr. Robertson. His Royal Highness subsequently returned to the lawn in front of the barracks to watch the cricket-match, which, however, was very abruptly stopped by a severe thunder-storm.

4th Dragoon Guards. The regiment will remain at Brighton for another year, much to the satisfaction of the inhabitants, with whom officers and men are deservedly popular.

1st (Royal) Dragoons. The regiment is to be moved from Dublin to Newbridge.

2nd Dragoons (Royal Scots Greys). The regiment is to be brought over this year from Ireland, and will be stationed at Leeds.

4th Hussars. The paymastership is vacant by the death of Capt. H. A. Cherry, A.P.D., which occurred at the Home, St. Thomas's Hospital, on Monday, after a few days' illness. The deceased, who was son of Gen. P. F. Cherry, Madras Cavalry, was 37 years of age. He joined the Army, Dec. 30, 1864; became lieut., June 23, 1869; capt., Aug. 9, 1876; and, entering the Pay Department, May 19, 1879, was posted to his old regiment, with which he has since continued to serve. The funeral takes place to-day at Hounslow, with military honours.

5th Lancers proceed from Newbridge to Dublin.

6th Dragoons. The following correspondence will be read with interest by the friends of the regiment:—"Itshowe, Zululand, Feb. 1, 1883. Sir,—I find that at this spot a portion of the column that formed the escort to re-establish Cetewayo in authority over a portion of Zululand is to be left behind. Before the column thus separates, I wish to convey to you, and through you to the officers and men under your command, the great obligation which I feel under to you and to them for the hearty and cheerful co-operation, which has enabled us to congratulate ourselves upon successfully achieving the accomplishment of a somewhat delicate and difficult task. When we left this same spot on our way to Port Durnford, and descended into the Umhlatuze Valley, it became seriously evident that, notwithstanding the explanations of our intentions and object, which had, as far as possible, been made known to the people, our march was looked upon as an invasion, and it was due to the frank and friendly conduct of every individual member of the force to such natives as, in ones and twos, first trusted themselves in our camp, that the impression of our hostile intentions, so dangerous to the success of our mission, gave place to that of confidence, which afterwards prevailed. I beg also to congratulate you upon a peculiarity which in similar South African expeditions with which I have been connected has not been so marked, namely, the precision with which the programme of our movements from time to time has been carried ont, the result of which was that our communications and other contingent arrangements were very greatly facilitated. Another cause for congratulations is that the effects of the climate of the Umhlatuze Valley, so fatal at this season of the year to both men and horses, were by care and forethought almost wholly avoided. Allow me to tender to you personally my sincere thanks for the frank courtesy with which you have always treated me, and for the great assistance which your sober and intelligent view of the difficulties by which our task was occasionally beset always afforded me, and to say further that I shall always look back upon our expedition, and my pleasant companionship with yourself and your officers, with grateful remembrance.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient humble servant (signed), J. Shapstone. Colonel Curtis, Inniskilling Dragoons, commanding troops, Zululand." "Horse Guards, War Office, S.W., March 20, 1883.—Sir,—Having had the honour to submit to the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief your letter of Feb. 20, with its several enclosures, I am directed to acquaint you that his Royal Highness has been pleased to express his approbation of the manner in which the whole of the duties devolving upon Lieut.-Col. Curtice while in command of the military escort formed to receive and accompany Cetewayo, for the purpose of re-establishing him in authority over a portion of Zululand, have been carried out. You will accordingly be so good as to convey his Royal Highness's acknowledgements of the excellent services rendered on this important occasion by the officers, viz., Col. Bond, on whom devolved the chief portion of the arrangement; Lieut.-Col. Curtis, 6th Dragoons, commandant of the escort; Major Essex, staff officer; Deputy-Comy.-Gen. Boyd, whom you have specially mentioned in your letter; and also inform Major Froom, Major Martin, and Captain Parreidt, as well as Dr. Scott, who are referred to in the report of the Commandant of the military escort, that his Royal Highness has not failed to notice the favourable terms in which they have been spoken of. The names of Comy.-Gen. Boyd and Dr. Scott will be brought to the notice of the head of their respective departments.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant (signed), Wolseley, A.G. Lieut.-Gen. the Hon. L. Smyth, C.B., &c., Cape Town.

15th Hussars. Major E. Mortimer, late of the regiment, died at his residence, Belfield House, Mount Radford, Exeter, on the 10th inst., aged 81 years.

18th Hussars. The regiment is to be moved from Longford to Dublin.

20th Hussars. The regiment is to proceed from Cahir to Ballincollig. "Ex-Hussar" writes:—"The 20th Hussars have been two-and-a-half years at Cahir, with five detachments therefrom. After that they naturally expected to put in their last year of Ireland in Dublin. But, no; it is decreed that they go to Ballincollig, where they will have at least four troops on detachment. N.B.—This is the way one of the first cavalry regiments for active service is what they call 'brought together.'"

21st Hussars are to be moved from Dublin to Athlone.

Col. J. E. L. Walker has been appointed commanding Royal Engineer in China.

The five years' Staff service of Lieut.-Col. A. G. Durnford as Instructor in Field Fortifications at the School of Military Engineering having expired, he has been appointed to the command of the Royal Engineers at Shorncliffe.

40th South Lancashire Regiment. The Pioneer has the following:—"Now that every battalion of a regiment has two lieutenant-colonels and four majors, one would think there would be a plethora of field-officers for duty. In reference, however, to the last published Army List, it will be observed that in the 1st Batn. South Lancashire Regt. (late 40th) there is only one lieutenant-colonel and one major shown even as present, and that one major, though shown so, is not, for he has just reverted from the Auxiliary Forces and is expected to retire at once; so that out of six field-officers the battalion has one for duty, the remainder being all in England. This must be a great drawback to the efficiency of any corps. The list of absentees include an officer at the Staff College, who should be seconded whilst away from his regiment for two years; but those in authority will not see the necessity of it, though everybody else does."

41st (the Welsh) Regiment. A correspondent writes from Pietermaritzburg:—"Although we have been knocked about this last two years, and think it near time we were released, and some one else had a turn of the tin huts, dust, flies, &c., we try to keep ourselves alive, looking forward with hope that the Government will soon do something for us, and that we shall not be long separated from our wives and families. We hope to be settled by Christmas, as we have had two years apart already."

49th Berkshire Regiment. The regiment paraded at Gibraltar in review order on the 28th ult., under command of Col. Corban, to receive the bronze stars granted by the Khedive for their services during the recent campaign in Egypt. His Excellency the Lieut.-Gen. Commanding was received on arrival with opened ranks. The officers having been called to the front, his Excellency addressed the regiment in the following terms:—"Col. Corban, officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the Berkshire Regt.,—It affords me much pleasure, on the first occasion of seeing you on parade after your arrival at Gibraltar, to present to you, as I am about to do, the bronze star which his Highness the Khedive of Egypt has conferred upon the regiment, in commemoration of their services in that country during the recent campaign. It affords me additional pleasure to do so in the presence of that distinguished officer, Major-Gen. Adams, who himself commanded the regiment for several years. My memory carries me back a long time in connection with the Berkshire Regt. It is now nearly 30 years ago that this battalion, in company with the 1st Batn. Loyal North Lancashire, now also serving at Gibraltar (which were then the 49th and 47th Regts. respectively), together stormed the heights of Alma. I was present with them on that occasion, when they were commanded by the late Gen. Adams, a brother of the distinguished officer now on parade. These are pleasant memories to me, and I am glad also to observe that many of the men in the ranks wear the Afghan medal for service with the other battalion of the regiment during the late campaign in that country. Now you are about to receive a bronze star for your recent services in Egypt; and although it did not fall to your lot to take part in the decisive battle of Tel-el-Kebir, still you must remember that there were many places which at the time required protection in Egypt, and none more so than the great city of Alexandria, where you were stationed, and which was threatened by large forces of the enemy in the field. His Highness the Khedive, in speaking to me afterwards at Cairo, said that he could not be sufficiently grateful for the services rendered by the British troops, and for their admirable conduct both in the field and in the city. I will now present to you the bronze stars, and I hope you will all wear them to-morrow at the parade in celebration of her Majesty's Birthday, and that you may live many years to wear the decorations which the Khedive has given you, and which her Majesty the Queen has graciously permitted you to wear." To this Col. Corban replied in a few sentences, expressive of the satisfaction of the regiment at receiving from his Excellency's hands the decorations granted by the Khedive, and thanking him for the complimentary terms in which he had spoken of the regiment, which would, he trusted, never cease to merit the high character inherited by it. His Excellency then proceeded to pin the star on the breasts of the officers and warrant officers present, of whom the following is a list:—Col. Corban, Major Gillespie, Capts. Holden and Hemphill, Lieut. and Adjt. McCracken, Lieuts. Bean, Lee, Delamain, Nicholls, Swinton, Dowell, and Jamieson, and Serjt.-Major Mathieson. The non-commissioned officers then received their stars at the hands of his Excellency, and afterwards the men, who filed past by companies, the total number issued to the non-commissioned officers and men being 469.

ROYAL MARINES.

Lieut.-Col. John F. Sanders, R.M.L.I., completes his four years in his present rank on the 21st inst., and will then be entitled to promotion to brevet colonel, under the provisions of the last Order in Council. Lieut.-Col. C. B. Nurse follows on July 5.

The names of candidates from the non-commissioned ranks of the Royal Marine Light Infantry for the appointment of quartermaster have been called for, with a view, it is presumed, to the vacancy that will be caused on July 4 next by the retirement of Capt. Herring, Qrmr. at the Depôt, Walmer, who will reach the limit of age on that date. No other vacancy will occur in this rank, from age, until June, 1884.

The Admiralty have transmitted to the various Divisions of the Royal Marines the copy of a letter received from Capt. Fairfax, R.N., commanding H.M.S. Monarch, drawing the attention of their Lordships to the valuable and efficient services rendered by the battalion stationed at Port Said. Their Lordships have expressed their satisfaction at the receipt of this gratifying report, and have ordered it to be read at three successive parades.

56th Essex Regiment. Capt. E. E. Nicholls, late of the regiment, died at Jarvis, Ontario, on the 23rd ult.

63rd Manchester Regiment. In reply to Viscount Enfield, the Earl of Kimberley stated in the House of Lords on Thursday that the grant to the Seaforth Highlanders and the Manchester Regiment of full six months' field allowances had been approved of, and the War Office had been informed accordingly.

66th Berkshire Regiment. The official promulgation of the finding of the recent court-martial on Capt. and Pymr. Mayers was published on parade on Saturday last. A petition has been prepared by the prisoner for presentation, through the military authorities, to the Queen, asking that his case might be reinvestigated by a court of qualified accountants. The language of the petition is extremely forcible. The prisoner maintains that an independent inquiry by qualified accountants will prove that so far from his having embezzled public money, the War Office are indebted to him in a sum of over £500.

69th, the Welsh Regiment. The following farewell address was published by Lieut.-Col. FitzGerald on his relinquishing command of the regiment:—"Londonderry, June 2, 1883. 2nd Battalion, the Welsh (late 69th) Regiment,—The time has now arrived for me to bid you all farewell, but before doing so, I intend to make a few remarks. I joined the old 69th Regt. in the year 1846. Since then very many changes have taken place in the training of the officer, non-commissioned officer, and private soldier, more especially of late years. Now, more than heretofore, very considerable individual intelligence, and a much greater capacity for independent action, are necessary, in order to acquire a high standard of training in all field duties. From the very great interest and zeal now manifested by all ranks in this battalion to reach such a standard, I feel certain it will always be prepared to distinguish itself in the field, should an opportunity offer. Col. Rawlins, brother officers all, warrant and non-commissioned officers, I thank you most heartily for the able and willing support you have invariably afforded to me in maintaining the efficiency and discipline of the battalion during my period of command. Without such support, the battalion could not have been in the good order in which it was reported to be at our last annual inspection. While thanking all generally, I must make special mention of Major Borton, who has so well conducted the duties of the pay committee; of Capt. White, the adjt., and of Qrmr. Keeshan. The duties of both these officers are of a very laborious nature, and have always been performed to my thorough satisfaction. The serjeant-major and other warrant officers, the quartermaster-serjeant, orderly-room serjeant, and the colour-serjeants deserve special mention; the duties of the latter are very varied and irksome, and have always been well attended to. I thank the private soldiers of the battalion for their general good conduct both in and out of barracks, their readiness to obey orders, their smartness on parade, and the cleanliness of their quarters; all of which are the result of a good regimental system, well carried out. To each, I say, remember that you, as an individual, can contribute largely to the credit of your battalion, or you can do much to injure it. I must not forget the wives and families of the non-commissioned officers and men, who, by their uniform good conduct and cleanliness of their quarters, have earned my best thanks. I have only to add that it now becomes my painful duty, after a service of nearly 37 years on full pay in the regiment (the longest on record since its formation), to wish you all, officers, warrant officers, non-commissioned officers, and private soldiers, every happiness that you can reasonably desire for yourselves, and to assure you that I shall always feel deeply interested in the welfare of my old corps. Good-bye to all.—R. Fitzgerald, lieut.-col., commanding 2nd Batn. Welsh Regt."

100th Leinster Regiment (Royal Canadians). A correspondent signing himself "Maple Leaf" writes:—"In your issue of May 5, I see a communication from 'Canadian Militiaman,' dated at Ottawa, Feb. 20, expressing his satisfaction at the favourable reception an offer made by the Canadian Military authorities of 10,000 men, as a contingent (as occasion might require) had met with by the Home Government, and the able advocacy of the Army and Navy Gazette on the subject. The writer then speaks of the 100th Regiment, its number and title being written off the Army List without an effort being made to retain its nationality and prestige as a Canadian regiment. This being the first occasion the subject has been brought forward, I consider it due, not only to Canadian Militiamen, but my countrymen generally in the Dominion, to state certain facts, which my service in the gallant 100th Royal Canadians, from first to last, enables me to do. Twenty-five years have passed away since the loyal people of the Dominion nobly responded to the call of the mother-country in the hour of her necessity (the Indian Mutiny), and in the incredible short time of six weeks raised and placed at the disposal of her Majesty one of the finest regiments that ever stood under arms in the Line of the Queen's Army. I need scarcely mention with what enthusiasm the sons of the 'maple-leaf' came forward on that occasion; it must be still vividly in the memory of the Canadian people. It will be remembered in Canada that I was one of the first to come forward at the birth of the gallant 100th in 1858. I was also the last one present, of the original formation, at its death, June 30, 1881. I am somewhat at a loss to imagine why the Canadian people should feel a further desire to risk their all in a service from which they have so little to expect, and after the marked disregard of all their finer feelings by the home Government in their treatment of the 100th Royal Canadians. 'Canadian Militiaman' is mistaken, however, as well as all the people of the Dominion, if they imagine that the number and title of their gallant regiment was struck out of existence and the Army List without an effort being made to sustain the name, honour, and reputation of the corps. I was in command of the regiment at Umballa, Bengal, India, in May, 1881, when I received a telegram from the War Office, desiring to know if there would be any objection to dropping the Canadian title, as connection with Canada had practically ceased. I promptly replied,—'Dropping Canadian title would keenly wound loyal sentiments of Canadians, leaving impression that the spontaneous offering at critical period by Dominion and gratefully accepted by England was forgotten.' By the first English mail-day I followed up the above telegram with a letter to the War Office, more fully setting forth my views on the subject, stating that dropping the Canadian title would greatly injure the feelings of a brave, loyal, and generous-hearted people, who in the hour of need came forward and placed a splendid regiment at the disposal of the empire, and although the connection with the Dominion had practically ceased by the withdrawal of the depot from Canada, still there existed a strong feeling in favour of the regiment, and if the title were allowed to remain a grand nucleus would exist around which Canadians would rally if called upon to share in any struggle in which England might be engaged. I further respectfully suggested that in carrying out the reorganisation scheme, the connection with Canada in a military point of view might be easily re-established by one battalion being stationed at Halifax, N.S., where a recruiting depôt could be formed, filling with great ease the ranks of both battalions with the finest of men, thereby reviving all the enthusiasm of the Canadian people as it existed in 1858, when the 100th Royal Canadians were raised. This appeal had no effect further than allowing the words 'Royal Canadians' in brackets to remain, under the new title, to show what had become of the regiment. The remarks of the Army and Navy Gazette, in the issue of Jan. 27 last, are very suggestive and to the point, especially the latter part of the paragraph, where it recommends the restoration of the 100th Regiment to its rightful position in the Army, with its depôt in Canada. I would recommend the Canadian people to think over the subject of placing 10,000 men at the disposal of the Home Government maturely and well, before entering into any arrangement. They have only to look back on the breaches of faith with officers and men in the Army during the last twelve years, and last, though not least, as far as the Dominion is concerned, the total repudiation of all their noble, brave, loyal, and generous feelings, as exhibited in 1858, when the 100th Royal Canadians was raised, by expunging it from the Army List, as no longer of any consequence, and entirely regardless of the pain and disappointment such an act was sure to produce in the hearts of all people in the Dominion."

103RD ROYAL DUBLIN FUSILIERS. Lieut.-Col. E. A. Law, on the Retired List, died at Brighton on the 10th inst.

PAY DEPARTMENT. During the past month the following changes of station have taken place in the Pay Department:—Majors A. Ewing, from Ceylon, to 13th Regimental District, Taunton; W. The Auxiliary Forces.

MILITIA.

3RD BRIGADE, SOUTHERN DIVISION, ROYAL ARTILLERY. The brigade terminated its training on Saturday last. The whole of the officers were present, and the small deficiency of 27 below establishment shows that where the old system applies there is no falling-off in the number of men to be got hold of for this service. The men behaved very creditably all through. The police and inhabitants of Newport bear willing testimony on this point. They paraded for the last time at 9 o'clock on Saturday morning, and in two hours they gave in their clothes, and were paid and dismissed. The regiment was a thing of the past, and no one would have known that there had been such a body of men in the neighbourhood. On the Thursday previous the ordinary inspection had taken place, which, though searching, was on every point highly satisfactory, the officers and Militia serjeants getting great praise for the able way in which they drilled their men. The system carried out in this corps is calculated to get the greatest point of excellence possible in the time, and the routine of drill has been adopted and published in General Orders, as a model for all other Artillery Militia to work upon. It is wonderful and pleasant to think that men, when willing and properly managed, can be got into the excellent state of discipline such as the men of this regiment have of late years been noted for; in fact, each year they become more and more perfect, as more is required of them in work and discipline. The recruits have been better set up of late years, and this year especially the smart appearance of the men about the town has been a subject of general remark.

BEDFORDSHIRE REGIMENT. New colours were presented to the 3rd Batn. on Tuesday, on the garrison parade-ground, Shorncliffe. At 12 noon, the battalion, nearly 700 strong, were drawn up in line, and received Major-Gen. Newdigate, C.B., commanding the S.E. District, with the usual salute and inspection. The old colours were then trooped and marched off, the splendid band of the 1st Batn. the Bedfordshire Regt. playing. Three sides of a square were then formed, and the prayers ordered for these occasions were read by the senior chaplain of the garrison, after which the Duchess of Bedford presented the colours (made by Webb and Bonella, of Bond Street), which were received by Lieuts. Pym and Greenway. The Marquis of Tavistock then addressed the battalion, and Lieut.-Col. Sir John Burgoyne replied, after which the battalion marched past, and advanced in review order, both of which were done so well as to call forth loud praises from the several General and other officers on the ground. Major-Gen. Newdigate then spoke to the men of the battalion, and complimented them upon their extraordinarily good conduct, only two men having been entered in the regimental defaulter's book during the training, and only thirteen men being absent.

YORKSHIRE REGIMENT. Col. Chichester, C.B., commanding the 14th Regimental District, held an official inspection of the 3rd Batn. on Knavesmire, York, on the 8th inst. The battalion, better known as the 5th West York Militia, has been in training at Fulford Barracks for 27 days, and is under the able command of Col. Gunter, of Wetherby, along with whom are the following officers:—Major S. Bates, Lieut.-Col. Cadman; Capts. Hoole, Casson, J. Hoole, Lodge, and Hon. M. B. Hawke; Lieuts. the Hon. Edwin Lascelles, Hon. W. R. Fitzwilliam, Wardle, Walker, Ellis, Tomlin, Brooksbank, Lethbridge, Tempest, and Manley; Major and Adjt. Granger; and Qrmr. Hedingham. There were on parade 800 men. Gen. Cameron, C.B. (commanding the Northern District), rode down the ranks, and expressed his admiration of the excellent physique of the men, after which the battalion marched past. At the conclusion of the inspection, General Cameron addressed the men. He said that he could not allow them to leave the city without expressing his admiration of their conduct and character as soldiers. If the Line regiments in England could show the same physique and numbers as that regiment, it would be a very good thing for the country. He deeply regretted that the regiment would not be up in July, as he should have liked to show that regiment to the Prince of Wales as a specimen of Yorkshire Militia. Having expressed a wish that the regiment would keep up its good reputation in the future, Gen. Cameron left the field, and the inspection was proceeded with by Col. Chichester. The regiment executed several movements under the command of Col. Gunter, after which the command was taken by Majors Stratton Bates and Cadman. Capts. Hoole and Carson (the senior captains) also commanded during several movements, after which the command was resumed by Col. Gunter, and the battalion made the attack. The regiment was then drawn up in quarter-column, and addressed by Col. Chichester, who said that the inspection had been very creditable to the regiment, and he should be happy to make a favourable report. The total strength present was 888 men, being 88 over the establishment, as this fine battalion has been reduced from ten to eight companies, with many other Militia battalions, since last year. The average height of the men is 5 ft. 6¾ in.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

THE CUSTOMS ARTILLERY (2ND MIDDLESEX) were inspected at the Tower by Col. Finch, R.A., the chief attention on this occasion being given to infantry drill, though some of the men were put through a repository exercise. Lord Arthur Hill, M.P., was in command of 563 of all ranks, which is slightly better than on the last occasion. Col. Finch's concluding remarks were only to the officers, but it is understood they were satisfactory.

THE WEST MIDDLESEX RIFLES, which have just been made a Coldstream, instead of a Hounslow corps, were inspected by Col. Kent, their old superior, on Saturday. There were 494 in the ranks, under Col. Mears, and the inspection was held in Regent's Park.

11TH MIDDLESEX (DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE'S OWN MIDDLESEX REGIMENT) will be inspected at 6 p.m. to-day, on the Horse Guards' Parade, Whitehall, by Major-Gen. Higginson, C.B., commanding the Home District.

The 680 of all ranks which the London Scottish Rifles had out for inspection last Saturday, in Hyde Park, was the largest muster the corps has ever had, and is, indeed, higher by 83 than the corps had last year, which till now was the highest attained. Col. Lumsden formed his men into eight companies of 34 files, thus maintaining the reputation for broad fronts which the Scottish affect. Col. Moncrieff, of the Scots Guards, who made the inspection, said he had every reason to be satisfied with the corps. Lord Ranelagh's corps, the South Middlesex, had 735 on parade for inspection, also in Hyde Park, the same evening, this muster also being larger than that of last year, but not to so large a degree as in the case of the Scottish. Neither was the same fine company-breadth attained, the ten companies having but 30 files each; but then the South Middlesex is a battalion with an establishment 50 per cent. greater than that of the Scottish. Col. Moncrieff also inspected this corps,—in fact, the two regiments marched past together; and while all did exceedingly well, the capital salute of the South Middlesex officers was very apparent. The inspecting officer spoke very approvingly of the corps.

On the Horse Guards' Parade, the 2nd London Rifles were inspected the same evening by Col. Clive, and the 803 officers and men present made up not only the strongest battalion the corps has yet supplied, but made the largest metropolitan muster of the evening. Col. Vickers was in command, and had nearly an hour's drill out of his men before the inspection proper began, for it was past 8 before Col. Clive came on the ground. At the close of the evening, the inspecting officer gave a general approval of what he had seen, and recommended that a certain looseness of drill he had observed should be corrected, but specially mentioned for praise the good step of the men, which distinguished it amongst London Volunteer Corps.

Col. Walker, R.E., inspected the models of the Middlesex Engineers, at their head-quarters, South Kensington, last Saturday, and subsequently saw the corps at infantry drill at Wellington Barracks, where he told Col. Ball and his officers and men that in each of the three years he had made the inspection, he had noticed an improvement. The number was 673 of all ranks, again an improvement over last year.

COMMISSARIAT & TRANSPORT REORGANISATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—As you are doubtless aware, there have been recently printed and circulated some memoranda by Sir E. Morris, Commissary-General at Head-quarters, on the subject of commissariat and transport reorganisation. Any suggestions that this practical and experienced officer may make towards the solution of what is admittedly a question of the gravest importance cannot but be of very great value, and it is to be hoped that the suggestions which now appear in a clear and concise form will meet with the amount of consideration to which the acknowledged ability of their author entitles them. As one of the body of junior officers whose lack of training and experience the Commissary-General so seriously deplores, I may, perhaps, be permitted to express the satisfaction which all must feel at finding that attention is being drawn to the utter inadequacy of the opportunities afforded to the junior ranks of acquiring a knowledge of their duties in the field. I have more than once been on the point of writing to you on this very matter, and the publication of Sir E. Morris's memoranda seems to be a fitting occasion on which to carry out the intention. The first point upon which I would lay stress is this,—that so long as the system is maintained of putting junior officers in charge of sub-districts, and of combining the duties of expense store-accountant, barrack-master, and supply officer in one, it is useless to hope for a body of officers efficient, active, and trained for duties in the field. To render men fit for active service, it is necessary to assimilate as far as possible their duties in time of peace to those that would be required of them in time of war. This principle, which is recognised in every other branch of the service, is totally outraged in the Commissariat Department. No one knows better than Sir E. Morris that the post of officer in charge of barracks and expense stores entails, under present rigid regulations, an amount of clerical drudgery that must beget sedentary and inactive habits. With a weight of personal responsibility as regards the custody of stores in which there are constant transactions, with paragraphs staring him in the face directing personal verification of this and that detail, and with a staff of clerks that, so far as my limited experience goes, are becoming every day less reliable, the duties of the expense store-accountant savour far more of the clerk than of the officer. When a war breaks out, the unfortunate individual whose principal care has been the correctness of his ledger is suddenly ordered abroad, and finds himself confronted and surrounded by conditions with which he is totally unfamiliar. Mental and physical break-down is the result, and the State loses the services of an officer who, with proper training, might have done valuable work. It is the absence of any mention in the Commissary-General's memoranda of this question of barrack duties that impels me to draw attention to the serious obstacles which they throw in the path of the young officer. The difficulties and delays attending a transfer of an expense accountant's charge are such that as long an interval as possible is allowed to elapse before he is relieved. To be put in charge of barracks, amounts to being pigeon-holed for a number of years; and were the formation of classes of instruction carried out, it would happen—under the present system—that many officers would be prevented from attending them till they had become too old to benefit by them. In my own case—which I imagine is one of many similar—I look upon the years that have passed since I entered the Department as entirely wasted, so far as my training as a useful Commissariat officer is concerned. The duties I have had to go through would have been better performed by an officer twice my age, whose period of activity had been passed. The present constitution of the Department is alone to blame for this, and so long as it lasts similar waste of the best years (for training purposes) of the lives of junior officers will take place. The recent formation of a barrack section of Commissariat non-commissioned officers suggests the remedy. Let a similar section be formed of officers. This section might have somewhat the same relation to the Commissariat Department as the Coast Brigade has to the Royal Artillery. It might be officered from the ranks, and most of the officers so appointed would be glad to be left for some time undisturbed, doing duties which call for no great activity. The Sub-Districts could be rearranged. What now forms two should be made into one, with barrack duties allotted to one officer and supply duties to another, each having his own staff of clerks. A Supply charge can very easily be transferred, and the new arrangement would enable all Supply officers to attend the various classes of instruction which are rightly considered so essential to efficiency. There are many other points to which I should like to have referred, but this letter is already too long. In closing, I may say that there is no want of zeal among the junior ranks. It only requires direction. And Sir E. Morris may rest assured that every opportunity of making themselves acquainted with their duties that, by his representations, may be procured for them, will be eagerly taken advantage of by each and every JUNIOR OFFICER.

Army & Navy Gazette.
LONDON, SATURDAY, JUNE 16, 1883.

ON the Marquis of Hartington's accession to Office, as the head of our Military administration, we ventured to express the hope that a brighter day, or a less gloomy one, had dawned for the British Army, and to predict that the new Secretary for War would not decide important questions, as his immediate predecessors had done, without any regard to the feelings of officers and soldiers, and in opposition to those best qualified to form and to express sound opinions. It is very gratifying to find that this hope is being realised, and that this prediction is being fulfilled. Since Lord Hartington's arrival at the War Office, no more of those reforms from the results of which the Army, as an effective force, is fast disappearing, have been introduced; and now an important step towards restoration has been taken. But in order to have once more a valuable and efficient Army, the work now so unequivocally begun must be continued and extended, for optional long service will not suffice, and will not give great results at once. The changes introduced ten years ago did not do much harm at first, and it was only when they had been in operation for several years that their destructive tendencies were apparent. When unmixed short-service enlistment was first tried, we were told that there was no alternative, as the Army could not be kept up on any other system. And when at length the bad effects of the change became evident, we were assured that we should have to make the best of the new system, as any return to long service was impossible; and that we had got the immense advantage of a Reserve from which the ranks of the Army, whenever thinned by sickness and death, could be filled with trained soldiers. None of the expectations of the reformers have been fulfilled; all their schemes have failed, more or less completely and decidedly. The Army has been sacrificed for the creation of a Reserve which is not a reserve in any useful sense, because every man in it would be required to fill the places of the weakly and immature lads who must be left behind, if it were necessary to place two Army Corps in the field. Our position now is, therefore, far worse than it was in 1854, for then all our regiments were fit for service. The next concession to the opinions and feelings of the Army ought to be the restoration of their numbers and identity to those historic regiments of which we are so justly proud. Whenever that step is taken—and we believe it to be inevitable—there will be an outburst of rejoicing wherever any of our "Line Battalions" are quartered, in marked contrast with the sad farewells to old titles, old colours, and old facings, with which the Territorial system was ominously but fitly inaugurated. When that strong regimental attachment, which has pulled us through many difficulties, has been fostered, our Army will rapidly regain its lost efficiency, and retrieve its tarnished reputation. We cannot expect that those who have devised the reforms we are considering will readily or unreservedly admit that they have been disappointed. Lord Morley's attempt to reconcile the great and necessary change in the conditions of service announced by Lord Hartington with the short-service system, which is virtually abandoned, is only a harmless Parthian dart. Many such will doubtless be discharged, but little could be urged in favour of those reforms before they were tried; less can be pleaded in their defence, when they have palpably failed. In the columns of this paper the short-service system, the Army Reserve scheme, the Amalgamation scheme, the Territorial scheme, and the unification of the Medical Department, have been persistently opposed as unpractical and detrimental, and their eventual failure has been repeatedly predicted. They were all carried into effect under pleas of assumed necessity or expediency. and they have been sustained by plausible statements of questionable successes. The whole structure of Army Reform is collapsing like a house of cards, and no attempt to prop up the unsubstantial edifice by the voluminous investigations and trivial recommendations of committees should be tolerated.

The promotion of Captain and Lieutenant-Colonel H. F. Eaton to the rank of Major in the Grenadier Guards reduces the list of captains and lieutenant-colonels of the regiment to its normal establishment. Only two lieutenants and captains have to be promoted, Brevet Major Herbert and Captain Bonham, and then the subalterns, who have been standing still for thirteen years, will begin to make headway. Both in the Coldstream and Scots Guards the supernumerary Captains and Lieutenant-Colonels have been disposed of; but in the Coldstreams there are six, and in the Scots four lieutenants and captains to go up as captains and lieutenant-colonels, before the subalterns can hope to become captains. The prospects of the junior officers of the Brigade cannot, under the circumstances, be considered encouraging. By the old rules, it was complained that the favoured ones of the Household Brigade superseded their brethren of the Line. The tables have been turned now, and the Linesmen are making rapid strides in advance of the Guards.

We trust, now difficulty is experienced in obtaining recruits for the Army, that a modification will be made in the absurd rule which at present virtually precludes a soldier who has purchased his discharge from re-enlisting. Many good soldiers are lost in this way to the service.

Coming across a very smart serjeant of Artillery the other day, we got into conversation with him, and among other things, asked him to what division he belonged. "Upon my word, I don't know," was the reply; "all I do know is, I wish some of those gentlemen at the War Office had to soldier themselves. It strikes me they would then be less ready to upset everything." "But is not the new system working well?" we went on to ask. "Working well! Why, I have had fifteen years' service, and every year it has got worse and worse. I defy anybody to take any interest in anything now. The men we get are either jail-birds, or little better than schoolboys in uniform; and as for discipline, there is absolutely none. I don't know where it will all end, but unless there is a change soon, I assure you there will be no Army left!" So much for the views of the non-commissioned ranks. It has been complained that the officers who have protested against the new order of things are not to be relied upon, and that the non-commissioned officers are strongly in favour of it. It is strange that every non-commissioned officer expresses the same feelings of disgust at all the innovations upon which the reformers pride themselves.

The following incident, the truth of which can be vouched for, serves to show the present condition of the Canadian defences:—Scene—A camp. Company paraded; strength, 1 captain, 2 subalterns, 2 serjeants, 1 private. Enter Inspecting Officer and Staff. Inspecting officer: "This is your company Sir?"—Answer: "Yes, Sir."—"All men present not on duty?"—"Yes, Sir." Inspecting officer proceeds to inspect private very carefully. Inspecting officer (to Captain, having completed his official inspection)—"That will do, Sir; you may dismiss your company."—"Yes, Sir." Order obeyed; much laughter among onlookers. Inspecting officer shows signs of displeasure. The excuse for such a state of things was that the camp was ordered at a time which was inconvenient to the men (agriculturists), who would have suffered seriously in pocket by neglecting their civil employment. But the question will naturally arise, "Why was the camp ordered in September, and not in June?" Because the Government had an election in June, and in Canada politics carry everything before them. Reform clearly is called for in the Canadian Militia, which never will be worth anything until every man is required to do annually 16 days' work in camp, and corps not bringing a certain number of men—say, 36 out of a total of 42—are expunged from the service. The Dominion Militia ought not to remain any longer what it certainly is now, a perfect farce and a lasting disgrace to the nation.

Colonel J. Thompson completes his five years' service in command of the 30th Regimental District, Burnley, on the 12th inst. This is the only vacancy which will occur among the District Commanders this month.

We came the other day across a pamphlet entitled "The Revelations of the Pension List." The pamphlet is being largely circulated, with the object of showing up the iniquity of the system of pensions. Among the information furnished by the writer, we may quote the following, with regard to the military pay and allowances of their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Cambridge. The Prince of Wales is stated to receive from military funds the following sums, viz., as Field-Marshal, £5,999; as General, £2,075; as Colonel 10th Hussars, £415; as Colonel Royal Artillery, £415; as Colonel of Rifle Brigade, £238; or a total of £9,142. The amounts reserved for the Duke of Cambridge are, as Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, £4,432; as Colonel Grenadier Guards, £2,200; as Colonel-in-Chief 17th Lancers, £1,350; as Colonel-in-Chief 60th Rifles, £1,000; as Colonel-in-Chief Royal Artillery, £994; as Colonel-in-Chief Royal Engineers, £920; or a total of £10,896. We trust the compiler of this wonderful brochure is more happy with his other figures than he is with those relating to the two royal personages. We should have thought it impossible for anybody to have displayed such lamentable ignorance. But perhaps the figures have been given with the object of misleading. This would certainly appear to be the case.

The disappearance of the Army is assuming such proportions, that a short time back it was found necessary to lock-up certain barracks at an out-station at night, no sentries being available.

In a recent issue appeared a letter from a Major-General who lately commanded a regiment now in Egypt, describing how a man of 29 years of age and 12 years' service had gone to him expressing the regret of himself and his comrades that the military authorities would not permit their remaining in the Army or returning to it. If the present idea of the Canadian authorities is carried out, and the Infantry Schools are established in Canada, such men as those referred to by our correspondent will be just the sort which will be wanted for instructional purposes, whether as non-commissioned officers or men. If, then, our correspondent would direct the attention of these men to Canada for renewal of military service in a good climate, and with higher pay than that of the British Army, it might be good for them, and good for the Dominion. We may point out that men enrol in the Canadian Schools of Gunnery for three years, and we imagine that will be the term for the new Infantry establishments. Many are so well satisfied that they re-engage for a further term. Of course, only really good men, steady and sober, will be accepted. We feel sure that Major-General Luard, commanding the Dominion Militia, will gladly answer all inquiries on the subject, if "A Major-General" communicates with him direct.

We learn from Canada that a proposal has been submitted to and approved by the Canadian Government for the establishment of three Infantry Schools in the Dominion, on the same basis as those now existing for the training of the local artillery, and that steps will shortly be taken for carrying the scheme into effect. The want of some such training depôts has long been felt, and we are delighted to find that the local authorities are at length showing a disposition to listen to the voice of reason.

At the dinner of the Army Veterinary Department the other evening, the health was proposed of Principal Veterinary-Surgeon Collins, who is about to retire on a pension, after seven years' service at the head of his department; and Inspecting Veterinary-Surgeon Gudgin, upon whom devolved the duty of proposing the toast, bore testimony to the high esteem in which Mr. Collins is held, and the good work he has done, not only for his department, but for the service at large. It is not too much to say that a better departmental chief never entered the War Office. When Mr. Collins assumed the duties of his position, he found the whole Veterinary service at sixes and sevens. He set to work manfully to clear the ground before him. All manner of difficulties arose, but he succeeded, by means of his indomitable perseverance, in overcoming them one by one. His predecessor, Mr. Wilkinson, was a man far advanced in years, and previous to his death he had been for some years almost incapacitated. Hence it arose that the Army Veterinary Department had fallen into disrepute. Quietly and unostentatiously, Mr. Collins set about his task, and the condition of the department to-day is convincing proof of his ability. He has been content to labour in the interests of the service, rather than himself. He has conducted the veterinary arrangements of four campaigns. In Egypt, the Veterinary Department was the only one, according to Lord Wolseley, which did its work thoroughly well. This satisfactory state of things is in a large measure due to the care exercised by the directing hand. Not being a pushing man, Mr. Collins will doubtless leave the War Office unthanked and unrecognised; but he has the satisfaction of knowing that he has done his duty conscientiously, and that he will carry with him into his retirement the kindly feelings and good wishes of the entire veterinary profession, whose character he has done so much to raise in the estimation of the Army and the public. Mr. Collins will hand over his charge at Winchester House on the 28th instant.

We are not surprised to hear the evidence of the Commissariat and Medical arrangements in Egypt as detailed before the War Office Committee. The present system is to concentrate power in the hands of a very few officials at head-quarters, and to trust no one below them; thus responsibilities are avoided and duties evaded,—even Lord Wolseley himself being afraid, apparently, of ordering the articles the omission of which so much excited his displeasure.

The official titles of Military Departments and of individual officers have been incorrectly given in some late issues of this paper. For thus unintentionally following the bad example set by Lord Wolseley when giving his evidence before Lord Morley's Committee, the only excuse we can offer is that the titles of those Departments (the remodelling of which has been the favourite amusement of successive War Secretaries), and of the several grades of their officers, have been shifted like the fragments of glass in a kaleidoscope, till we have got bewildered by their varying combinations. There was certainly no intention of slighting the officers of the Ordnance Store Department, who have done their work in Egypt unobtrusively, neither incurring censure nor making complaints.

Major C. L. Harvey, 71st Highland Light Infantry, Garrison Instructor at Dublin, succeeds Major R. H. L. Anstruther, Rifle Brigade, as Garrison Instructor at Aldershot.

The service will learn with satisfaction that owing to the intervention of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the absurd and unjust rule by which officers of the Army Veterinary Department have hitherto been disqualified from presentation at Court has been rescinded, and that in future Veterinary Surgeons will be permitted to go to Court on the same terms as other officers. That such a rule should have been allowed to remain so long in force, having regard to the improved condition of the Veterinary Department, is not creditable to the officials of the Lord Chamberlain's Department. It will be especially gratifying to Veterinary Surgeons to find that the latest concession to their profession has been granted during the régime of the present deservedly-popular Principal Veterinary Surgeon, whose honest administration of his department has done so much to bring about many long-needed reforms.

The detachment of the 85th Regiment at Portland has been recalled to Aldershot, in consequence of the attenuated condition of the head-quarters at that station. The 2nd Queen's, now at Portland, has not sufficient men available to supply the necessary convict guards. Such is the Army, under the new and improved system! If recruiting is going on so briskly as Lord Morley tells us it is, where are the men?

We would suggest that the large sums of money which are now being saved through the apathy of the authorities in neglecting to keep up the establishments for the Army and Militia, as voted by Parliament, should be appropriated to increasing our ironclad fleet. This can be done, we believe, by the sanction of the Treasury.

The successor to Major-General Radcliffe, R.A., as Inspector-General of Artillery on September 1, is causing some interest, from the extreme paucity of Artillery Major-Generals who are fit for service. The name of the present Deputy-Adjutant-General of Artillery is freely mentioned as the officer most likely to obtain the post.

DEPARTURE OF PRINCE GEORGE OF WALES IN H.M.S. CANADA.

Prince George of Wales joined the Canada, to which corvette he has been appointed as midshipman, on Wednesday at Spithead. His Royal Highness arrived in Portsmouth Dockyard shortly before noon, accompanied by the Prince of Wales, Prince Albert Victor, and the Hereditary Princess of Saxe-Meiningen. The Royal party were received at the south railway jetty by Gen. Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, attended by Col. Sir Owen Lanyon, Capts. Lord Albert Seymour and Darby (aides-de-camp), and Rear-Admiral Herbert, Admiral Superintendent of the Yard; while there were also present Admiral of the Fleet Sir H. Keppel, Lord Colville of Culross, Lord C. Beresford, Capt. Fisher, and other Naval officers. The Prince of Wales wore the uniform of Hon. Captain of the Naval Reserve, Prince Albert Victor that of sub-lieutenant of Reserves, and Prince George that of midshipman in the Royal Navy. Upon their Royal Highnesses proceeding on board the Osborne, the Royal Standard was hoisted, and the harbour fleet acknowledged the presence of royalty by hoisting masthead flags. The Osborne at once got under weigh, the Canada being anchored at Spithead awaiting permission to part company with the flagship, which saluted with 21 guns as the royal yacht steamed out of harbour. As the Osborne approached, the Naval Reserve ships lying in the roadstead hoisted masthead flags, while the Canada, in addition to paying that compliment to the Royal Standard floating from the yacht, manned yards and fired a salute of 21 guns, as did also the Russian corvette Opritchnik. The Royal party upon reaching the Canada were received at the gangway by Capt. Durrant and the officers of the ship, who were honoured by an introduction to their Royal Highnesses, who were afterwards escorted round the vessel by Capt. Durrant. The Canada, with her white hull, trim masts, and new fittings, presented an admirable appearance. The Prince of Wales, who closely examined Prince George's quarters, the gun-room in which he would ordinarily mess with the other junior officers, and the study immediately adjoining, expressed his complete satisfaction with the arrangements made on board the vessel. At the end of the inspection the Royal party returned to the Osborne, where the Prince of Wales entertained a distinguished party at luncheon. Subsequently, permission was given for the Canada to get under weigh, and, accompanied by the Royal yacht, she proceeded past Ryde and Cowes towards the Needles. Off Yarmouth, she eased speed, and the Prince of Wales, Prince Albert Victor and the Princess of Saxe-Meiningen left the Osborne in the steam-pinnace and boarded the Canada to take their leave of Prince George of Wales. Capt. Durrant saw the Royal party back into the pinnace, the crew of the Canada cheering once more lustily. The Royal yacht then signalled, "Wish you a prosperous voyage," to which the crew of the Canada returned three hearty cheers. The corvette and the yacht then parted company, the latter returning to Portsmouth under Royal salutes, and the former steering a course down Channel, being ordered to cruise about to thoroughly test her seagoing capabilities. She will call at Plymouth, and on Saturday receive her final orders for Halifax, where she will report herself to Vice-Admiral Sir John Commerell, Commander-in-Chief, and then go on a roving commission on that station, Prince George of Wales, who is to qualify for the rank of sub-lieutenant, and to carry out without exceptional privileges the duties of midshipman, being expected to remain abroad upwards of two years.

The Admialty have awarded medals for long service and good conduct to the following petty officers and men—John Brooks, stoker, of the Indus; Giovanni Marmara sick-berth steward, of the Hibernia; John G. Dyer, naval schoolmaster, and N. Fitzsimons, captain of foretop, of the Amethyst; Edward Holton, captain's coxswain, of the Flying Fish; William M'Ilroy, writer (first class), of the Achilles; George Rudge, captain's coxswain, of the Agincourt; John R. Pascoe, chief boatman-in-charge, John S. Duncan, James Webber, William Kennedy, Walter J. Symes, Edward Hudson, and Henry Craugh, commissioned boatmen, and John Stoneman and William Parsons, boatmen, of her Majesty's Coastguard; William J. T. Curtis, quartermaster, of the Cambridge; John Jermyn, quartermaster, of the Duke of Wellington; Robert Mayhew, ship's corporal, 1st class, of the Triton; Matthew Humby, cooper, of the Neptune.

Rear-Admiral Sir William Hewett, V.C., has recommended Lieut. Frank H. Henderson, senior lieutenant of the Eclipse, to the Admiralty for the Royal Humane Society's medal, in recognition of his gallant conduct in saving the life of a seaman. While off Busreh, in the river Euphrates, an ordinary seaman fell overboard from aloft, and although the tide was running strong from four to five knots at the time, Lieut. Henderson, without waiting to divest himself of his clothing, jumped off the poop, and at great risk to himself succeeded after much trouble in saving the man's life.

It is stated in telegrams from Washington that severa American naval officers, believing war to be imminent between China and France, have applied to the Chinese Minister for appointments in the Chinese Navy. The Minister says he has no authority to issue commissions, and refers them to Li Hung Chang, care of the Viceroy at Canton. An announcement has been made at the Navy Department that leave of absence will be granted to officers waiting orders, if they desire to enter the Chinese Service.

The Myrmidon is being brought forward for commission at Sheerness.

THE POSITION OF REGIMENTAL OFFICERS.

SIR,—It has often been said that regimental officers have not accepted in a proper spirit the changes introduced in the Army in July, 1881, and that they have not attempted to co-operate loyally with the authorities in carrying out the spirit of the changes. I admit that I am one of those to whom the changes were distasteful when they were introduced, and to whom they grow more and more hateful as time goes on. I do not now refer so much to the Territorial scheme, whereby our old numbers, to which we were much attached, have been taken from us, and another regiment tacked on to us into which I am liable to be promoted and made to serve, unless I retire from the Army altogether, although I have paid nearly £3,000 for a company in my present regiment, and never contemplated serving, and do not wish ever to serve in any other. That may be merely a sentimental grievance. I consider it to be a great deal more; in my opinion, it is tantamount to a breach of contract on the part of the Government to hold my money, and at the same time, to alter the whole of the conditions under which I paid it. But be that as it may, I think every reasonable man will admit that we Purchase captains have been very hard hit by the recent changes by being placed, as we now are, in the position of "mud majors." When I joined the Army some seventeen years ago, the great aim of every officer who intended to make the Army his profession was to become a regimental field-officer. A regimental major in those days held a well-defined position. He had no company, with all its petty details, to look after. He never did orderly officer's work or, except under exceptional circumstances, sat on a regimental court-martial. He was addressed by his rank by all captains and subalterns, and in every way held a position above that of a company-officer. When I paid for my company, and I gave £1,000 over regulation for it, which was above the average price given in Line regiments, I did so not only to become a captain, but that I might the sooner obtain regimental field rank. It is contended that we paid merely to become captains. Why should we do so? The difference between a captain's and a lieutenant's pay is only about £95 a year, less than 5 per cent. on the purchase-money; the regimental positions of a captain and a subaltern were then, as now, much the same, each was at any time liable to do the other's work in the regiment, and each did the work of an orderly officer. In paying for my company, therefore, I say that I did so in order that I might the sooner obtain, by going over the heads of four-officers, the coveted position of a regimental field-officer. In 1881, I was near the top of the captains, and was expecting my majority in a short time, having then been about a year longer than the average length of time in that rank, when in July the new scheme came into force, and I found myself converted into a "mud major," that is, a captain in all but name and pay; and I am likely to remain in this position for some years, unless the disgust which I feel at the false position in which I am placed drives me out of the service. Of course, "mud majors" are not treated with any respect in a regiment, or considered as being really field officers. We are never addressed by the title of major, even by the most junior subaltern; and, indeed, why should we be, when we do exactly the same duties as he does? In my regiment, as in every other, I believe, there is a captain (or major) of the day or week, and a subaltern of the day. When the number of subalterns actually with the regiment gets very low, it is the custom to put subalterns and captains on one list as orderly officers. Now, majors are nothing but captains, and last year, as for a period of about six months the number of subalterns with my regiment averaged about three, we were all put on the one list for orderly duty, and I found myself doing subaltern of the day once a week, or oftener. This although I was a substantive major. When one finds oneself so treated, how is it possible for any man to respect his position, or to expect others to respect it? How can a subaltern look up to a major when he is doing exactly the same work, when a subaltern of six months' service can say, as was often said to me, "Smith (not Major Smith), will you exchange duties with me to-morrow?" or, "Will you pay my company for me?" I submit that this is more than a sentimental grievance; this levelling of all regimental rank is subversive to discipline, for when the men see the senior officers put on exactly the same level as the junior officers, they also cease to look up to or respect them. In no other service, indeed in no other branch of the Army, does such a state of things exist. In the Navy, the first lieutenant of a ship occupies a well-defined position above that of the other lieutenants, which is never lowered. In the Artillery, a major commanding a battery also has a well-defined position, and I believe that under no circumstances is he left without a subaltern under him, much less made to do subaltern's work. In my regiment, and I believe that in this respect we are no worse off than most others, during the last two years I can safely say that at no time have more than five or six out of the eight companies of which it is composed had more than two officers each present and doing duty with them, and during the whole of last year there was only an average of one officer per company present. Subalterns of less than a year's service were commanding companies. I was myself senior major with the regiment, but during nearly the whole year I had no subaltern to assist me, and had to attend to the most petty details of my company myself. I consider that such a state of affairs amply justifies me in being thoroughly disgusted with the changes introduced in 1881, and I now am merely serving on, without zeal and without any heart in the service, until I can get back the money I have actually paid, and so not be out of pocket by the service. If I retire now, I shall get back only £2,500,—that is, £700 over regulation which has been fixed as the average sum that used to be paid for companies in the regiment. As I paid £2,800, this will involve a loss of £300; if I stay on till I have 20 years' service, I can retire on a pension which I may at once commute for £3,200,—that is, I shall get £400 more than I paid; while in November next an officer who entered the Army after Purchase was abolished, and who never paid one farthing, can retire with a bonus of £1,200. Is this justice? It may be said that before 1881 there were brevet majors, and that we are now in this position. In answer to that, I say that brevet rank was itself an anomaly, and that brevet majors were never considered or respected as field-officers; they were, in all the regiments I have ever met, addressed by name only by all their juniors, while they themselves had to address the regimental field-officers by their rank, and they were in every way company-officers. No doubt the Government has a perfect right to abolish the rank of regimental major, and declare that in future there shall only be company-officers and lieutenant-colonels in a regiment, and to make a lieutenant-colonelcy the first real field rank that can be obtained; but I submit that it is an injustice and breach of faith to make that rule apply to us Purchase captains who paid large sums to obtain the old field rank. It is not too late even now for justice to be done. Let the War Office order that all "mud majors" who were Purchase captains on reaching the position of second senior major in their battalion, shall be deprived of their companies and granted the position of a regimental field-officer under the old system; or let them be offered a bonus to go. I myself would send in my papers to-morrow if I could even get back all I paid; but the proper sum to offer me would be the regulation value of my saleable commissions, and the same bonus that a non-Purchase officer of the same length of service can obtain. In my case that would be £1,800, so that in all I should get £3,600. If the Government would do this, I am sure they would at once get rid of a large number of discontented officers, who are now serving without any heart in their work, only looking forward to the day when they can obtain a pension, and be put to some extent on an equality with their more fortunate post-Purchase brother-officers. I also submit that the position of majors in a Line regiment should be defined and raised, that no regimental field-officer should ever be left without at least one subaltern under him in his company, and that he should not be required to do the duties of a subaltern. I could say a great deal more on this subject, but this letter is already of an inordinate length.—I am, &c.,

A DISGUSTED "MUD MAJOR."

The Mediterranean Squadron under Vice-Admiral the Lord John Hay, at present undergoing its summer cruise, has received a perfect ovation in every Austrian port it has visited. At all the places in Dalmatia at which the squadron has touched, the courtesy of the officers and the conduct of the men have produced the most favourable impression.

Advices from the Channel Fleet at Vigo state that a court-martial was held on board the Sultan on the 6th inst., on Lieut. Edward Clarke, of the Achilles, who was charged with neglect of duty as officer of the watch. He was found guilty, reprimanded, and dismissed his ship. The defaulting officer, it was alleged, lay down in the charthouse during his watch.

The Sampson, the largest tug at Sheerness Dockyard, left on Monday with stores and provisions for a navigating party from the Royal Naval Barracks, which is to bring the Leander, a new vessel, built for the Government by Messrs. Napier and Sons, from Glasgow to Sheerness, where she is to be commissioned as soon as possible. The navigating party proceeded by rail from Sheerness to Glasgow.

As will be seen in our advertisement columns, it will be noticed that the Archbishop of Canterbury will be the guest of "Old Wellingtonians," at their dinner which takes place on July 3.

The Committee of the Royal Artillery Institution have decided upon the following subject for the prize essay of 1884:—"The Machine-gun; has it a Place in the Field, in a Siege-train, or in a Fortress?" Candidates are restricted to officers of the regiment on full pay and members of the Institution, and the essays are to be sent in, under seal, before April 1 next. The gold and silver medals of the Institution are the rewards.

THE CHANNEL SQUADRON.—NO SUMMER IN ENGLAND.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—A rumour is current that the Channel Squadron is not to be at home in England till September. Should this prove true, it is needless to say how much it will be regretted by all those concerned, both officers and men. On leaving England last February, it was generally understood that we were to return in the summer. But now it seems we are to spend this most enjoyable time of the year abroad, or at least away from our home ports. Many of us have not spent a summer in England for several years, and we were quite looking forward with pleasure to the prospect of a month or two in the summer with our families and friends. Last year we were deprived of this, owing to the war in Egypt, and our being required there,—a circumstance which none of us regret; but it is difficult to see why the men should be kept away from their sweethearts and wives this year, for no apparent reason other than that of contributing as little as possible to the comfort of Jack and Joe, who would certainly seem to have earned a few weeks' holiday, after five months' incessant routine, drills, and exercises of all sorts. We cannot believe this to be the wish of their Lordships, who have always shown the utmost consideration in anything relating to the personal comfort of the officers and men of the Fleet. We hope to find that this rumour is false, and that on leaving Bantry Bay in the middle of July we shall see the ships of the Squadron ordered to their respective head-quarters.—I am, &c.,

HOME (?) STATION.

The gunboats Firm and Ariel, which have undergone extensive repairs at Sheerness Dockyard, were put out of basin on Monday to take in coals, &c. They will shortly leave, to enter upon their usual duties.

The Russian man-of-war Opritchnik, arrived at Spithead from Cronstadt on June 10, bound for China, and saluted the garrison and port.

An examination has been made at Sheerness Dockyard of the keel of the Wye, Staff Com. A. Miller, to ascertain if she sustained any serious damage from her recent stranding in the Gulf of Suez, and it has been found that beyond the starting of a few plates, very little harm has been done.

The Admiralty have directed that in future all printed documents, such as departmental reports, &c., shall be numbered and registered when issued, the name of each recipient and the number and nature of the document issued being entered in a book to be kept for the purpose. The object of this order is to prevent the possibility of copies of documents drawn up specially for the guidance and information of their Lordships finding their way into the hands of the representatives of the Press. The Admiralty have thought it necessary to take these precautions for the future, owing to the report of the Naval Pensions Committee and other official documents having been made public without their previous knowledge or consent.

Several letters have lately been written by paymaster-serjeants and orderly-room serjeants with intent to depreciate the position of Quartermaster-Serjeant. The most recent writer states that it not unfrequently happens that a corporal, or one of less rank, is appointed to the position. "Q. M. S." writes, with regard to these statements:—"Any one with the least acquaintance of regimental matters knows this to be absurdly incorrect. The fact is, the quartermaster-serjeant is invariably selected from among the old colour-serjeants, but sometimes a paymaster-serjeant or an orderly-room serjeant is promoted to the position. Exception has also been taken by them to the Horse Guards' ruling that the quartermaster-serejant is at all times the senior non-commissioned officer; but the authorities could not well arrange otherwise without violating the spirit of regulations, standing orders, and traditions, closely bound up with and as old as the regimental formation itself. These have always recognised the quartermaster-serjeant as the next in rank to the serjeant-major."

It has, the Allahabad paper understands, been decided that, as a general rule, the supply of all articles of Line gear to mounted corps of the British service is in future to be arranged for by the Ordnance Department and by commanding officers, the Commissariat Department being wholly relieved of the duty.

The Pioneer believes that the Government of India has recommended the appointment of an Inspector-General of Volunteers, so that the sanction of the Secretary of State is all that is now required to give effect to the measure.

We are requested to announce that the annual cricket-match between Past and Present Staff College will be played on the ground at the College on Saturday, 23rd inst. The game will commence at 11 o'clock.

Among the Alexandrian garrison is included the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, with 68 sick, out of 847.

This regiment, and the Gordon Highlanders, would clearly be better removed, before the trying autumn weather comes on.

Leave of absence has been granted to Major D. Roebuck, Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, from June 7 to September 30; Major Murray, R.H.A., from June 2 to June 16; Captain W. Barron Stanton, Gordon Highlanders, from May 20 to September 17; Surgeon G. S. Lewis, Army Medical Department, from June 1 to June 8; Lieutenant W. T. Myers, from May 29 to June 13.

The Calabria, which left on May 26, took eight officers, eight serjeants, and 75 rank and file.

Surgeon W. H. P. Lewis, Army Medical Department, has returned, and is posted to the Citadel, Cairo, for duty.

Assistant-Commissary-General Nugent, Commissariat and Transport Staff, takes up duty at Alexandria, and Deputy-Assistant-Commissary-General Rainsford will be Staff Commissariat officer with the 1st Brigade, Cairo.

The following officers have passed in subjects a and b, sec iv., par. 28, Queen's Regulations :—Captains A. H. Pain and S. Kevill-Davies, and Lieutenants H. W. Denne and C. Macready, all of the Gordon Highlanders.

Surgeon M. Dixon is appointed to medical charge of the Head-quarters Staff and Departments at Cairo, vice Surgeon-Major Warren, Army Medical Department, embarked for England.

Yesterday, at Ramleh Barracks, was held an inquest, by Mr. Consul Cookson, on the body of a soldier of the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, who was shot by one of his comrades. The jury took a merciful view, and returned a verdict of manslaughter. Deceased was only 18 years of age, and had gone through the campaign without a scratch.

Some discontent is expressed at the delay in granting the English medals. The non-commissioned officers of the Army Pay Department have not received either medal or star.

(FROM AN OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENT.)

Fifteen Infantry battalions are now assembled here, and the camps have assumed an air of business-like activity. Seven battalions are Militia under-going annual training. They are all under canvas. Up to the present time, with the exception of a thunderstorm on Saturday last, they have had splendid weather. The Royal South Down, under the command of Lieut.-Colonel Waring, did not arrive till Monday afternoon, having been much overdue. This corps is composed mainly of youths from the agricultural districts of Down and Antrim, the most loyal counties of Ireland. As to physique, the Downshire Regiment will favourably compare with any in Camp. As much cannot be said of some of the English Militia regiments, in the ranks of which are too many "weedy" lads, who would never become men under the most favourable conditions. The three Infantry Brigades were exercised by their Brigadiers on Tuesday last, in the system of attack—the 1st Brigade on Rushmoor, the 2nd Brigade on Eelmoor Plain, and the 3rd Brigade on the Queen's Parade. Sir F. Fitz-Wygram exercised the Cavalry Brigade in the Long Valley on Monday and Tuesday. A rumour has been in circulation during the week that the Prince and Princess of Wales will visit the Camp at an early date. We are more likely to be soon visited by the Commander-in-Chief, who, as yet, has only made his spring inspection. In accordance with instructions issued, General Officers commanding brigades, the C.R.A., C.R.E., officers commanding regiments, batteries, and troops, and Staff officers, assembled at the Prince Consort's Library at noon on Wednesday, to meet Sir Daniel Lysons. The business of the meeting occupied more than an hour, and is understood to have been explanatory of certain matters connected with contemplated exercises and manœuvres during the summer months. Captain Hayerup, of the Norwegian Army, visited the Camp on Tuesday last, and saw the infantry brigades at drill, after which, accompanied by Lieutenant-Colonel Sartorius, V.C., D.A.Q.M.G., he visited all the institutions and objects of interest in the command. It has been notified here that when a soldier is allowed to consent to the application to him of the provisions of Part 2 of the Army Act, 1881, his service should be reassessed at once. It has been found that in some cases the neglect of this precaution has led to men being detained in the service too long. Major-General R. P. Radcliffe, R.A., Inspector-General of Artillery, will make his annual inspection of the Royal Artillery next week. At the Army Rifle Meeting at Cæsar's Camp Ranges on July 26, 27, and 28, in the match for "The Regimental Trophy," in addition to money prizes and a silver trophy, to become the property of the winning corps, Sir Daniel Lysons presents a silver cup to the competitor making the highest aggregate score in the match. Also, in the "Infantry Running Match," in addition to money prizes, H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, K.G., C.B., presents a challenge cup, to be kept in the serjeants' mess of the winning team. The "Bowyers" prizes (15 guineas presented annually by the Worshipful Company of Bowyers) will be shot for by teams of ten; open to battalions serving in Great Britain. Two lectures were delivered by Veterinary-Surgeon to the Staff W. B. Walters, Instructor at the Army Veterinary School, on Thursday and Friday, on the very interesting subject of the "Inspection of Live Cattle and Dead Meat." Three boards of examination will assemble on Monday next to examine 25 officers and 50 serjeants in Part II. of the Musketry Syllabus for company certificates. The examination will be conducted and marks subsequently assigned by the members of the Boards, in accordance with the Memorandum, dated Horse Guards, July 3, 1882, and the Syllabus dated May 9, 1883. The 57th Army Signalling Class, composed as follows, assembled on Monday last at the Signalling School for a course of instruction :—Captains Fenton, McDonnell, and Browell, R.A.; Lieutenant Hibbert, 2nd Dragoon Guards; Lieutenant Wolfe, 2nd Dragoons; Lieutenant Coke, 15th Hussars; Lieutenant Chater, 1st Battalion, 9th; Lieutenant Shadwell, 1st Battalion, 12th; Lieutenant King, 1st Battalion, 6th; Lieutenant Minchin, 1st Battalion, 16th; Lieutenant Archdale, 2nd Battalion, 23rd; Lieutenant Northey, 36th; Lieutenant Evelegh, 32nd Light Infantry; Lieutenant Thorold, 76th; Lieutenant Wyld, 37th; Lieutenant Gilpin, 82nd; Lieutenant Beaumont, 3rd Battalion, 60th Rifles; Lieutenant Snow, 64th; Lieutenant Aytoun, 91st; Captain Norcott, 1st Battalion, Rifle Brigade; Lieutenant the Hon. A. Somerset, 2nd Battalion, Rifle Brigade; Lieutenant Urmston, 5th Punjab Infantry; Captain Edge, Royal Marine Light Infantry; and 23 non-commissioned officers from various Infantry and Cavalry regiments. Major A. C. Hamilton, R.E., has been appointed Commanding Royal Engineer, Camp, from the 12th inst., vice Colonel Gossett, R.E., retired on half-pay. The following Staff-College officers, undergoing instruction at the Camp, in accordance with regulations, are attached as follows :—To the Cavalry Brigade—Major Allen, 1st Battalion, 15th; Major Morris, 58th; Captain Stephenson, 56th; Lieutenant Codrington, Coldstream Guards; Lieutenant Hutton, 52nd; and Lieutenant H. de H. Haig, R.E. To Royal Artillery—Captain Leefe, R.M.A.; Captain Gordon, 1st Battalion, 21st; Captain Macdonald, R.E.; Lieutenant Bromfield, 2nd Battalion, 22nd; and Captain Lloyd, Bengal Staff Corps. To 3rd Infantry Brigade—Major James, Scots Greys. Surgeon-Major Waghorn, A.M.D., has assumed medical charge of the officers, women, and children, South Camp, vice Surgeon-Major Ferguson. Surgeon-Major Warren, A.M.D., having arrived for duty, has assumed medical charge of the 2nd Station Hospital, vice Surgeon-Major Elgee. A farewell ball to Sir Daniel and Lady Lysons, by the officers of the Division, is probable at the latter end of July. Several cases of diphtheria have occurred recently among the troops quartered in the Permanent Barracks. In the case of a young soldier of the Cavalry Brigade admitted during the week, the disease was of a most malignant type, and terminated fatally in a few hours

THE RETURN TO LONG SERVICE.

The following memorandum has been issued, showing the changes recently approved in regard to extension of service with the colours, and enlistment in the Brigade of Guards :—

Under the existing Regulations :—1. Men for all arms are enlisted for 12 years' Army service—viz., seven years with the colours (to be extended to' eight years, if serving abroad), and the remainder in the Reserve. 2. Non-commissioned officers, corporals, bombardiers, and 2nd corporals are entitled to extend their colour service to 12 years. 3. Bandsmen, pipers, and artificers, after completing three years' service, and trumpeters, drummers, and buglers in the last year of their Army service, are allowed to extend for 12 years' colour service, on the recommendation of their commanding officer. 4. Lance-corporals and acting bombardiers during the last year of their Army service, gunners selected for the Coast Brigade after completing five years' service, soldiers in very special cases during their last year of colour service, and soldiers on embarkation for foreign service are allowed, on the recommendation of their commanding officer, to extend their colour service to ten years. In the last case, the extension may be to a less period than ten years, and a bounty of £2 is offered. 5. Officers' servants serving at depots are permitted to extend their service from year to year up to a total colour service of nine years. 6. Re-engagement for a second period of service, with pension, is permitted as follows :—(a.) Serjeants, at any time after completing nine years' service, subject only to the veto of the Secretary of State. (b.) Corporals, bombardiers, 2nd corporals, bandsmen, pipers, and artificers, at any time after completing nine years' service, on the recommendation of their commanding officer. (c.) Schoolmasters in their twelfth year of service, subject only to the veto of the Secretary of State. (d.) Trumpeters, drummers, and buglers, during the twelfth year of their Army service, on the recommendation of their commanding officer. (e.) Other soldiers during their twelfth year of service, if of good character and specially recommended by their commanding officer.

The following modifications have been adopted until further orders :—7. The privileges of extending colour service and of re-engaging as shown in §§ 2-6 are continued, with the following additions :—8. Men will be allowed, after completing three years' service, to extend their colour service so as to complete 12 years' service with the colours, with the privilege of re-engaging in their twelfth year of service for a second period of service and for pension, provided they are physically qualified, and are recommended by their commanding officer. 9. A bounty of £2 will be offered to men, of more than three and less than seven years' service, in regiments having their foreign battalion in India, who are willing to extend their service to 12 years with the colours. These men will be available for drafts during next trooping season. 10. To meet the deficiency in the Guards,—(a.) A bounty of £2 has been offered to men of Line regiments returning from India who are willing to extend to complete in the Guards the remainder of their 12 years' service. (b.) The offer of extension of service, as shown in § 8, will apply to men now in the Guards. (c.) A new enlistment will be adopted for the Guards—viz., for three years with the colours and nine with the Reserve, with power of extension at any time during the three years to complete seven years, and subsequently to complete 12 years with the colours, after which re-engagements will be allowed as in other arms. (d.) Men enlisting for three years with the colours who enter the Reserve after three years' service will not receive deferred pay; but if they extend their colour service, they will be allowed deferred pay from the date of enlistment.

War Office, June 4, 1883.

THE FRENCH IN WESTERN AFRICA.

The "policy of adventure" which France is pursuing in Western Africa can be productive of neither profit nor honour. France has no long-standing local disputes with native chiefs. Her present action is unnecessary for re-establishing national prestige. With the exception of Gaboon, her connection with any part of the coast below Sierra Leone has long ceased. It is only when the French mind is seized with a sudden frenzy for exterior development that we find her picking up old clothes which she cast off years ago. To the west of the Gold Coast Colony she held the territory from 3° 12′ W. long. to Cape Lahou, Grand Bassam being the chief town. Within that boundary several forts, or fortified stations, were occupied until 1870, when the troops were withdrawn, and the whole of the country over which French influence was asserted let to the British mercantile house of Swanzy and Co., who, in the lagoons formed by the Assini and Tando rivers, engaged themselves in legitimate commerce, which they still continue. Whether, in the present aspect of affairs, they will be allowed this privilege without interruption, may soon be learned, as it is unlikely that France, with a squadron on the coast, will omit to reassert her right to this territory, especially with the prospect of gold in the adjoining country, which trade she may endeavour to divert from our protectorate. Further east, between Whydah and Lagos, is the independent native kingship of Porto Novo, on the east bank of the Denham Waters, and about four miles from the sea beach, the outlet to which is through the lagoon passing Badagry to Lagos. Occasionally a small outlet direct to the sea is found at Kotonu, but so unoften as to be unreliable. Porto Novo has always been troublesome; the King, who is related to Dahomey, was a large contributor to Portuguese successes in slave-trading, and is notorious for human sacrifices, which are to the present day committed sub rosa. In 1852, a treaty was made with him for suppressing slave traffic, and opening the country to missionaries and traders; but from his inland position, it was not always then convenient to forcibly remind him of his non-observance of engagements. In 1861, an expedition was sent from the Arrogant to punish him for breaches of treaty and outrages on British subjects, and in the following year the adjoining country was ceded to us, and became the British settlement of Lagos. Subsequent events prove the mistake of the Home Government in not acquiring Porto Novo. A year after our occupation of Lagos, France assumed a protectorate over Porto Novo, through the Admiral of her squadron; but as we were such close neighbours, it was necessary to establish a convention, "to place on a more secure and definite basis the relations of the Government of Lagos with that of the French Protectorate of Porto Novo." The intention of France in thus hastily undertaking responsibilities, so close to our territory, then bore only one interpretation, as the slave-trade was becoming unprofitable, and her interests in Porto Novo were nil. After assuming a protectorate, she did not attempt to occupy the place, simply making the representative of M. Régis (ainé) Consul for Porto Novo and Whydah, where the disinterestedness of that firm, its high sense of honour, and its grand prospects as a Christianising agent were exemplified by that abominable hypocrisy, "free emigration." The national idea of responsibility appears to have lapsed very soon, as the individual calling himself French Consul was treated by the King of Dahomey as a servant, and ordered not to leave Whydah, from which he escaped to a French man-of-war, though the proceeding did not affect the dignity of France sufficiently to induce a protest. Her intentions in lately re-establishing a protectorate over Porto Novo can easily be understood, and Lagos merchants will undoubtedly suffer therefrom. The proceedings of the French Commodore in April last have by this time been followed by occupation with an armed force, which could only be effected with difficulty, as the surf breaks with heavy rapidity, a smooth beach being almost unknown; and it is not likely that the Government of Lagos would allow them a passage through our territorial waters. The Under-Secretary for the Colonies, when asked last week what steps would be taken in reference to the French annexation of Porto Novo, replied:—"It is impossible to view without concern this action in a place so closely interwoven with our own possessions; but the question is not of a nature to be dealt with by the local authorities, and will be treated in a friendly way between the two Governments." We doubt if France will care to assume a cordial attitude in any negotiations that may be undertaken. Our Government must have lost sight of the fact that, by Treaty, England has priority of right at Porto Novo, In the 6th Article of the Treaty of January 17, 1852, subjects of our Queen may trade freely, and are to receive equal privileges with other nations; and by an additional article of May 1, 1861, Englishmen may buy or sell lands in Porto Novo, a resident agent may be appointed to watch over their interests, and the King is to keep the navigation of the lagoon between Badagry and Porto Novo free from obstruction. It will be seen that the latter concessions were only made eighteen months before the French assumed a protectorate, therefore our Government was greatly to blame for not insisting on the maintenance of our treaty at the time of annexation. Sir Samuel Rowe, the present Governor of the Gold Coast, is a strong-minded man, with great administrative tact, and our interests could not be in better hands. It is reported that he proceeded to Porto Novo last month to secure the execution of the King's engagements with us. In the Bonny and other oil rivers, English influence has always predominated, and the trade developed thereby. We now find our Continental neighbours attempting to induce the native chiefs to depart from their old policy and ally themselves to France. The reply of the chiefs to such friendly overtures shows that they possess more honesty than the representatives of "La Grande Nation," who imagine that because we have not our interests guarded by bristling bayonets, they are at liberty to walk in and take possession. A gallant Admiral warned our Government twenty years ago that the oil rivers of Africa would at some future period be coveted by France, and that the sooner we afforded them the protection of our flag, the earlier would French visions of Colonial acquisitions in that territory be dispelled. But our Governments are slow to see, and deaf to advice, until the misfortune of being "too late" comes with unpleasant infliction. Englishmen cannot look with indifference on the advance of the French from Senegal towards Central Africa. A fortified position has been established at Bamakou, on the Niger, as the first terminus of the railway between Senegal and Algeria. Twenty millions of francs have been already voted for this work, and it will be pushed on to the Niger from Medina, situated about 900 kilomètres from St. Louis, the river being navigable for that distance. Many of our readers may remember the assurance of Sir Charles Dilke, when Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, two years ago, that the public mind need not be disturbed at the Treaties made by France with the chiefs of the Upper Niger. She is now making rapid strides over the ground trodden by Mungo Park, with probably better success than attended that distinguished traveller; and when the railway reaches the Niger, will monopolise the trade from its higher waters, and finding an outlet in the Bight of Biafra, close to the Bonny, Calabar, and other oil rivers. It was to this particular fact that attention was called by the distinguished officer we have previously referred to. France undoubtedly aims at acquiring the whole of this valuable territory, and absorbing the large trade therefrom with Liverpool. To the southward of the Gaboon, France has hoisted her flag as far as Loango, without respect to our engagements with the tribal chiefs of Cape Lopez, Zanga Tanga, and other distinct kingships, of which Loango is one. In the interests of humanity, civilisation, and development of trade in those parts, Naval officers of high standing and praiseworthy zeal effected those treaties in their Sovereign's name, and were untiring in their endeavours to ensure their fulfilment. While millions of money, and, more important still, the lives of gallant officers and men were sacrificed in fulfilling their nation's wish, France stood by watching the work, with promises of aid, which were as worthless as the paper on which they were written. Can any one point to a period at which she afforded us material support in stamping out the slave-trade? The frequent protests on her part against the proceedings of British Naval officers who were in possession of undeniable proofs of the complicity of French subjects, showed a disregard of justice, and proved that she must have been aware that her flag was used as a protection to those who by law were amenable to capital punishment. It is in these parts which we so constantly and carefully guarded, until the foreign export slave-trade was extinct, that France adopts colonial conquest to gratify the lust for honour and glory, which has, of necessity, been kept back by the lesson she was taught in 1870-1, and now again bursts forth. Lord Clarendon's statement thirty years ago, "that the interests of commerce rendered it imperative upon her Majesty's Government to maintain the right to unrestricted intercourse with that part of the West Coast of Africa which lies between 5° 12′ and 8° south latitude," has not been altered by subsequent events, and should be the policy of the present Ministry. It contained the true ring of our national freedom of action, when we knew that our interests and those of European nations were identical in leading African natives to civilisation, and that we should be foremost in such humanitarian efforts. Such good results are only to be attained by great practical efforts, and not at the point of French bayonets. Physical force can only be maintained for a time in such a climate; it is the untiring zeal of philanthropists which induces a pacifying effect, and brings the native mind to the desired point. The Congo, where French enterprise is now largely displayed, is a new field, which in the future will be productive of a large and highly remunerative trade. Unfortunately, some of our people lost a considerable sum in attempting to develop the copper mines of Bembi, in Angola; not from any lack of produce, but the uncertainty of transport by baskets on the heads of natives, who became lazy and parted with the ore, which eventually enriched those who had no share in the undertaking. Such a failure would be no deterrent if the country were in proper hands, though the prospect at present seems to have reached the indefinite stage of realisation. The attempts of the Association Internationale Africaine, and of the Comité d'Etudes du Haut Congo, to open up the vast resources, of which the Congo will be the highway to the sea-board, have hitherto been successful; but if France is really in earnest, the efforts of the Belgian Association will be paralysed, if not entirely wiped out. France looks not to the future, the impulse of the moment carries her beyond the consideration whether her policy will be productive of good to the uncivilised nations from whom she enforces submission; and her own prosperity is lost sight of in the excitement which the smallest "call to arms" produces in such an easily-roused nation. Our exertions in repressing outrages by Congo natives and punishing them when necessary, were ably directed by the distinguished officers who have at different times commanded our African Squadron; and it will be no gratification to the Commodores who undertook and carried out extensive expeditions in 1865 and 1875 to see the results of their labours sacrificed to French ambition, and important treaties effected by them completely nullified. France is not a colonising nation, neither is her population a rapidly-increasing one, to admit of it being sent to distant countries. Eventually, she will not have too many of her sons at home to meet Continental requirements, which will naturally arise with a nation who generally keeps itself at the boiling-point of excitement, either social or political. Any Colonial acquisition is made on selfish grounds and with one-sided motives, not with the intention of civilising native populations, but the adoption of an exclusive system of acquiring all the industry, manufactures, and commerce for France only, while other nations are excluded, or only admitted under such enormous tariffs as to make the venture unprofitable and hopeless. Take, for instance, New Caledonia, where Customs dues and taxes are so largely levied on Englishmen, as to necessitate the naturalisation of themselves and employés, and placing their vessels and crews under the tricolour, to evade exorbitant demands. It is a source of constant irritation to our Australian brethren that, within four days' sail of their coast, their vessels are subject to the caprice of an uncompromising Government, who receive every advantage by the freedom of our ports, without reciprocal concessions from the French colony. The Australian agitation for the annexation of New Guinea is mainly brought about by the fear of another nationality establishing itself within gunshot of Northern Queensland, possibly for penal purposes, which would add to the complications already existent from escaped convicts of New Caledonia. The evil results of France making good her footing on the banks of the Congo are as well known on the Continent as they are in this country. The development of the resources so lately discovered to the world by private enterprise would be delayed for generations, and her meddling interference in matters for which she has no ability must leave a mark on the native mind which ages would not efface. No human beings are more impressed by the failure of the white man than the uncultured African; therefore, with the certainty of failure which has attended every French enterprise, the nation who came after France in the Congo would find its load heavy through her previous ill-success. The Congo should remain neutral as of old, and our country should spare no pains in maintaining the same, in spite of French sharpshooters and quasi-military representatives, longing for glory and a "bubble" reputation. Let such zealous pioneers as the Belgian International Association be encouraged in their success, and free navigation of the Congo under the protection of international laws insisted on.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—As it seems essential to the clear understanding of my letter from Bayonne in your paper of the 9th inst., headed as above, will you, after all, kindly allow me to crave the indulgence of a short note in your next, making the following changes?—1. The title to be, "The Biarritz Memorial." 2. The latter part of the first paragraph to run, "has caused the material expression of sympathy to fall short of what old-fashioned ideas of esprit de corps, &c., led one to expect," i.e., omitting the words "his own," and changing "them" to "one," for, as the sentence now stands, it is void of sense. I fear it is my own inexperience in not giving a heading and not being more careful in my copy that has been the cause of this. I therefore beg to apologise for the trouble, and again to thank you for insertion. As to the debt, would other battalions follow the plan of the 3rd Hampshire, and subscribe 1s. a head for each officer, the thing would soon be done, without great sacrifice, I think. Awaiting the granting of the above request, allow me to remain, &c.,

A. HURT.

Bayonne, June 11.

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL.—ITS UNEQUALLED EFFICACY IN CONSUMPTION.—Allen G. Chattaway, Esq., District Medical Officer, Leominster, testifies as follows, to the unparalleled efficacy of this celebrated Oil in the treatment of Consumption:—"Having for some years extensively used Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil, both in public and private practice, I have no hesitation in stating that its effects are very far superior to those of any other Cod Liver Oil. Nearly four years since, two cases of confirmed consumption were placed under my care. In both, the lungs were a mass of tubercular deposit, and every possible sound to be heard in phthisis was present. The sole remedy employed was Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil; and now the patients are strong and fat; the diseased (abnormal) sounds nearly inaudible; and in the one case (male), hunting, fishing, and shooting are freely indulged in, the patient expressing himself quite capable of undergoing as much fatigue as any of his fellow sportsmen." Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil is sold only in capsuled imperial half-pints, 2s 6d; pints, 4s 9d; quarts, 9s; with his stamp and signature and the signature of his sole Consignees on the capsule and the label under wrapper, by all Chemists. Sole Consignees, Ansar, Harford, and Co., 77 Strand, London.

THE NEW NAVAL DISCIPLINE ACTS.

The Naval Discipline and Enlistment Acts Amendment Bill, which embodies some of the principal recommendations of the Naval Pensions Committee, notably the prolongation of service in the Navy from 20 to 22 years, was read a third time in the House of Lords on Thursday evening and passed. This Bill has now to go down to the House of Commons, where, doubtless, it will be amended. The salient feature of the Bill is the total abolition of corporal punishment in the Navy, a step we deem ill-judged, impolitic, and detrimental to the efficiency of the service. Lord Northbrook said he had stated that the contents of the Bill—the acceptance of the position that flogging could not be maintained in the Navy—and the provisions of the Bill altering the law, had been unanimously accepted by the Board of Admiralty. But to this the Marquis of Salisbury very judiciously replied that the abolition of flogging was purely a political question, "As to which the authority of the Naval members of the Board of Admiralty was worth less than that of the Members of the House. Whether the particular punishments to be substituted were practicable, might be more an opinion for the Naval Lords. As far as he heard Naval opinion, apart altogether from the political question, it was that considerable injury would be done to the Navy by the abolition of corporal punishment. He did not think the matter was one in which it was desirable for their Lordships to interfere,—for this reason, that to a certain extent the Government had power to disregard any opinion their Lordships might give. They had already forbidden the practical application of the punishment, and, so long as the present Government was in office, the punishment of flogging would not be inflicted. He did not think, therefore, there would be any advantage in going through the form of refusing to pass the clauses, seeing that the Government had the power to disregard the opinion to which they might come. Corporal punishment might be required in time of war, and it was possible it might be restored. When the noble Earl spoke of the experience of the other navies of the world, he ought to remember that they resorted to a much more free application of capital punishment than we did. Practically, that was the issue; in times of crisis, if we did not allow of the application of the milder punishment, there was no doubt that the death penalty to offenders would be necessary, to save the lives of others." These very sensible remarks place the whole case in a nut-shell. It should be remembered that the grave offence of striking a superior officer is on the increase in the Navy. What redress has the officer struck? None! absolutely none! In this country, the assault is looked upon as of a personal nature. In foreign countries, it is looked upon as of the gravest, not because the officer is struck, but because the uniform of the Sovereign, which he wears, is brought into contempt. Hence, a foreign officer has the right to use his side-arms with deadly effect, if struck by a private or by a civilian, and to inflict instant punishment on the offender, even to taking his life. The fear of being flogged kept the bad characters of the Navy in check. But now that this punishment no longer exists, even in name, we fear that acts of insubordination—namely, striking a superior—especially where petty officers are concerned in their dealings with the men, will greatly increase. True, Viscount Sidmouth has moved for returns of all "naval prisons" constituted such by Admiralty order, on home or foreign stations; "ships set apart as naval prisons;" all "consular prisons" on foreign stations; and "places appointed to be naval prisons by Commanders-in-Chief in foreign waters;" returns of offences committed on board her Majesty's ships, or by seamen and marines on active service and elsewhere, under the following heads:—Mutiny, striking a superior, desertion, theft, for the years 1878, 1879, 1880, 1881, 1882; stating also the numbers of seamen and marines employed in each of those years and the cases which had been tried by court-martial; and the Earl of Northbrook said there was no objection to furnish the returns asked for, but, as every naval man knows, a seaman or a marine tired of the service, or having the chance of permanent employment or business on shore, if he can only get clear of the Navy, will often wilfully commit an offence, and thereby set a bad example to other men, because he knows that the punishment will be "imprisonment and dismissal, with or without disgrace," and not "flogging." Had the lash to be used to punish the offence, it would never be committed.

HOW TO AVOID THE INJURIOUS EFFECTS OF STIMULANTS.—The present system of living—partaking of too rich foods, as pastry, saccharine and fatty substances, alcoholic drinks, and an insufficient amount of exercise—frequently deranges the liver. I would advise all bilious people, unless they are careful to keep the liver acting freely, to exercise great care in the use of alcoholic drinks, avoid sugar, and always dilute largely with water. Experience shows that porter, mild ales, port wine, dark sherries, sweet champagne, liqueurs, and brandies, are all very apt to disagree; while light white wines, and gin or old whisky largely diluted with soda water, will be found the least objectionable. ENO'S FRUIT SALT is peculiarly adapted for any constitutional weakness of the liver; it possesses the powers of reparation when digestion has been disturbed or lost, and places the invalid on the right track to health. A world of woes is avoided by those who keep and use ENO'S FRUIT SALT, therefore no family should ever be without it. CAUTION.—Legal Rights are protected in every Civilised Country. Examine each bottle, and see the Capsule is marked "ENO'S FRUIT SALT." Without it, you have been imposed on by worthless imitations. Sold by all Chemists, price 2s 9d and 4s 6d. Directions, in Sixteen Languages, how to Prevent Disease. Prepared only at ENO'S Fruit Salt Works, Hatcham, London, S.E., by J. C. ENO'S Patent.

Historical Records of the 93rd Sutherland Highlanders. By Roderick Hamilton Burgoyne. (Richard Bentley and Son.)

"Historical records" of regiments are, for the most part, regarded as a particular species of bore, and generally fail to command the attention of readers other than those immediately connected with some particular regiment. It is very natural that this should be the case, but at the same time it is very desirable that those who undertake the task of compilation should approach it with a very decided conviction of the responsibilities it imposes, of the necessity for the absence of all bias, and for the existence on the writer's part of a wish to uphold the esprit de corps of his regiment. In the present instance, the work undertaken by the editor has been performed in a manner which must prove highly gratifying to his brother-officers, if not to himself; he has ventured to travel out of the regular track of routine, and has endeavoured to treat his subject in a liberal spirit by bringing under the reader's notice vivid pictures of the most stirring episodes which have marked the progress of the 93rd Sutherland Highlanders during the last fifty years. In the preparation of this work, he has evidently been influenced by a justifiable anxiety to cull as far as possible the laurels which have been years since gathered—not en bloc by the 93rd Sutherland Highlanders—but by each individual member of that distinguished corps who has fallen in its ranks, and contributed to its glory. A record of this nature will, no doubt, be eagerly appreciated by the representatives of those who served with the 93rd; and even though the work itself may never be seen by them, they will know that there is such a book in existence, and that its pages faithfully record the services of the gallant regiment to which they belonged. Having recapitulated with care and perspicuity the events which marked the progress of the regiment from its earliest formation, the compiler brings his readers down to the outbreak of the Crimean War in 1854. His treatment of this subject is remarkable for its clearness and for the sound judgment displayed in the selection of incidents, many of which have been already more or less recorded by military historians of high repute. The next great event narrated in this volume is "The Indian Mutiny," and here again the compiler evinces his anxiety to procure reliable information, and not to leave unnoticed the most trifling event which occurred during that terrible period. The siege and relief of Lucknow, the battle of December 6, and the horrors of Cawnpore are dwelt upon. Then follow the campaigns in Rohilcund, Oude, and Eusofzaie, and a list of the routes marched from the conclusion of the campaign against the mutineers. The compiler of this military history of modern warfare has executed a task of no small magnitude, and has done so prompted, no doubt, by a laudable anxiety for the welfare of the distinguished regiment to which he formerly belonged.

Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co. have in the press for immediate publication a "Memoir of Lieut.-Gen. Sir Frederick Roberts," by Mr. C. R. Low, who has recently brought out a new edition of his "Life of Lord Wolseley." Admirers of these two distinguished and representative officers will thus be able to compare their careers, character, and military method. We trust Mr. Low will not treat Sir F. Roberts to the foolish flattery that marked his life of Sir Garnet Wolseley, and made his work the subject of considerable ridicule.

H.M. the King of the Belgians has been pleased to confer on Baron de Malortie, the author of "Egypt," the star of officer of the Order of Leopold.

The Corps of Commissionaires will be inspected by Field-Marshal H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge in Westminster Hall, on Sunday, 17th (to morrow), at 10 a.m. Special tickets for admission will be required.

The Irish Times says:—"The University of Dublin Midsummer Commencements take place on the 29th inst., and unusual interest attaches to the ceremony. The degree of LL.D. honoris causa will be conferred upon Lord Wolseley, and for the day Trinity College will be en fête. The authorities are making preparations to do their distinguished guest special honour. He will be entertained at dinner by the Provost and Fellows, and opportunity may possibly be found to mark the occasion by other festivites within the walls."

SPECTACLES v. BLINDNESS.—"Spectacles can only be perfectly adjusted by those having a thorough knowledge of the anatomy of the eye, combined with optical experience."—We have the highest medical authorities confirmed by daily experience, that imperfect glasses, together with the haphazard plan of selection generally employed by the mere vendor, is the cause of most cases of blindness and defective vision. Sir Julius Benedict writes:—"I have tried the principal opticians in London without success, but the spectacles you have adapted suit admirably. The clearness of your glasses as compared with others is really surprising." The Rev. Professor W. A. Hales, M.A. Cantab., 2 Minford Gardens, West Kensington Park, writes:—"The spectacles are perfect, and a most decided boon. I had occasion on Monday to write to Lord ——, and took the opportunity to mention your name and the wonderful power of your spectacles." Dr. Bird, Chelmsford, writes:—"I could not have believed it possible that my sight could have been so much improved and relieved at my age (82). I can now read the smallest type, although suffering from cataract on the right eye." Testimonials from Earl and Countess Lindsay; F. D. Dixon Hartland, Esq., M.P.; the Venerable Archdeacon Palmer, Clifton; Rev. Mother Abbess, St. Mary's Abbey, Mill Hill, Hendon; C. J. Alford, Esq., Gas Light and Coke Company, Horseferry Road, Westminster, &c. Mr. HENRY LAURANCE, F.S.S., Oculist Optician, 39 OLD BOND STREET, W. (late 3 Endsleigh Gardens, Euston Square), personally adapts his Improved Spectacles daily (Saturdays excepted), from 10 to 5. Special arrangements are made for invalids and others unable to wait on Mr. Laurance. Pamphlet, "Spectacles: their Use and Abuse," post free. City Branch, 6 Poultry, Cheapside.

The ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA presented on Monday night "L'Etoile du Nord," with Madame Sembrich as Catarina, who, besides retaining her vocal powers unimpaired, has greatly improved as an actress during the last two years. On Thursday, "Les Huguenots" formed the programme. "Lohengrin" was assigned to Friday, and, besides a morning performance on Saturday of "Carmen," there will be represented in the evening "Il Barbière di Siviglia," in which Madame Adelina Patti will make her first appearance this season.

With this week, a marked change has taken place in the French plays at the GAIETY, and Madame Pasca and some of her associates from the Gymnase Dramatiques have appeared in pieces affording a strong contrast to the frivolous, though funny farces in which Madame Judic reigned supreme. The impressive but gloomy tragic play of "Serge Panine," written by M. Georges Ohnet, was acted on Monday night, Madame Pasca claiming histrionic distinction as the representative of the heroine, whose fate is at once so painful and peculiar. M. Barbe was Serge Panine, and acted with sufficient earnestness. On Wednesday evening "Le Roman Parisien," another popular modern French play, was provided, and embodied by the same cast.

In Mr. Wilkie Collins's four-act drama of "Rank and Riches," produced at the ADELPHI, a mistress and her maid are depicted as falling desperately in love with a young lawyer's clerk, hitherto a stranger to both. Lady Calista, the mistress, follows the young man into the parlour of "The Polestar" public-house, where a wild set of Republicans meet to discuss revolutionary projects, and her ladyship drinks to the downfall of the House of Lords, while seeking evidence to free the youth from a charge of embezzlement. A plot which may be possibly worked out with greater effect in a novel need not here be further followed. The performers worked zealously to obtain a favourable reception for a singularly incongruous play, but without success, and a mistaken appeal to their forbearance only increased an unfavourable impression. Miss Lingard as Lady Calista, Miss Myra Holme as her erratic waiting woman, Mrs. Billington as Lady Sherlock, Mr. C. Sugden as the Duke of Heathcote, and Mr. Alexander as the too-fascinating lawyer's clerk, tried their best to give the semblance of reality to their respective embodiments. Two well-portrayed characters played by Mr. J. W. Pigott and Mr. Proctor, illustrating a badly-behaved nobleman and an equally repulsive pot-house orator, afforded some comic relief. It is intimated that the Messrs. Gatti will commence their autumn season in September with a new English play by Mr. Henry Pettitt and Mr. G. R. Sims.

The new burlesque produced at the STRAND THEATRE, under the title of "Silver Guilt," as a parody of the successful drama of "The Silver King," still enjoying a deservedly prolonged run at the Princess's Theatre, is not without ingenuity of construction, but to be at all comprehensible requires a previous knowledge of the piece and the performers so grotesquely caricatured. Mr. Edward Righton imitates Mr. Wilson Barrett. Miss Laura Linden more cleverly exaggerates the emotional manner of Miss Eastlake, and more or less amusing attempts are made by Mr. Robert Brough, Miss Edith Bruce, Mr. J. H. Jarvis, Miss Nellie Lyons, and Mr. F. Hawtrey, to reproduce some of the prominent characteristics of the Princess's company. The chief merit of the burlesque, which is ascribed to Mr. W. Warham, lies in the mechanical cleverness of the scenic changes contrived by Mr. Bruce Smith, and supposed to be wrought through the agency of a harlequin's bat, adroitly wielded by Bagshawe the detective, and characteristically managed by Mr. E. Hamilton Bell, who seems to be also entitled to the credit of designing the effective costumes.

At the AVENUE THEATRE, "Lurette" is now to be withdrawn, making way for Offenbach's comic opera of "Barbe Bleue," with M. Marius and Miss Florence St. John in the prominent characters.

Mr. Alexander Henderson is understood to be the next lessee of the CRITERION THEATRE, which will be opened for comic opera next October.

A morning performance was given at the LYCEUM on Thursday, in aid of the Royal College of Music. In "Robert Macaire," the two female characters were assumed by Miss Ada Cavendish and Miss Ellen Terry, while Mr. Henry Irving and Mr. J. L. Toole played Robert and Bertrand. Subordinate parts were filled on this occasion by Mr. H. Howe, Mr. W. Terriss, Mr. Thomas Thorne. Mr. Bancroft, Mr. Andrews, and Mr. Archer. Then came a scene from "Money," introducing Mrs. Bancroft, Mr. Arthur Cecil, and Mr. C. Brookfield; and a selection from "Iolanthe," given by the company from the Savoy Theatre.

A special morning performance takes place at TOOLE'S THEATRE this day (Saturday), when in accordance with an old promise, Mr. Sims Reeves will appear as Tom Tug in "The Waterman," Mr. J. L. Toole playing Robin, and Madame Amadi, Wilhelmina.

SOME portions of the evidence given before the late Committee on the working of the Army Medical Department in Egypt, have very naturally given rise to a good deal of indignation and resentment on the part of the officers most immediately concerned. Unfortunately for them, the first impression has been made by the publication of those parts of the evidence that are condemnatory, and so, no doubt, that impression is, for the time being, by no means favourable either to the system under which they worked, or to themselves as a body. With regard to the "system," it is not too much to say that, being by its nature unworkable, its failure was simply in accordance with the natural order of things; but in respect to Medical officers, it is both illiberal and unjust to blame them for a break-down which in reality had been most carefully and completely provided for and made inevitable by the framers of the so-called "unification" of the Medical Department, and of Military hospitals. No explanation, strangely enough, is forthcoming as to the very remarkable discrepancies between the statements telegraphed from Egypt, and those made before the Committee as to the state of the hospitals at Ismailia and Cairo; neither does it appear that those discrepancies were made the subject of further inquiry by the Committee. Thus it is to that body itself in a great measure, that Medical officers of the Army owe much of the one-sidedness which characterises the portions of the report first given to the public. It now appears that Lord Wolseley manifested his great powers of organisation and administration by being "very angry" with "the hospital doctor," as he calls the Medical officer in charge. In his "anger" doubtless, and certainly in his haste, he ordered that officer to "go out," that is, quit his proper position, which was in hospital, to hunt among the bazaars of Cairo, "and buy what?—Fly-whisks." The circumstance, as related by the chief actor in this little drama, shows very clearly that for once, at least, his good genius had deserted him,—that his language was unbecoming, his orders impracticable and opposed to the Regulations of the service, which it was his own duty to maintain in force. Subsequently, on again visiting the hospital, he was "still more angry;" the attack was, in fact, recurrent, like the ague, and evidently becoming "worse." But, apparently, nothing was initiated, nothing done by himself to remedy defects existing under his own eyes, and pertaining to the "system" which he himself was mainly instrumental in forcing on the Army, against the strong protest of officers who understood perfectly well what they were about when they raised their protest. In reference to another occasion, this "angry chief" found fault with the bread issued to the sick in what virtually was a non-dieted hospital, drawing comparisons between it and that obtained for his own table. The comparison is invidious and unfair, the conditions of the two being altogether dissimilar. Money, it is said, was no object. Why, then, did the General not give the necessary order to the Pay Department to issue some hundreds of pounds to the Medical officer, to be expended as the latter considered most advantageous for the sick and wounded soldiers? How comes it about that while correspondents and individual officers were sending home accounts of shortcomings in the administration of the Military hospitals in Egypt, telegrams from the Commander-in-Chief of the Expedition described everything as satisfactory and working well? How is it that after the Expedition is over the evidence given by the same eminent and successful General bears an exactly opposite tone? How is it that the Committee before which the latter was given did not also turn its attention to the former, and inquire how the divergence between the two was to be accounted for and explained? In his latest evidence, Lord Wolseley states that Medical officers ought to take more of the initiative than they did in Egypt. Ought they? But how is it to be done? If we assume for the occasion that Lord Wolseley really does know something about the Regulations of the Army, he must be aware that all the doctors are permitted to do, or can do under those Regulations, is to bring objects under the notice of their immediate Military chief. It is for the latter to ask for suggestions as to the method of carrying out needed improvements; but as to initiative, it is the commanding officer alone with whom it rests, and with whom also properly rests all blame if the necessary initiative be not taken. But it was not only in respect to fly-whisks and bread for the sick and wounded soldiers that the "system" broke down in Egypt. We read that the establishments necessary for a "base" hospital were left where no military base existed, and the actual base established at a point where no base hospital was or could be properly organised, simply for the reasons that neither materiel or personnel existed for the purpose. With whom rests the blame for such a state of things? Certainly not with the Medical officers, but with the General Officer in chief command. Unfortunately, the discrepancies between his Lordship's statements in his telegraphic despatches and his evidence before the Committee have been so glaring as to have caused people to ask themselves, "Is there not inconsistency here?" The result that much of the blame which was at first made to rest on the shoulders of the Medical Officers, has been transferred to those of others holding more responsible positions.

NOTWITHSTANDING that numerous reforms have been made of late years in the education of the junior Executive branch of the Navy, with a view to securing a supply of officers of higher attainments than in the past, results so far attest to but little success in the required direction. Overmuch learning will never make a good officer. Theory will never beat practice, while too much theory generally renders a man unfit to command. In the Profession of Arms, the best man "across country" generally makes the best officer. He will know better how to handle his men than will the bookworm; and in action, his men will follow him better than they will the man of letters. But beyond this, something more is required of an officer. In all matters of discipline, as well as in proficiency in his profession, he should set an example, and his conduct should at all times be that of a gentleman. Some are not of this opinion. But a court-martial has this week made an example of two young officers who chose to behave themselves in a manner not only subversive of all discipline, but entirely opposed to all preconceived notions of what is meant by the phrase, "Conduct becoming an officer and a gentleman;" and it is to be hoped that the severe sentence passed by the Court will have a salutary effect on the service generally, and that, at the same time, it will cause the Admiralty to awake to the fact that the educational course undergone by the junior grades of the service is more to blame than the culprits. The whole educational system of the Navy is at fault. It is based on false ideas of the after-requirements of the service and of the officers educated. Indeed, we fearlessly assert that the junior grades of the Executive Branch are not brought up to be officers, in the strict sense of the term, as recognised throughout the Profession of Arms. The Military spirit, without which discipline is impossible, is conspicuous by its absence from our Naval educational course. The old cry of "We don't want to be made soldiers!" is listened to now, as it was in the days of Queen Elizabeth, when fishermen sailed the ship and soldiers fought her. But then our soldiers were as well disciplined as any in the world. Since then we have seen "the press gang" man our ships, and the seamen so caught to sail them only kept from open mutiny by the bayonets of the Marines, the disciplined set to guard the undisciplined. And to what have we attained in this nineteenth century? On Wednesday morning, a court-martial was held on board the Victory, at Portsmouth, Captain Dupuis president, for the trial of Sub-Lieutenant the Hon. B. Tyrwhitt, borne on the books of the Impregnable for service in the Nautilus, and Sub-Lieutenant William James, borne on the books of the Impregnable, for service in the Pilot,—first, for being guilty of conduct unbecoming officers and gentlemen, and behaving in a scandalous manner to Captain Adeane, of the Shannon; secondly, for behaving with contempt to the same officer; and thirdly, for making a false statement as to the ship to which they belonged. It appeared that as the Captain was proceeding in his galley on June 13 from Millbay to his ship at Devonport, he could not help remarking the abusive "chaff" directed by the prisoners against his galley's crew. At first he took no notice, but afterwards he asked the prisoners if they belonged to the Navy, and to what ship they belonged. They replied the Shannon. He said that could not be, as he was the Captain of that ship, and he did not know them. They then said "they had nothing to do with the service, thank God!" He afterwards took them to the Pilot, where they were identified, and where Tyrwhitt apologised. The next morning, James went on board the Shannon, and made a similar apology. The Court found all the charges proved, and adjudged the prisoners to be dismissed her Majesty's service, as the 28th section of the Naval Discipline Act makes it compulsory that any officer found guilty of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman shall be so punished. But in what Military service or armed force would such conduct be possible, except in the English Navy? Would it be possible for subalterns in any army or navy to stand facing a guard, or picket, or fatigue party, and direct abusive "chaff" at the men? The idea would never enter the head of an "officer" having a "Military education," and being possessed of that esprit de corps which ought to animate every member of the Profession of Arms. But Naval officers, as a rule, are not animated by esprit de corps, for in the Navy it is "every man for himself." Neither do Naval officers receive a "Military education," although they belong to the Profession of Arms, and the consequence is that the officers of the Royal Navy are, for the most part, more like civilians than like officers, members of that time-honoured profession. In years gone by, and also now and again at the present time, the Naval martinet turns up, and makes his ship a "hell afloat," for the term of his command, owing to his inability to govern impartially, to his severity on one occasion and his laxity on another, and to the leniency manifested towards those he patronises, while those under his command who are unfortunate enough to incur his displeasure know no peace. The impartial and steadily "strict service man" is seldom met with. He is hated at the Admiralty, hated in his mess, hated throughout the service, except among the men. They prefer the strict service officer, who governs them with military precision and impartiality. Strange as it may appear, it is such officers the men love to follow, but that their brother-officers too often hate. The reason of the anomaly is not far to seek. It lies in the want of system which exists in the education we impart to the junior officers of the Navy, who are kept down like schoolboys until they join the ward-room mess, and scarcely venture at any time to regard themselves in any other light. When they do find that they are allowed the privileges of officers belonging to the Profession of Arms, they do not know how to behave, having learnt none of the traditions of that old and honourable Profession. They are officers in name only. They grumble at having to wear their uniform. They are truly disgusted if ordered to wear their side-arms. They have not the slightest idea of enforcing that respect due at all times to the uniform of the Sovereign which they wear, for they themselves do not respect that uniform, and when questioned, "thank God they have nothing to do with the service!" A court-martial has dismissed Sub-Lieutenants Tyrwhitt and James, who were acting as instructors in the training brigs Nautilus and Pilot, from an old and honoured service they disgraced, and which modern legislators are likely to ruin. The latter forget that in all branches of the Profession of Arms, Naval or Military, discipline must at all times be enforced with autocratic despotism, but that officers should be educated to use, and not to abuse, the powers confided to them, remembering the old motto, Noblesse Oblige.

The Lords of the Admiralty inspected the ships of the Reserve Squadron at Spithead on Tuesday. The object of the inspection was to enable the First Lord to satisfy himself whether it would be judicious to extend the term of service of the Coastguardsmen. It is stated that Lord Northbrook has come to the conclusion that any such extension would be most unpopular.

Vice-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, in fulfilment of his intention expressed last year, has prepared a most valuable paper on the extent and condition of our fishing population, with the view of interesting his fellow-countrymen in its welfare, and to draw public attention to the great importance of our sea fisheries. This paper was read on Tuesday at the Fisheries Conference, being held at South Kensington, by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, in the absence of the Duke of Edinburgh in Russia. The Prince of Wales, after a few appropriate words of introduction, read the paper in a clear voice, distinctly audible in all parts of the building. At the conclusion, a vote of thanks was unanimously accorded to both the Duke of Edinburgh and the Prince of Wales.

We are glad to be able to state that Mr. E. Kelly, Naval Cadet, of the Britannia, who recently had a fall from aloft, is progressing favourably.

The communication which was permitted to appear last week in the columns of a contemporary respecting the court-martial on Lieutenant Clarke, of the Achilles, will scarcely meet with the approbation of Naval officers generally. If Lieutenant Clarke has in any sense been unfairly treated, it is to be hoped their Lordships will see that justice is done to him eventually. But communications of the nature referred to can do no possible good, and must be extremely distasteful to those who still retain the slightest amount of loyalty towards their superiors, to say nothing of the feelings of the superiors themselves. The insinuation, for instance, that the President of the Court-martial and the Prosecutor arranged matters to their mutual satisfaction during an amicable stroll on the evening preceding the trial, must surely be as groundless as it is objectionable; and there is a vein of communism running through the article in question, as well as through previous articles, which appear to have emanated from the same pen, which cannot have a beneficial effect on the minds of seamen, who, it should be remembered, read the service papers very diligently. Reform is undoubtedly needed in the general conduct of Naval courts-martial and in the administration of the Navy; but the bespattering of individuals with mud by anonymous and possibly interested persons is scarcely the way to bring it about. We cannot be accused of dealing leniently with those who are responsible for the proper administration of the Navy, when we consider that their acts are likely to injure the service; but we must protest against the dissemination of communistic or other revolutionary ideas throughout the Navy. Discipline must be enforced.

We are requested to state by several members of the Royal Navy Club (1765) that the great majority of the members present to meet H.R.H. the Prince of Wales on June 12 were delighted to welcome the so-called "uninvited guest" alluded to in our columns last week, as the gallant Admiral referred to had been specially invited by Admiral of the Fleet Sir Harry Keppel to support him on the occasion, Sir Harry believing him to be a member of the Club, while the Admiral, not knowing of the existence of two Naval Clubs, and believing the dinner to be given by the one he is a member of, made it a point to be present on the occasion. That his presence should have given offence to any member of the Club, under these circumstances, appears to us incredible. That it did so is evidenced by the communication we last week inserted, but which we only allowed to appear from our correspondent assuming so boldly to speak in the name of the members of the Club, that we felt it our duty not to lay ourselves open to the charge of screening officers in whom we have the fullest confidence, of whom we entertain the highest opinion, and for whom we have the greatest respect.

The recent addition of two months' instruction in pilotage brings the Sub-Lieutenants' course up to about 15 months from the date of joining at Greenwich to being finally discharged from the Excellent. This is a great contrast to the old arrangements, under which the maximum time for the whole course was something under four months, and the examinations were conducted on a principle unknown except in the Navy. Even now, the proportion of numbers required for a first-class is discouragingly high, though it was considerably modified on the transfer of the Naval College to Greenwich.

The experiments recently carried out at Portsmouth with rope mantlets, rendered inflammable by being steeped in a chemical composition, as a safeguard against shell fire, appear to have given satisfactory results, the ordinary mantlets being invariably ignited in one or more places, while the others did not even smoulder. Of course, the experiments were conducted with very light shell—64-pounders—and cannot, therefore, be regarded as altogether representative of the conditions of modern warfare; but there cannot be a doubt that heavy rope mantlets will afford most valuable protection to a gun's crew under almost any circumstances, and all the more so, necessarily, from being incombustible.

"La Belle France," having failed to "bounce" Portugal in regard to the Congo, now hopes to attain her end by coaxing his Most Faithful Majesty into an alliance. The Portuguese are asserted to be animated by a very friendly feeling towards the Republic. France, while admitting that Portugal has been under the tutelage of England—who imposed her support on her—now considers that Portugal has at length realised her position. Although she may want allies, Portugal will not think of binding herself to a Power whose friendship she would have to pay dearly for. Public opinion, therefore, in Portugal has turned towards France with remarkable unanimity. The Congo is considered a well-chosen ground for conciliation, as France could live there on excellent terms with the Portuguese, and even find in them auxiliaries to support her in the great work which she has undertaken in Central Africa. France would not think of offering an alliance with a view to acquire either the trade or the neighbouring possessions of Portugal. Such ingenuousness is charming! France knows that Portugal has no right to the Congo, and admitted it in the past; but that was in the days of Monarchical Government, certain obligations of which she finds it convenient to forget. The refusal of Portuguese subjects to aid France in the native territory, where the tricolour has been hoisted, produced this sweet unction. France has physical force, and no ability for colonising; Portugal has neither of the two. If the Congo falls into French hands, "the great work she is inaugurating in the heart of Africa" will be like that in Cochin-China, where commerce has not followed conquest, and the trade of Saigon is 140 times less than that of Hong Kong. Her "great work" will frustrate the endeavours of able and gallant pioneers, who do not claim the "protecting folds of the French flag."

The Admiralty have decided not to try Captain Pollard, of the Defence, by court-martial, on account of his ship parting from her moorings and her cables breaking, in the Mersey. The Admiralty have instead censured Captain Pollard, and also the Commander, senior Lieutenant, and Gunner of the Defence, on certain disputed points, and the matter is now closed. We hope, however, that their Lordships will remember that the Defence has been placed in the most dangerous part of the Mersey, where the tide runs from five to six knots an hour, and where the eddies, rushing athwart the stream sheer the ship about in a manner nothing but the most powerful ground-tackle can stand. The Defence, with her 13 lb. steam-pressure, is naturally unable to face such a tide, which she can barely stem; and yet, with her heavy draft of 27 feet, she must cross the bar at high water. Under such circumstances, the only wonder is that the Defence has not long since met with a serious accident, and it is to be hoped that either a more suitable ship will be selected, or that the present moorings in the Mersey will be shifted.

The Naval Discipline Act Amendment Bill, which was successfully carried through the Upper House by the First Lord of the Admiralty, will be strenuously opposed in the Commons by Admiral Sir John Hay, on account of the Government having virtually substituted capital punishment for flogging. According to this Bill, three Lieutenants are qualified to form a court-martial, which can sentence a prisoner to death; and that sentence can be carried out, on being ratified by the senior officer present, even though that officer be of no higher rank than Commander. The Liberal Government abolished "flogging," even for striking a superior, because that punishment was repugnant to the feelings of that noisy humanitarian crew which recently succeeded in howling loud enough to frighten the Ministry into rescinding the C.D. Acts, and also because the clap-trap cry of "abolition of flogging" would catch a few votes. The same Government now substitutes "hanging" for flogging. We pity "poor Jack," in the hands of such friends!

The King of Dahomey, on hearing that Portugal contemplated ceding Whydah to England, ordered the Portuguese Commandant to abandon the fortress within sixty days, and threatened to decapitate all Portuguese subjects in case of any resistance. In the interests of their Portuguese friends, her Majesty's Government will surely be considerate enough to direct the senior officer of the West African Squadron to insist on the Dahoman monarch rescinding this arbitrary mandate. (!) It is not undesirable that his Sable Majesty has opened the eyes of our rulers to the fact that the Portuguese, being no longer able to serve his turn by slave-trading, have no footing at Whydah, and that he does not recognise the authority conveyed in bombastic "public notices," signed and sealed at the Court of Lisbon. It would be as well if her Majesty's Government treated direct with the King of the Amazons, instead of with a feeble European Power; and if Dahomey would not come to terms, the propositions of a gallant officer in 1876-7 should be adopted.

No little amusement was caused at the Royal United Service Institution on Friday last by a humorous tiff between Rear-Admiral Hamilton, late Director of Naval Ordnance, Colonel Reilly, Director-General of Ordnance and Stores, and Lord Henry Lennox. During the discussion which followed the reading of Lord Charles Beresford's paper on "Machine Guns," Admiral Hamilton blamed the War Office for the present pitiable state of our Naval ordnance, and the inadequate way in which our ships are armed. Lord Henry Lennox, who was sitting beside Colonel Reilly, jocosely poked that officer in the ribs, urging him the while to get up and defend his department. This the Director-General of Ordnance and Stores did, but misunderstanding the poke in the ribs administered to him by the noble Lord, assured the meeting that he was authorised by Lord Henry Lennox to state that no difficulty was ever experienced by the Board, while Lord Henry Lennox was at the Admiralty, in obtaining an adequate supply of guns from the War Office. This brought Lord Henry Lennox in his turn to his feet, to assure the meeting that he had never authorised the gallant Director-General to make any such statement, and the noble lord then proceeded, amidst roars of laughter, to confirm the accusations brought by Admiral Hamilton against the War Office. We feel convinced, however, that, whatever misunderstandings may have existed in the past between the Naval and the Military Ordnance Departments, everything will work smoothly now that Colonel Reilly is at the head of the Ordnance Department at the War Office, for no artilleryman living knows better than he does what are the requirements of the Navy, and how necessary it is that our "first line of defence" should be the best armed of any service in the world. Captain Hopkins will, no doubt, find that Colonel Reilly will do all in his power to enable him to keep pace with, and will second his every effort to keep ahead of, all other Navies in the matter of ordnance.

News reaches us from St. Vincent, Cape de Verde Islands, in date June 6, to the effect that a report was there current that Stanley's Belgian expedition on the Congo was at an end, four of the Belgian officers having succumbed to the climate, and most of the other members of the expedition being seriously ill. We hardly think the expedition will be at an end, however, until Mr. Stanley himself "shuffles off the mortal coil."

Brevet-Major F. W. Hemming, 5th Dragoon Guards, has patented an excellent boot for Cavalry, Artillery, &c. The boot combines many advantages. In appearance it is precisely the same as the present Regulation boot, and can therefore be worn on parade or for other mounted duties. It divides into an upper and lower part; the former will last for very many years without repair, and the latter may be replaced or repaired as required; and as these can be used separately, it is thus suitable to wear with—(1), pantaloons, with jack spur; (2), overalls, with box spur; (3), trousers, without any spur. The adjustment of the jack spur, which is one of the important points in the patent, makes the loss of a spur an impossibility. Another advantage is its great simplicity and freedom from any complicated fastenings. The boot has been submitted to the War Office, and it is now under trial by the 4th Dragoon Guards, 4th Hussars, and Royal Artillery.

We observe the Marquis of Hartington is about to bring a Bill into Parliament to amend the Contagious Diseases Acts, 1866 and 1869.

A movement has been lately set on foot in one of our large garrison towns, which has for its object the better protection of young girls and the mitigation of the evils of prostitution. The movement has been largely supported by the officers and Army chaplains of the garrison in question, and is being carried on in connection with an association not long ago established in London, of which Lord Mount-Temple is the president. Our readers may be aware that a bill endeavouring to deal with this question is now before the House of Lords. It is to strengthen the hands of Parliament, by creating a strong public opinion in favour of legislation, that the associations in London and Woolwich have been formed. The subject is an extremely difficult one to discuss in print. We admit, however, with Lord Mount-Temple, that the Army and Navy have a special responsibility in the matter, and we are unwilling to pass by without notice a question which affects so closely the interests of both services. Our intervention has been specially asked on behalf of the Association lately founded at Woolwich. We believe we may commend this association to the good feeling of our military and naval readers. It has been established on a purely social basis, and includes individuals of all shades of belief and unbelief. We are satisfied that its objects are sound and defensible, and that its promoters may be trusted to carry on their work in a quiet and unobtrusive manner. It is hoped that branch associations may be shortly established in Aldershot, and in other large garrison and seaport towns. Any honest attempt—we do not care where it comes from—to improve the social condition of our soldiers and sailors, and contribute to their well being, will find countenance and support in the columns of this journal.

Lord Wemyss's motion in the House of Lords respecting the gradually vanishing condition of the Militia is postponed till Friday, July 6.

The Oxford Military College at Cowley was the scene on Saturday last of a most impressive ceremony, when our soldier Prince, accompanied by the Duchess of Connaught, attended to inspect the College, and present the prizes to the successful candidates. His Royal Highness's two speeches on the occasion were full of that sound sense which always marks his public utterances. The advice he gave to the students cannot fail to produce an effect upon them. He is himself evidence of what perseverance can do, and the example he has set to those who adopt the Army as a profession made his observations to such an audience as was there assembled specially valuable. The Cowley College is doing, as we always expected it would, good work for the Army. There can be no doubt as to the advantages of such a school to those who are striving to enter the service. There is one thing, however, in connection with the College which surprises us, we look in vain for any mention of it in the Army List. Can it be that the young men drilled day by day at Cowley have no recognised position in the defences of the country? Every public school in the Kingdom gives its company or two companies to the Volunteer Force. Eton gives four, and the two Universities maintain a battalion apiece. But Cowley, the place beyond all others where one would expect to find martial enthusiasm prevailing, does not, from all appearance, furnish one representative. This is an omission, and a very serious omission, and we strongly recommend the governing body to give the matter their attention. By bringing the Cowley students under the authority of the War Office, as other kindred institutions have done, the Council of the Oxford Military College would do much to raise the school in the estimation of the service. Whatever the reasons may be for Cowley holding aloof from the Volunteer organisation, the school is setting a bad example; and on this ground, if no other, the Council should make an attempt to overcome, without delay, any difficulties which may stand in the way of the Cadets being enrolled as members of the Auxiliary Forces on the same terms as the pupils of our older public schools.

The French War Minister, General Thibaudin, is displaying a considerable amount of activity in his department. He has prepared a Bill on promotion, which will respect seniority, with a few exceptions. A corporal will be able to attain the rank of serjeant after four, instead of after six, months. The Sub-Lieutenant will become de jure a second Lieutenant after two years' service. A French soldier, therefore, may now become a corporal in six and a serjeant in ten months after joining. General Thibaudin also proposes to create a system of long leave; he would grant officers who desire it a furlough of three years; his idea is that a great many officers get tired of the routine of garrison life, and that it would be well to allow them to retire for a time from the service, with the faculty, of course, of being able to recall them in the event of war. During this furlough, the military existence of the officer accepting it would be at a stand-still.

The following is a list of the surviving officers of the Duke of Wellington's army who participated in the battle of Waterloo, on June 18, sixty-eight years ago, who still draw pensions from War-Office funds:— General Sir T. Reed, G.C.B., colonel, 44th Foot (served in the engagement as lieutenant, 12th Light Dragoons); G. Whichcote, major, half-pay, unattached (lieutenant 53rd Foot); G. T., Earl of Albemarle, major, half-pay, unattached (ensign 14th Foot); Captain W. Harris, half-pay, unattached (lieutenant 16th Light Dragoons). Three deaths have been reported since last year, viz., those of Generals Lord Rokeby, G.C.B., G. Macdonald, and T. C. Smith. There are, of course, many other survivors, but it is impossible to ascertain their whereabouts, as officers are soon lost sight of when they have retired from the service, unless their names are retained in the Army List. Besides these, known to be living, are the Earl of Stradbroke, Lieutenant-Colonel W. L. Stretton (ensign in the 68th Foot, who was shot through the body), and Major J. Eden (late Methold, 71st Light Infantry, a member of the United Service Club). In addition appear in Hart's Army List for 1883 the names of five more, viz., Colonels J. Mulloy (95th), J. Home (3rd Dragoon Guards), W. Fendall (4th Dragoons), W. Harding (5th Foot), and C. Cadell (28th). Hart, however, is rather apt to retain the names of officers long after their decease,—for instance, that of Major-General Loftus Owen, who entered the service in 1799, and who is probably long since dead.

The wrath of the French Radicals against General de Gallifet has broken out into flame once more. It seems that more than one Radical deputy has called on the War Minister to deprive the marquis of his rank on the ground that it was not obtained under usual circumstances. Their contention is that the nomination of the marquis, which took place after Sedan, never appeared in the official journal, and is therefore void. The serious part of this matter is that General Thibaudin is said to have promised to deprive General de Gallifet of his command on the first opportunity. Again, it is clear from what has been written on the subject that certain documents which should never have been allowed out of the archives of the War Office have been communicated to a Radical editor engaged in drawing up the indictment. On its side, however, the Temps declares that no indiscretion has been committed at the War Office, and that the accusations brought against General de Gallifet are quite groundless. He was promoted, like a number of other officers, on the field of battle in virtue of powers conferred on the commander-in-chief, and there was no need of submitting his promotion for the approbation of the War Minister. The Débats does not agree with the Temps with regard to no indiscretion having been committed, and demands an enquiry. All this is very sad, and will not redound to the honour and glory of the Republic.

The apathy of the authorities in gazetting the three new Chief Paymasters to the Army Pay Department [promised by the Secretary of State for War four months since], is quite in keeping with all their mismanagement of this most unfortunate branch of the service. We are aware that, in accordance with regulation, the promotions will be made by selection; but there ought to be no delay in coming to a decision on this point, provided the records have been properly kept. As it is, many officers are in a state of suspense and uncertainty which we do not hesitate to pronounce inexcusable. We trust that there will be no repetition of the tactics employed when the rank of Chief Paymaster was created, in 1881, a Staff Paymaster having been promoted over the heads of more than twenty others, because he happened to be at the station where an officer of the higher rank was required. At least, this was the official explanation! We venture to assert that the promotion referred to was without a precedent in departmental experience, had a most prejudicial effect in the service generally, caused the retirement in disgust of many valuable officers, and pointed to favouritism in its worst form. As we urged last week, the department will never be satisfied until it has a Chief of its own at the War Office, charged with the impartial administration of its affairs. The present system has nearly caused the break-down of the Pay Service. The alternative proposition is surely worth a trial.

The annual inspection of the Corps of Commissionaires, which took place on Sunday last, at 10 a.m., in Westminster Hall, was honoured by the attendance of H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge as Inspecting Officer. The muster of veterans was larger than on any previous occasion, being nearly a thousand, and all the available space in the vast hall was occupied by interested spectators. The Duke of Cambridge, as he passed along the ranks, was followed by a large number of Naval and Military officers, nearly all of high rank and long service, and he, as well as they, often paused to ask a question or to make some kindly remark. At the conclusion of the inspection, his Royal Highness expressed his unqualified satisfaction at the appearance of the men, and at what he had heard of their conduct. Captain Walter, the founder and Commanding Officer, then gratefully acknowledged the complimentary terms in which he and his corps had been addressed. Among the spectators, none attracted so much attention as a pensioner from Chelsea Hospital, John M'Kay, who fought with the 42nd Highlanders at Waterloo, and who is said to be 98 years old. This relic of an age of soldiers almost all passed away was kindly spoken to by the Duke, Lord Napier of Magdala, and other distinguished officers. After the inspection, the Commissionaires, according to custom, attended a special service in St. Michael's Church, Burleigh Street. In the opinion of the founder, the continued prosperity and steady development of this admirable institution are due in a great measure to the entire absence of change in its system of management. It has never been reformed or reorganised, but has gone on the same lines for twenty-four years. Rules have been made only when their necessity or expediency became evident, never for the sake of pushing any crotchet "to its logical conclusion," hence there has been no need for alteration.

It appears that the French Government consider the 4,000 men already placed under the orders of the successor of the unfortunate Captain Rivière as sufficient for the requirements of the moment. Active military preparations are, however, being carried on in France with a view to ulterior operations in Annam, and it is now proposed to draw a whole brigade from Algeria, 5,000 strong, and to forward this reinforcement in the month of September, so that it may reach its destination when the climate is least deadly to Europeans. It is observed, by the way, in France, that although the Minister of Marine has published a list of the men killed at the same time as Captain Rivière, he has not published a list of the men struck down by fever. A French writer says that the "Black Flags" are composed of deserters from all the marines in the world, and that it would be a good riddance of very bad rubbish to shoot all the Europeans taken in their ranks. The same writer adds:—"Wherever we had to struggle against climate and sickness we have cut a sorry figure. At St. Domingo, at the beginning of the century, the finest demi-brigades of the Army of the Rhine were annihilated by yellow fever. Of 35,000 men sent out, only 4,000 returned. Vaublanc had in vain warned Bonaparte of the inevitable consequences." The Avenir Militaire, on its side, makes some interesting remarks on the Chinese forces. It refers to the operations conducted in 1870 and 1879 by the Generals Li Hung Chang and Tso Tsung Tang, first against the rebels of Kansu, and then on the western frontiers of the kingdom. "It must be remembered," says the writer, "that Russia, at first favourable to an expedition, viewed with uneasiness the neighbourhood of this army, which had just accomplished a march of 1,200 miles through an arid country." The Avenir Militaire then makes several quotations from the late unfortunate Captain Gill on the subject of the composition of the Celestial Army, and the operations of Li Hung Chang in 1870, when he commanded 40 battalions of 500 men, well armed and officered by Europeans:—"Since then, this picked corps, supported by 50,000 men of the Tartar contingent, well trained, and largely supplied with field artillery, are quartered in the vicinity of Pekin, and would offer a redoubtable obstacle to any expedition similar to that of 1860." Referring then to General Tso, the Avenir reminds its countrymen that "it was a real and powerful army which we saw plunge boldly into the desert of Gobi, and accomplish in a campaign of two years combined marches, flank movements, passages of defiles, sudden attacks, regular sieges, &c." And we are assured that not only did officers and men conduct themselves well, but that two of the Generals of Division displayed a remarkable talent for war. The Avenir has no doubt about a small French force being able to hold Tonquin, with the support of French gunboats, but it is evidently alive to the difficulties which France may encounter, should she force on a war with the Chinese Empire.

One of the most sensible steps ever adopted by the Canadian Government for improving their defensive position, was unquestionably the establishment of the Royal Military College at Kingston. But, unfortunately, the chief prizes open to the students are not given by Canada, but by the Imperial Government. They consist of three commissions in the Army annually to cadets who take high places and have a desire to enter the Military service. Though hopes were held out to the cadets that Canada would provide civil employment for those who cared to accept it, the Government has not hitherto done much to encourage zeal among the students at the College. But what can be expected of a Government who, for political purposes, at the election last year, appointed an old Captain of Infantry Militia, of about the age of 35, to be junior Subaltern of the Royal School of Gunnery at Kingston, where, of course, he is expected to instruct in scientific and practical gunnery? It seems to us that all vacancies for Subalterns in the old schools of gunnery and the proposed Infantry Schools should be given to those cadets who have passed best out of the Royal Military College, and for the Commandants a strict examination should be undergone.

As evidence of the feelings of the Canadians with regard to the defences, we understand that when the Dominion Government brought forward its measure for the establishment of the three Infantry Schools, objections were raised to the vote being granted, on the ground that the Government were establishing a "standing Army." Only fancy a standing Army limited to 750 men, Cavalry, Artillery, and all; and this for the protection of 11,000 miles of coast!

A French military writer, speaking of the Territorial Army, says that:—"This force is now nearly entirely formed, its privates are vigorous and well trained, there is no dearth of non-commissioned officers, and only sins by the quality of its officers. Those taken from the Army are generally worn out, and those produced by the Volunteer system want the habit of commanding. However, it is an army capable of rendering immense services." The same writer says that he has under his eyes the composition of the mixed companies recently formed for special service in Tunis. They consist of 10 officers each, 4 being natives; 68 French and 144 native foot soldiers; 10 French and 33 native troopers; and 44 gunners. Total, 309 men, with 121 horses and mules. It seems that it has been found very difficult to recruit these companies, which will cost about £200,000 a year, "certainly over £40 a man."

Of the recruits who joined, during 1882, the Infantry, 652 were under 17 years of age, 12 were from 17 to 18, 114 from 18 to 19, 7,936 from 19 to 20, 2,383 from 20 to 21, 1,292 from 21 to 22, 971 from 22 to 23, 724 from 23 to 24, 704 from 24 to 25, 98 over 25. In the Artillery, 164 were under 17 years of age, 5 from 17 to 18, 23 from 18 to 19, 1,975 from 19 to 20, 562 from 20 to 21, 317 from 21 to 22, 297 from 22 to 23, 276 from 23 to 24, 335 from 24 to 25, 29 over 25. In the Cavalry, 70 were under 17 years of age, 5 from 17 to 18, 19 from 18 to 19, 1,026 from 19 to 20, 417 from 20 to 21, 201 from 21 to 22, 144 from 22 to 23, 90 from 23 to 24, 72 from 24 to 25, 8 over 25.

When the British Government left the charge of the Canadian Forts and their armaments to the charge of the local Government, and withdrew the British garrisons, it was on the understanding that they were to be kept up properly. The Canadians do not seem to have carried out their part of the contract as completely as some doubtless suppose, for we hear of land belonging to the Militia Department being sold almost at any price, and the proceeds, instead of being kept for Militia purposes, being swallowed up by the Government, and squandered no one knows how; whilst funds intended by the Imperial Government for fortifications have been spent, it is said, on railway construction and for other objects clearly outside the range of Military defence. Such are the reports which are continually reaching us from loyal Canadians, who fear the consequence of the present state of affairs, and express a hope that Lord Lansdowne will go out with instructions to devote attention to the defences, and see that they are maintained in a proper state of efficiency.

THE LATE AFGHAN CAMPAIGN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—I have had placed in my hands, within the last few days, in addition to over £4,000 which I have already distributed amongst the widows and orphans, a sum of close upon £6,000, for the benefit of some 250 relatives of men who lost their lives during the late Afghan Campaign. Beyond the relationship to those who are to be thus relieved, I am supplied with no information, and I venture, therefore, to ask your insertion of this letter, in the hope it may attract the notice of those who consider they have any such claim. It may save time and disappointment, however, if I add that I can recognise no application unless guaranteed by a military officer, magistrate, or clergyman, nor can I at present make any grant to relatives other than those enumerated, or who may have already received a similar allowance.—I am, &c., JAMES GILDEA.

20 Phillimore Gardens, Kensington, W., June 19.

A correspondent says very truly:—"The new regulations, foreshadowed in your impression of the 9th inst., for the future government of serjeants' messes would no doubt be valuable for a schoolboy's mess, but are not exactly what is expected for grown men of superior intelligence and, as a rule, unexceptionable character. The non-commissioned officer has been called 'the backbone of the British Army,' but he must have long ceased to be so if such regulations are necessary for his sobriety. Their effect will most probably be to empty the mess, and drive the serjeant who drinks whiskey or claret to the public-house. I suppose the fadmongers must be propitiated, but it is a pity they did not start with the officers' messes, as they would not have been so likely to succeed. This is the way to get good non-commissioned officers!"

The annual dinner of The New United Service Club will be held at the Club House, 8 Park Place, St. James's, on Tuesday, the 26th inst. H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge will be present.

A "Purchase Captain" writes:—"While your article in the Army and Navy Gazette of the 9th inst. is exhaustive as far as the case of the Purchase captains retired under Royal Warrants previous to the last is concerned, it does not touch on the yet harder case of those retired at 42 years of age, instead of 45, on a pension of £250, under the compulsory clause of the Warrant of June 25, 1881. There are very few captains so retired, but that does not reduce the hardship of their case, which is this:—These officers joined under the Purchase system, and were captains before it was abolished, but because they accepted unattached promotion on the reduction of the Army in 1870, they have been up to the present treated as non-purchase officers, refused all over-regulation money, and compulsorily retired at 42 years of age on a pension less by £50 a year than other Purchase captains retiring under the Warrant of June 25, 1881. If Sir H. Fletcher, assisted by other influential Military Members, takes up this case when the Non-effective vote comes on, it seems impossible that Lord Hartington will refuse to do these unfortunates justice."

It is stated that in consequence of the great paucity of veterinary-surgeons in the Bombay Presidency, the Secretary of State has been requested to send out five more surgeons to complete the establishment.

LORD MORLEY'S COMMITTEE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—As the important subject of Army medical organisation is receiving special consideration at present, I beg I may be permitted to make a few remarks on the subject, as I have had many years' practical experience of the present and previous systems of organisation. Though I concur with much that you have expressed latterly on this question, I would premise by stating that I cannot agree with you in considering that the disciplinary control at present exercised over the hospital subordinates by medical officers should be restricted or altered in any respect, so long as the present system exists. Under present circumstances, it is imperatively necessary for the well-being of the sick, as well as the efficient working of the institution, that medical officers holding important administrative positions, such as charge of station, hospitals, &c., should be invested with the disciplinary control and command now extended to them, and that their authority should be supreme over every officer, non-commissioned officer, and man doing duty under them. So long as there is a "Medical" corps, separate and distinct, call it by what name you please, "Army Hospital Corps," or otherwise, the rank and file of which are employed under a medical military officer in duties "medical," the officer to whom the men of that corps should look for disciplinary control and command is undoubtedly their senior medical officer, for not only is this essentially necessary to enable him to carry out efficient medical administration, and to uphold his personal influence and authority over his subordinates, but it is also most advisable that the medical officer should possess his present power of inflicting minor punishments, as he alone can be fully aware of the gravity of the consequences which may result from many of the offences committed by the non-commissioned officers and men employed under him. Simple acts of neglect which, to a non-medical man, may appear most trivial, being often in reality of the most vital importance, and leading perhaps, directly or indirectly, to fatal consequences. The evils of the present system do not emanate from this, but from the system itself, which is so weak in its most essential particulars that it cannot longer exist in its present condition. Its strength alone renders it wholly incapable of bearing the stress of the most insignificant war. Direct enlistment and short service is supplying its ranks with a class of men who are untrustworthy, untrained, and undisciplined, and are devoid of all esprit de corps or interest in their patients or their work. Officers, non-commissioned officers, and men are so constantly shifted on "home" stations, that the results cannot be otherwise than prejudicial to the sick and proper medical administration. Officers of orderlies, since they have become quartermasters, seem to ignore direct connection with those most important of all military medical institutions "station hospitals," and the present printed Regulations for their corps having reference to the same. And on "home" stations, at least, they appear to have been all converted into "district officers" and "adjutant" to principal medical officers; and they exert prejudicial influences often (where they can) in weeding chief (station) hospitals of districts of their most efficient non-commissioned officers and men to act as clerks, or look after a few stores in out stations. Also, owing to the "corps" being so much under its required strength, men have constantly to be "attached" from other corps to the hospital attendants on the sick, contrary to the wishes of their commanding officers, and to the well-being of the patients and discipline of the hospital. For these men, being under "two masters," serve neither efficiently, and being often removed and changed, are unacquainted with their duties and injurious as sick attendants. If the Army Hospital Corps was of greater strength, perhaps matters might be different; but my humble opinion is that, under any circumstances, I feel I am expressing the opinion of most of my brother-officers when I say that the sick and wounded of our Army would receive better care and attendance were each regiment complete in itself as regards medical officers and men, to move with their regiments and attend on their own sick, the medical officers of each corps being held responsible that the "hospital orderlies" of the regiment were duly instructed in "stretcher drill" and all other duties connected with the nursing and treatment of sick and wounded soldiers. And with respect to the non-commissioned officers, I should constitute what are now known as "stewards," "wardmasters," "compounders," principal medical officers, and quartermaster's "clerks," warrant officers, to be supplied from and educated (finally) in their duties at Netley, Woolwich, and Aldershot, and be chiefly selected originally from corporals of regiments who have proved themselves to be most efficient as assistants in these various capacities under their medical officers in the different large hospitals in which their sick are treated. As regards medical officers, one at least, if not two, should not be "attached," but belong to each regiment. He should wear the uniform of the regiment, pay mess and band subscriptions, and be wholly and entirely an officer of the corps. As regards disciple, the men specially detailed as "hospital orderlies" should be disposed of by the officer commanding the regiment, who would have the important power of being able to replace them at once.

"One Who Volunteered" writes:—"Having read in your columns a letter signed 'One of the Eight Hundred,' referring to the service performed by the 1st Reserve Depôt in Egypt, may I, as one of the volunteers who sailed in the Duke of Devonshire, and who arrived just too late to receive any reward or recognition of our services, plead that some little memento of the hardships we suffered in Egypt might be granted to us, and that should the authorities think us undeserving of the war medal, that we might have conferred upon us the Khedive's Star. The hardships we suffered and the privations we endured have not been exaggerated by your correspondent, and I have still a very lively recollection of turning out of my bed of sand and mosquitos at 5 a.m. for four hours' fatigue, on an excellent breakfast of rum-and-water, supplemented later in the day with four or five hours' more!"

THE POSITION OF REGIMENTAL OFFICERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—I have read the letter from the "Disgusted 'Mud Major'" in last Saturday's Army and Navy Gazette, and can quite enter into the gallant officer's feelings, as I am in the same position myself, albeit not a Purchase Captain. The position of a "mud major" is an anomalous position, created by a Secretary of State to avoid retirements and throw dust into the eyes of the British public; and consequently we "mud majors" cannot, I suppose, grumble, or at least ought not to do so, if we are treated in an anomalous manner, and have curious duties to perform. Are we not majors? Do we not get 2s. a day more pay? Surely we ought to be contented, and yet, somehow, our natural aspirations are not satisfied. There is no doubt some of us did look forward to a time when the heavy drudgery of the service would cease for us. Can any one blame us for this? Can they imagine we feel happy at the prospect of this day being indefinitely postponed? Your "Mud Major" seems, however, tolerably lucky. Were he in my battalion, he would know what it is to be a "mud major." Our commanding officer is not a bad fellow, but, having climbed up the ladder himself rather faster than most, he is, I am sorry to say, inclined to kick it down behind him. He makes no bones of the matter. He says openly to us, "You are not Majors at all, you are only the senior captains. I don't recognise you as majors." The consequence is, I, having no subaltern, have to pay my drunkards daily. As we are short of officers, we are on the subalterns' roster for duty; and only this morning, I, a major, with brass scabbard and spurs on, have been out at 5.15 a.m., to see the urine tubs removed from the barrack-rooms! I do not grumble at the work, my pension is not far off, but for Heaven's sake call us a name that expresses our duties. Do not let us be majors in name and pay, and merely corporals in duty. I should think our Military reformers might be equal to inventing a term to express the rank of an officer who, by the dictum of his commanding officer, has "no responsibilities but to obey my orders," and whose duties towards the 27 miserable boys that compose what is called his company consists in entering punishments in the defaulter sheets, and seeing that they get their hair cut. Are these what are generally considered major's duties? If not, alter the name. That is the cry of June 18. A MUDDIER MAJOR.

(FROM AN OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENT.)

On Tuesday a Divisional field-day of all arms took place in the neighbourhood of the Fox Hills. On the previous day, Sir Daniel Lysons assembled all officers commanding brigades, regiments, and batteries, heads of departments, and Staff, and explained the nature of the proposed manœuvres. The troops, consisting of two regiments of Cavalry, eight batteries of Artillery, and thirteen battalions of Infantry (five Militia), about 8,000 men, 1,000 horses, and 45 guns, were formed up at 10.30 a.m., under direction of the General Commanding, ready for attack. The operations were of a most interesting nature, and were carried out to the entire satisfaction of the General Commanding. The troops were in quarters by 2 p.m. The following Staff College officers were attached to the Staff of the General Commanding as gallopers during the day:—Lieutenant Hutton, 52nd; Captain Stephenson, 56th; Major Morris, 58th. The Grand Army Athletic Meeting will be held here on Wednesday and Thursday next, commencing at 2 p.m. each day. In accordance with instructions received from the Horse Guards on Tuesday, twelve men from each corps in the command were selected to proceed to the Grand Military Tournament at the Agricultural Hall; expenses were defrayed from canteen funds. A "combined minor operation" has been ordered for Tuesday next. Colonel Vincent, 3rd Hussars, will command the southern force, and Colonel Jones, R.E., the northern force. Each force will consist of a proportion of the four arms. The strength and special idea of the force opposed to him will be entirely unknown to each commander. About 5,000 or 6,000 Volunteers will assemble at Aldershot for drill with the Regulars during the months of July and August. The Post-Office Rifles will probably be first to arrive about the 7th prox. It has been notified in Division orders here, under authority of War-Office letter, dated June 1, that warrant officers will in future draw paraffin oil, and not candles. The Committee appointed to revise the rules for playing the Kriegs-spiel, of which Major-General F. A. Willis, C.B., is president, reassembled during the week at the Garrison-Instructor's office, South Camp, for further deliberation. The Divisional flat and hurdle races will be held on Wednesday, July 25; honorary secretary, Lieutenant-Colonel Toogood, R.A., Aldershot Lodge. The Hunters' Flat-race of 5 sovs. each, 2 sovs. forfeit, with 50 sovs. added, about 2 miles on the flat, is open to hunters the property of officers of the Army and Navy on full or half-pay. The Hunters' Selling Hurdle Race of 50 sovs. to the winner and 10 sovs. to the second (entrance, 3 sovs.), about 2 miles, over 8 hurdles, is open to hunters the property of officers of the Army and Navy on full or half-pay, or officers of the Reserve Forces. The remainder of the races are confined to hunters the property of officers of the Aldershot Division. Horse-Guards permission has been given to grant furloughs to non-commissioned officers and men recently returned from foreign service. The following officers have been examined for promotion, in subjects (a) and (b), section 4, paragraph 28, Queen's Regulations, and have been found qualified:—Lieutenants Scholes, Colhoun, Henderson, and Woodford, 84th Regiment. An advance party of three officers and 200 men of the 3rd Royal Fusiliers (Royal Westminster Militia), from Hounslow, arrived yesterday (Friday); the remainder of the regiment—24 officers and 700 men—will arrive on Monday next, for annual training. This battalion will be encamped on Rushmoor, and attached to the 1st Brigade. The 4th Royal Munster Fusiliers (Kerry Militia), 600 strong, are expected to arrive at Portsmouth from Queenstown to-day, and will be moved to Aldershot, for annual training. This battalion will be encamped on Rushmoor Hill, and attached to the 2nd Brigade. One hundred recruits for the 2nd Battalion 18th Royal Irish will arrive at the same time. The 2nd Derby Militia, 650 strong, left the Camp yesterday (Friday), by special train for Derby, to rejoin its head-quarters, on completion of its annual training. Major-General R. P. Radcliffe, R.A., Inspector-General of Artillery, made his annual inspection of the batteries at Aldershot during the week. On Friday the whole of the Artillery paraded for his inspection in the Long Valley. Surgeon-Major J. Warren, A.M.D., will shortly arrive here for duty. Surgeon F. A. Harris, A.M.D., has assumed temporary medical charge of the 2nd Brigade, during the absence on leave of Surgeon-Major Beattie, M.D.

Lord Wolseley arrived in London on Monday from Moscow and St. Petersburg, and resumed his duties at the War Office as Adjutant-General.

"Q.M.S.P.M.S." writes:—"In your issue of June 16 I notice that a correspondent states that the fact of regimental quartermaster-serjeants ever being promoted from the junior ranks is 'absurdly incorrect.' In justice to your numerous readers, may I mention that the regimental quartermaster-serjeant of my regiment was a long way down the roll of non-commissioned officers when promoted; and in another, that I mention in confidence, a lance-serjeant has recently been promoted to that position."

Reviews.

The Egyptian War of 1882. By Lieutenant-Colonel Hermann Vogt. (Kegan Paul, Trench, and Co.)

The work on the Egyptian Campaign now published is a translation of an account of that memorable military operation written by an officer in the German Army. It has not been the author's desire, we are told, to volunteer his opinions as to the conduct, the capacity, and the possible motives of personages whose actions are brought into view, his object being rather to produce an independent military criticism, free from partiality or indulgence, and at the same time present a searching review of our military system—its weak points, and the difficulties which beset us in sudden emergencies, coming as they do in connection with striking successes in the field. Having briefly reviewed the principal events which led up to the Egyptian Campaign, the author devotes some pages to a short account of Alexandria, its fortifications, and the military position which it occupied when the recent hostilities commenced. With reference to the important question, whether the bombardment of the city was justified as a political necessity, or whether it could be reconciled with the rights of nations, the author is of opinion that, merely from a military point of view, it must be characterised as premature, and certainly was not followed up with the necessary caution and energy. "As things were, if even a small force had been landed immediately, it must have completely routed the Egyptian troops, for even the artillerymen, of whose courage the English reports speak so much, had by no means shown themselves heroes." Lord Alcester will probably feel amused whenever he reads the following passage:—

> "It was not known till afterwards on the Continent that Sir Beauchamp Seymour had overstated the military efficiency of his adversaries, in order to add brilliancy to the results of the engagement, although he can hardly have been ignorant of the real state of things. Had the bombardment been postponed until a sufficient number of troops had arrived from Cyprus, Malta, and Gibraltar, the whole complication would probably at once have come to an end, or even if the Admiral had landed all the seamen and Marines that could be spared immediately after the bombardment, a military success would have been not only possible, but probable. In any case, the unhappy town would have escaped the fate which now overtook it."

In the course of the author's narrative, he briefly sketches some of the leading personages who took part in the campaign, notably Lord Wolseley, who, it appears, was knighted for his conduct in the Red River expedition in 1870. There is a good deal in this volume which will please the general reader, who may not have time or opportunity to study more abstruse and important works on the same subject, but it cannot well be regarded as an authority on "the Egyptian War of 1882."

Adventures of Three Fugitives in Siberia. By MM. Victor Tissot and Constane Améro. (Remington and Co.)—More than one work of considerable importance regarding Siberia has been recently published, and duly appreciated by the public. Messrs. Remington and Co. have now issued from the press a single volume on the same subject, which, although much less pretentious than the others which preceded it, is a powerfully-written narrative of the adventures which occurred to three fugitives who had escaped from the horrors of the Siberian mines. Not only are the incidents of the escape most graphically described, but from the beginning to the end the readers' interest cannot fail to be sustained. There is no occasion to point to any particular portions of this absorbing tale. It is replete with interest from the beginning to the end.

GATLINGS AT TEL-EL-MAHUTA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—I beg to correct two of the many inaccuracies contained in the statement of your correspondent in the Army and Navy Gazette of the 16th, with reference to the above. Firstly, that the two Gatlings were commanded by Lieut. King-Harman, of the Orion, and not by Lieut. Burney, as stated. Secondly, that the extreme right of the position was held by a detachment of Marines, under the command of a subaltern of the Northumberland, and that the Gatlings did not come into action there at all.—I am, &c.,

VERITAS.

"A Well-Wisher" writes:—"Referring to the paragraph in your issue of the 9th inst., relative to compulsorily retirement of captains of 20 years' service and 40 years of age, might I be allowed to point out that the ages quoted are incorrect, viz., 43 years, according to the official Army List? Of the two officers named, the captain of the 4th was born in 1843 (June); aged 40, June, 1883; gazetted ensign in Aug., 1865; total, 18 years' service; having previously served in the Indian Navy, including the capture of Dwarka in 1859; also the China Campaign (medal), and Abyssinia (medal); served also as adjutant to his regiment and adjutant of the Militia. The second captain of the 31st:—Date of birth, Nov. 13, 1843; gazetted ensign, July, 1862; making 20 years' and 11 months' service; having served in China, India, Abyssinia, &c. This officer also served as adjutant to his regiment, and is now adjutant of a Militia regiment. Surely, officers under this heading should be promoted at least as supernumeraries, providing they have passed the required examination, and not compulsorily retired. In the latter case more especially, the officer has been passed over more than once by officers of the linked battalions, not because they were more efficient, but simply because the step went in the 2nd Batn. As the regiment is now one battalion, it seems it would be only just to promote as such."

LORD CHARLES BERESFORD ON MACHINE-GUNS.

The interest which has of late sprung up, and is now taken by all classes throughout the country, in machine-guns, was made evident on Friday last by the fact that the Theatre of the Royal United Service Institution was crowded as full as it could possibly be by a mixed audience, whose interest in the lecture delivered by Lord Charles Beresford on machine-guns was manifested in a most marked manner. That the theatre of the Institution should have been crammed to overflowing is all the more remarkable from the fact that the Council of the Institution had previously advertised, it is now said by mistake, that the lecture would not be delivered. Many officers, therefore, did not attend who wou'd otherwise have done so. This was, as things turned out, extremely lucky, as the theatre was so closely packed in all parts that no standing room was available. Admiral Sir F. Nicholson, C.B., was in the chair, Lord Alcester having been unable to attend owing to a slight indisposition. Among those present were H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Prince Albert Victor, Lord Chelmsford, Lord Wharncliffe, Lord Henry Lennox, Sir Thomas Brassey, M.P., Rear-Admiral Hamilton, Gens. Sir Beauchamp Walker and Sir W. Codrington, Col. Reilly, Director-General of Ordnance and Stores, besides many other prominent officers of both services. Lord Charles Beresford began by calling attention to the fact that for a number of years past the machine-gun question has been repeatedly brought before the United Service Institution, and so well thrashed out by its supporters and opponents, as to leave little to be said either as to the merits or demerits of these guns. But the time spent by Lord Charles Beresford in the Mediterranean in command of the Condor has evidently not been wasted, for on Friday last this gallant officer imported such a mass of facts and figures totally new into his lecture as to leave no doubt in the minds of his audience as to the real utility of these rapid-firing guns. Dealing in the first instance with statistics, the lecturer stated that by March, 1884, the Navy would possess 565 Nordenfelt machine-guns of 1-in. calibre, throwing a solid steel bullet, and principally useful for repelling torpedo-boat attacks; added to this, on the same date the Navy would possess, or should possess if the contract were fulfilled, 350 Gardner machine-guns, ·45, or rifle, calibre, throwing lead bullets. These numbers, added to the 142 Gatlings already in the service, would make up the total number of 1,057 machine-guns for the Fleet, among which not a single shell machine-gun was included. The danger to the ships of our Fleet could not be exaggerated if a sudden war broke out, and England had to face a fleet, or possibly combined fleets, of foreign nations, more particularly if the French fleet was one of those opposed to us. In some classes it was quite undeniable that the French had a better vessel altogether than the English; in all classes they were better gunned, as not only had they the enormous advantage of breech-loaders, but their guns were vastly superior to the English in penetration and rapidity of fire per weight of gun. By means of a plan, very clearly drawn, Lord Charles Beresford illustrated the use made by the French of their Hotchkiss shell guns to bombard Sfax. Their ships were equidistant, and opened fire at night, using the electric light under cover of the darkness in the unillumined triangles, the boats of the fleet advanced to within very short range of the forts. Their aim was perfect, while to the enemy they were invisible, and the hail of small shell which they poured into the positions held by the enemy completely demoralised his men. "Sfax was taken, and the forts were silenced, by the Hotchkiss 1-pounder shell-gun. We have no similar gun in the English Navy." Lord Charles Beresford then proceeded to urge the importance of machine shell-guns, contending that machine-guns capable of throwing a 2-lb. shell should at once be added to the Navy, and that the Nordenfelts to be added by next March should be doubled in number. His views, he added, with emphasis, were shared by his brother-officers, and he believed that the additional guns would be added when the "over-economical allowance to the Admiralty" would admit of it. The 2-lb. shell-gun, Lord Charles said, should have the following qualifications,—it should have great initial velocity and great penetration; the shell should be fused in the base and not in the head, so as to leave the point clear for penetration; the gun should be single-barrelled, so as to be light and easily moved, and shifted as wanted; it should have as far as is possible an all-round fire, with an umbrella-shaped screen over the men, to keep bullets and shell-splinters clear of them, and from under which they could see the enemy from any point of the compass. His reasons for advocating a 2-lb. shell were that it was the best sized machine shell-gun, as it did not recoil even when on its landing carriage, and it had better penetration than the 2½-pounder, and equally good penetration with the 4-pounder tried at Portsmouth, with lower initial velocity, both of which guns were considerably heavier. It was better than the 1-pounder, because the 1-pounder common shell could not penetrate unarmoured ships at 500 yards, or at any angle, nor could it penetrate a gun-port thicker than ½ in., even at a close range. If the 2-pounder shell-gun were supplied at once to our Fleet, it would fill up a dangerous gap in our armament; it would give us a better gun than the French had of the same class, and the best gun possible in the important particulars of initial velocity, penetration, and accuracy, and above all, in the immense advantages of simplicity of working, and in its being far lighter in proportion to its utility than any shell-gun whatever. He spoke warmly of the Nordenfelt 1-in. gun as the best for stopping a torpedo-boat attack, and of its advantages in simplicity of working, in its throwing steel bullets, and in its firing volleys. As regards the Gatling, he said, the principle invited accident, and when the least thing went wrong the gun was out of action. He then dwelt upon the importance of the Navy having rifle-calibre machine-guns, firing the same ammunition as used by the infantry. With regard to the use of the guns at Alexandria, he remarked upon Capt. Walford's statement as to not seeing any of the bullets in the forts. Capt. Walford, he said, did not go into the forts until several days after the soldiers of Arabi had searched everywhere to find relics of the fight. He saw Nordenfelt bullets at Meks, not far from the rear of one of the 10-in. guns, and his men picked up others. The Egyptian officers, too, said that their men would have laid their guns much better if it had not been for the moral effect produced by the continual rain of bullets over their heads. Then, too, 370 men were able, armed with machine-guns, to hold their lines for four days and nights with an army of 9,000 Egyptians within a short distance. Their strength was in the machine-gun, for it was openly stated by Arabi's officers that their men would not face machines which "pumped lead." Lord Charles Beresford then proceeded to speak of the importance of the Navy being well armed, and commented upon its neglect by both political parties. He described the "Treasury policy of the hour" as one of ill-judged economy, and warned the country of the evils which were likely to come upon the nation through the neglect of precautions which every officer knew to be necessary. Referring to the present state and condition of the French Navy, he said:—"This undoubted superiority, ship for ship, which the French Navy possesses at this moment means, that in a sudden war between England and France there is a chance of our being beaten. Why should there be such a chance? There ought to be none; and what does being beaten on the sea mean for England? It means certain, unavoidable, disgraceful capitulation. It is of no use calling attention to the fact that all our riches, all our power, and nearly all our food are actually dependent upon the strength of our Fleet, and its readiness for immediate action. Every child knows that such is the case. If we are beaten at sea, we might have to pay four times as much as the French paid after 1871. This means about eight hundred million pounds sterling, or the approximate value of one year's imports and exports. If we are beaten at sea we have no other resource to turn to, and the victor can fix his terms to us or starve us. It is no question of years, as it used to be, it is one of weeks, and as time rolls on, the capitulation would be made in days if we were beaten." He then went on to say:—"Another question will also be asked, and this probably by many, namely,—If these things are as stated, whose fault is it? That is soon answered. It is England's own fault; it is the country's fault. It is not a party question, as one party is just as bad as another. Don't suppose that all the facts glanced at in this paper are not thoroughly well known to every Naval man, and to all the officers at the Admiralty. But what can they do? The people in authority, who know these facts, are obliged, as a sort of matter of honour, to concur in what I may call the Treasury policy of the hour, and that policy is invariably the same, whatever party is in power. It is one of misjudged economy to the services. The country always approves of this policy, and won't allow any money to be spent. Should the time ever come when we are beaten at sea, don't upbraid or reproach the Navy or its representative authorities. We are not nearly in the position to do all that will be confidently expected of us in a sudden war with a European Power; and what war can be other than sudden war? Many grave and unlooked-for events must occur which will tax the energy and resources of the Navy to the utmost. We must be given the best ships, the best guns, and the best attention that money or foresight can buy or command, to enable us to feel confident as to our ability to fulfil the enormous and sudden obligations which would certainly be thrown upon us in time of war." Lord Charles Beresford then proceeded to prove how the question of money prevented the Admiralty from doing that which was acknowledged to be necessary to maintain our naval supremacy, and that the money spent on the Navy is, after all, only the premium paid by the nation to insure its mercantile marine and commerce, and he concluded a very able paper with the remark that "England possesses no stores of modern war materiel, and, therefore, at present cannot possibly place any armament in her great mercantile fleet of either an offensive or defensive character, which could ensure in any way the safety of themselves or the valuable cargoes they carry."

Obituary.

Gen. T. C. Parr, Bombay Army, died on the 15th inst., at his residence, Powis Lodge, Bickley, Kent, in his 81st year. He was a son of the late Mr. J. O. Parr, of London. Gen. Parr entered the Indian Army in 1818, and was for some years Col. of the 12th Bombay N.I. He attained the rank of lieut.-gen. in 1870, and was placed on the Retired List in 1878.

Sir H. F. F. Johnson, Bart., died on Wednesday last at Avranches, aged 64 years. The late baronet was the eldest son of Sir H. A. Johnson, second baronet. He entered the Army in 1836, and served in the 5th Foot. In 1855 he was made deputy-quartermaster-general at the Mauritius, which appointment he held till 1860, when he became colonel. In Nov. 1866, Sir Henry was appointed deputy-adjutant-general to the forces in Jamaica, and in 1869 to the command of the forces in the Windward and Leeward Islands. He retired from the Army in May, 1873. The deceased officer succeeded to the baronetcy on the death of his father in 1860. He married, in 1851, Emma, eldest daughter of Sir D. W. Barclay, Bart., by whom he leaves a son, H. W. Allen, born in 1855—a lieutenant in the 51st Light Infantry, who succeeds to the baronetcy—and a daughter.

The Times says:—"H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught will leave England in the autumn for India, to assume command of the Meerut Division. Lord Downe will accompany him as his aide-de-camp. In the spring the Duke will succeed Gen. the Hon. A. Hardinge as Commander-in-Chief at Bombay, and Lieut.-Col. Ronald Lane will be his military secretary. The Duke, as at present arranged, will remain in India for two years."

The Army.

2nd Life Guards. Major Lord Downe will accompany the Duke of Connaught to India, in the autumn, as aide-de-camp. It is worthy of record that, at the regimental dinner which took place on the 13th inst., three generations of one family who had served in the regiment were present, viz., Capt. Leyland, Col. Naylor-Leyland, and Lieut. Naylor-Leyland, who is at present serving in the regiment.

1st King's Dragoon Guards. Lieut. and Adjt. W. H. Oglander-Hennah died of fever at Meerut, on the 18th ult. The deceased, who was son of the late Rev. W. V. Hennah, of East Cowes, Isle of Wight, obtained his commission on May 6, 1882.

3rd Dragoon Guards. The regiment is under orders to move from Edinburgh to Manchester.

4th Hussars. The regiment will proceed from Hounslow to Aldershot for the drill season. Lieut. Blacker succeeds Capt. Farmer in the adjutancy.

15th Hussars. Capt. and Qrmr. Staniland is about to retire upon pension.

18th Hussars. Capt. Hemans has completed his term of service as superintendent of gymnasia at Canterbury, and rejoins head-quarters on Sept. 1.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Col. W. H. Goodenough, C.B., has been awarded the Artillery distinguished-service reward vacant by the death of Major-Gen. Michell, C.B. Col. Goodenough commanded the Artillery of the Expeditionary Force in Egypt.

Coldstream Guards. Capt. and Qrmr. A. Hurle, on the Half-pay List, died at Coldstream Villa, Blenheim Road, N.W., on the 15th inst., aged 73 years. The deceased obtained his commission as qrmr., Feb. 13, 1852, and retired, Feb. 27, 1867. "A Lieutenant of the Old 8th Company" writes:—"When a General or colonel passes from our midst, his fame is duly recorded by the Press; but when an old soldier who did excellent service as a non-commissioned officer 'falls out' for ever, no tribute to his merits meets the eyes of his comrades. Could you be induced to make an exception to this rule? Among the deaths announced in the Times of the 18th inst. appears the name of Capt. Arthur Hurle, late of the Coldstream Guards. When I joined the regiment, he was serjeant-major of the 1st Batn. Skulkers quaked before his stern presence; but the steady recruit found a friend in him, for his heart was kind, and his nature just. Of strict integrity, complete trust was reposed in him. From the colonel-in-command to the junior ensign, the officers respected him. Nay, I am sure that if the adjutant of those old-fashioned days were living now, he would readily acknowledge how much he profited by Hurle's advice, both in the orderly-room and at drill. Slightly educated, the worthy Coldstreamer had capital abilities, and taught himself a variety of useful knowledge. Apt in repartee, he possessed also rugged eloquence. On the two-hundredth anniversary of the regiment, in 1850, 'Old Hurle' addressed the soldiers in so stirring a fashion that our colonel seemed almost envious. Admirable conduct as serjeant-major—a very important and difficult post in London—procured him the place of quartermaster, and a few years ago he retired from duty, with the rank of captain in the Army. Such men are at present so rare, that I venture to bring his honourable and valuable life to your notice. The young soldiers of the present period could have no fitter model by which to shape their career."

5th Northumberland Fusiliers. Lieut. Herbert Armstrong, 2nd Batn., has been granted leave from India to England for 15 months, on private affairs.

7th Royal Fusiliers. Lieut. G. C. Donald, of this regt., has been appointed A.D.C. to Major-Gen. H. N. D. Prendergast, V.C., commanding the troops stationed in the British Burmah Division.

18th Royal Irish. Major-Gen. Willis, C.B., presented the Khedive's bronze star to the 2nd Batn. at Aldershot on Monday. Altogether 20 officers and 729 men received the star.

ROYAL MARINES.

Six appointments to the Royal Marine Artillery as probationary lieutenants will be offered to the candidates who compete at the approaching examination for admission to the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich. Candidates who competed at the examination held in December last will also be eligible for these appointments.

Five commissions in the Royal Marine Light Infantry will be offered to candidates who compete for admission to the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, at the approaching examination. Gentlemen desirous of being placed on the list of candidates for these appointments should apply to the Secretary of the Admiralty. The fact of a candidate having his name placed on the list of the Royal Marines will not debar him from accepting an appointment to Woolwich or Sandhurst, should his place in the competition render him eligible for entry.

59th East Lancashire Regiment. The "Lilywhite's Club" dinner came off on the 6th inst., at the Grosvenor Gallery Restaurant, and was well attended, seven past and seventeen present "Lilywhites" availing themselves of this opportunity of renewing old acquaintances, and upholding that ésprit de corps so cherished by all true soldiers. The band of the 59th, some 45 strong, played a charming programme, under the direction of the bandmaster, Mr. Gordon, which was very highly appreciated. The following were present:—Sir Henry Gordon; Lieut.-Cols. Macnamara of Ayle, Frampton, and Sartorius, V.C.; Majors Spofforth, Lawlor, Tidy, and Stoyle; Capts. Goodall, Hutton, Drought, Downes, Irwin, Apthorp, and Battye; Lieuts. Worgan, Lake, Twynam, MacAdam, Goff, Pile, Voyle, and Hale.

60th, King's Royal Rifle Corps. The Egyptian Gazette has the following:—"It is with considerable regret that we have to announce the departure from Egypt on Tuesday next of Major Hutton, Assistant Military Secretary. Major Hutton, then Captain Hutton, was one of the first of our Army to land in Egypt, having come to Alexandria with Sir Archibald Alison as his aide-de-camp. The services he rendered in that capacity when Alexandria was first occupied by a small force of British troops are known only to a few persons, outside military circles, who knew the difficulties of the position and the hard and anxious work which devolved on the General's right-hand man. At Tel-el-Kebir Captain Hutton was wounded in the storming of the entrenchments, while in attendance on General Alison, and for his services in Egypt was promoted to the rank of Major, and on Sir Archibald taking the command of the Army of Occupation was appointed Assistant Military Secretary, the delicate duties of which post he performed with great tact and courtesy. Major Hutton was one of the principal promoters of the Khedivial Sporting Club in Cairo, and he is one of that small knot of Englishmen to whom we are indebted for the development which British sports have attained in Egypt since the occupation of the country. Major Hutton bears with him the best wishes of the numerous friends he has made during his short residence in the country, who still hope that at some future time the experience which he has acquired in Egypt may be turned to useful account, and that the farewell they now bid him may only prove to be au revoir!"

64th North Staffordshire Regiment. The command has fallen vacant by the death of Lieut.-Col. C. H. Sams, which occurred at the Courtyard, Eltham, Kent, on the 16th inst., aged 43 years. The deceased joined the service, Feb. 12, 1858; became lieut., Sept. 25, 1860; capt., Jan. 8, 1868; major, Feb. 16, 1878; and lieut.-col., July 1, 1881; and succeeded to the command of the regiment, March 18, 1882. He served in the Ashantee campaign, from Jan., 1874, in the Transport service, south of the River Prah (medal).

71st Highland Light Infantry. Major Lowndes has completed his five years as adjt. of the 2nd Wiltshire Rifle Volunteers, and will join head-quarters on Sept. 10.

79th Cameron Highlanders. The people of Dundee have subscribed for a monument to be erected to the memory of Pte. Donald Cameron, who fell at the battle of Tel-el-Kebir. Cameron was the foremost in his regiment to mount the trenches, and the same fact is testified to by his comrade, Pte. W. Wood, of the 79th, who, in a letter to Mr. James Cameron, Balardie, Abernyte, father of the deceased soldier, wrote as follows:—"I thought it my duty to write you, and let you know how matters stand with your son, D. Cameron. Perhaps you will have seen it by this time in the newspapers—his being killed at the battle of Tel-el-Kebir. Poor fellow, I can assure you you need never be ashamed of him. I saw him with my own eyes; he was the first man to mount the parapet of the trenches, and the second man to fall. A very cheerful fellow he was, and brave as well, and a very good friend of mine, as he and I were fellow-tradesmen—in fact, every one liked him in the company. He was an exceedingly strong man. Donald and I were great friends." The monument is now completed, and will shortly be erected in the quiet churchyard at Moulin. The inscription is as follows:—"In memory of Private Donald Cameron, eldest son of James Cameron, a native of Inverness-shire, and of Janet Stewart Cameron, a native of Moulin; born at Pitewan, Lintrathen, June 19, 1861; joined the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders, Jan. 9, 1878; was killed at the battle of Tel-el-Kebir, Sept. 13, 1882. 'The first man to mount the parapet, and the second to fall.' Erected by readers of the People's Journal."

85th King's Light Infantry. Major Smith has been appointed D.A.A. and Q.M.G. on the Staff of Major-Gen. A. Macdonald.

88th Connaught Rangers. Col. Hopton has been granted leave from India to England for six months, on urgent private affairs.

90th Cameronians (Scottish Rifles). Major Brunker, who lately proceeded to India on vacating the appointment of Deputy-Assist.-Adjt.-Gen. at Portsmouth, will, we hear, shortly be appointed to the Qrmr.-Gen.'s Department. He passed out of the Staff College in 1876, and has since been employed on the Staff in England and at the Cape.

91st Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. Lieut.-Col. W. G. Scott, formerly of the regiment, died at his residence, St. Pair, Manche, France, on the 16th inst., aged 74 years.

108th Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers. Major Dooner, brigade-major at the Curragh, is about to take up the appointment of garrison instructor at Dublin.

Rifle Brigade. Brevet Lieut.-Col. Lane will join the Duke of Connaught's Staff at Bombay next spring, as assist. military secretary. Major Hon. M. Curzon has been returned as Member for Leicestershire, in the Conservative interest, in the room of the late Major-Gen. Burnaby. Major Fergusson is a candidate for the representation of Peterborough, in the Conservative interest. Lieut. Alison is about to retire from the service.

Commissariat and Transport Staff. The officers, past and present, dined at the Freemasons' Tavern on the 14th inst. There were present:—Comies.-Gen. Sir E. Morris, K.C.B., presiding, and J. Long; Deputy-Comies.-Gen. Pigott, Blunt, and Robinson, C.B.; Assist.-Comies.-Gen. Boothby, Ryland, Randall, C.B., Le Mesurier, Powell, Reeves, C.B., Hughes, C.M.G., Goddard, Parkyn, Cook, Abbott, and Dunne; Deputy-Assist.-Comies.-Gen. Bridge, Fryer, Baker, Edwards, Ward, Hope, and Creagh; Capts. Hallewell, Lea, and Knocker; Deputy-Comies. Bridgman, Storrar-Smith, and Williams; Qrmrs. Phillips, Crumplin, and Dean; Capt. and Qrmr. Howland.

MILITIA.

Southern Division, Royal Artillery. An interesting event, in a Military point of view, took place at the officers' mess, 2nd Brigade (late Hants Artillery Militia), Fort Grange, Gosport, on June 1. The pleasing duty of presenting Capt. Tillotson, R.H.A., with a handsome silver punch-bowl (time of George II.) devolved upon the Colonel-Commandant, who, in his own name and that of the officers, "presented the testimonial to Capt. Tillotson, as a token of their esteem and friendship in remembrance of his five years' adjutancy with this Brigade." The punch-bowl was mounted on a black ebony stand with a silver plate, on which the above words were inscribed.

Scottish Division, Royal Artillery. The 3rd Brigade (late Duke of Edinburgh's Own Edinburgh Artillery Militia) was disbanded last Saturday, having completed its 27 days' training. They were highly complimented by the inspecting officer for the creditable manner in which they performed the gun and repository drills, &c.; their march-past was also performed with remarkable precision and steadiness. It is to be hoped that the authorities will next year see how absolutely necessary it is that this brigade should be placed under canvas, its being in lodgings all over the town seriously affects its discipline and cleanliness, and it is wonderful with these impediments in the way, how well the men turn out.

South Irish Division, Royal Artillery. Col. Rice, R.A., commanding Southern Division Auxiliary Artillery, inspected the 6th Brigade, at Duncannon Fort, on the 15th and 16th inst. The inspection was of a very minute character. On the 15th, the inspecting officer saw and examined both officers and men in the different gun drills, gyn drill, mounting, and dismounting by parbuckling, &c. He then examined all the books of the Brigade in the orderly-room, and expressed himself well pleased with the manner in which they were kept. On the 16th, the brigade paraded in full marching order on the Sands, under the command of Lieut.-Col. Lynch, where it was drawn up in line and received the inspecting officer with a general salute. Col. Rice then proceeded down the ranks and inspected each man. The order was given to march-past, which they did to the air of the regimental quickstep; after which they were put through the manual and firing exercises by the junior major. Each captain was then called upon to put his battery through company movements, which were done with accuracy and precision. Having formed in quarter-column, the officers were called to the front, when Col. Rice addressed the Brigade as follows:—"Col. Lynch, will you please convey to Col. Keane (whom I regret has been prevented through illness from being present to-day) my gratification and pleasure at what I have seen here. I was glad to see your legitimate drills (I mean, the artillery drills which I saw yesterday) have not been neglected, and I am quite aware that your present state of efficiency, cleanliness, and regularity in camp can only have been acquired by hard work on the part of officers, non-commissioned officers, and men. Your conduct during the training has been exceptionally good, such things as courts-martial being unknown in this Brigade. I think, Col. Lynch, I need not say no more. You will, therefore, please inform Col. Keane that I shall have much pleasure in forwarding a favourable report of the Brigade through the proper channel, for the information of his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief." The following is a list of the officers present with the brigade during the training:—Col. L. G. F. Keane, C.B., in command; Lieut.-Col. Lynch; Major Hewetson; Capts. Chearnley, Dennehy, Chapman, Keogh (Instructor of Artillery), and Hudson; Lieuts. Briscoe, Seally, Carew, Armstrong, Burlton, Jack, and Drew; Qrmr. Flanagan, Surg.-Major Rogers, Major and Adjt. O. W. Cuffe.

Lincolnshire Regiment. The presentation of new colours to the 4th Batn. took place at Belton Park on Wednesday afternoon. Lady Brownlow, in making the presentation, spoke as follows:—"Col. Moore, officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the 4th Batn. Lincolnshire Regt.,—I have the greatest pleasure in presenting these new colours to you, feeling every confidence, as I do, that you will preserve them,—in peace with honour, in war with glory! May God's blessing rest upon this regiment, and may it flourish long to defend our beloved country! Gentlemen, I have the honour of presenting the Queen's colours to you, to keep, to defend, and to honour." Col. Moore replied:—"Lady Brownlow,—On behalf of the 4th Batn. of the Lincolnshire Regt., I receive these new colours with mingled feelings of sorrow and of pride—of sorrow to part with those dear old colours under which we have served for nearly 30 years, with, I trust, some amount of credit and honour, and with which we volunteered to go to the front and fight the battles of our country on more than one occasion. It was in the year 1854, when Lady Marian Alford, the esteemed mother of our noble and respected Lord-Lieutenant and present honorary colonel, presented us with those colours; and although, unhappily, few besides myself now remain in the regiment since that memorable day, I have the satisfaction of feeling they have never been disgraced, and I therefore can see them depart from our ranks with pride as well as with regret. Your ladyship has been pleased to add grace to this ceremony by presenting with your own fair hands the new colours which henceforth are to lead the men I am so proud of commanding. It remains for me to thank your ladyship for your kind condescension, and to assure you, as I confidently do, that they will never be tarnished by such officers and men as are now serving in this battalion; and that, should we ever be called upon to follow them into active service, they will be borne proudly in any position where duty and the honour and interest of our country require them, whether it be in defence of our hearths and homes, or in foreign climes. Men of the Fourth Battalion,—We receive these colours with joy, and we will ever remember that they have been consecrated by our good and venerable Bishop, and dedicated to the service of our Queen and country. I am certain you will never disgrace them in peace or war, and, if needs be, that you will defend them with your lives. My Lord Brownlow, I take this public opportunity of thanking you for the many and continued acts of kindness and generosity which you have shown to the battalion of which you are the honoured head, and which so many of your illustrious ancestors have commanded under its old title of the Royal South Lincoln Militia. For some years your lordship's crest has been its well-known badge; and although the territorial system has deprived us of that honour, yet I trust it will never deprive us of that warm interest which it shall be our endeavour to deserve, and I hope neither your lordship nor the inhabitants of South Lincolnshire will ever be ashamed of this battalion, which is raised exclusively in this part of the county of Lincoln."

The following circular has been addressed to commanding officers of Militia battalions:—"The Woodlands, near Stockport, June 18, 1883. Sir,—Having been appointed captain of the Militia team for the United Services Match, I shall take it as a great favour if you will forward to me, as soon as possible, a list of officers and men, if any, in your regiment who would wish to compete. The match takes place at Wimbledon, on Wednesday, July 18, with Martini rifles, at 200, 500, and 600 yards, military positions. In order to enable me to make a proper selection, I should like to be furnished with a copy of scores made by the officers and men at those distances.—I am, &c., Henry Turner, Capt., 4th Batn. Cheshire Regt."

The under-mentioned regiments are called out for training on Monday:—3rd Durham Light Infantry, at Barnard Castle; 3rd Royal Fusiliers, at Aldershot, in camp; and 4th Royal Munster Fusiliers, at Aldershot, in camp. The 5th Brig. South Irish Division (South Tipperary Artillery) also assemble on Monday, at Duncannon Fort; the 5th Brig. North Irish Division (Galway Artillery), at Galway, on Thursday; and the 3rd Batn. Connaught Rangers, at Westport, also on Thursday. The following regiments, on completion of training, will be dismissed to-day:—3rd Brig. Eastern Division (Suffolk Artillery), at Ipswich; 6th Brig. Scottish Division (Argyll and Bute Artillery), at Campbeltown; 2nd Brig. Welsh Division (Royal Glamorgan Artillery), at Swansea; Monmouthshire Engineers, at Monmouth; 4th Lincolnshire Regt., at Grantham; and the 3rd Derbyshire Regt., at Derby. The 3rd Batn. Welsh Regt. was dismissed at Cardiff on Thursday, and the 3rd Brig. North Irish Division (Donegal Artillery), at Letterkenny, yesterday. Sixty-three regiments in England, Scotland, and Wales have now completed their training, and of the 45 in Ireland, 27 will by Monday have been called out.

YEOMANRY CAVALRY.

Middlesex. The annual training will commence on July 28, and extend to Aug. 4, at Hampton Court.

Duke of Lancaster's Own. This regiment, which has been under training since the 12th inst., was inspected at Lancaster on Tuesday last by Col. Lord R. Kerr, late 10th Hussars. There was a muster of about 300 of all ranks.

VOLUNTEERS.

2nd Tower Hamlets Engineers. The annual official inspection of this battalion was held on the 16th inst., at Victoria Park, by Col. Hart, V.C., R.E.; 530 of all ranks were on parade. Subsequently, Col. Hart visited the head-quarters, where the engineering works were inspected.

1st London Engineers. This regiment has been in camp at Hendon since Saturday last, and will be officially inspected to-day.

3rd Middlesex Artillery. Lieut.-Col. Lord Truro's excellent command will be inspected this evening at Wellington Barracks.

London Rifle Brigade. The Duke of Cambridge, honorary colonel, will inspect the regiment on the Guards' Ground, Hyde Park, at 6 o'clock to-night.

3rd London Rifles. This fine battalion will be inspected this evening on the Horse Guards' Parade, by Field-Marshal Lord Napier of Magdala, honorary colonel. It is anticipated that over 1,000 of all ranks will be present.

10th Middlesex Rifles. Col. Moncrieff, Scots Guards, inspected this battalion last Saturday evening in Regent's Park. Under Lieut.-Col. Blackburne Tew, the regiment stood in 10 companies of 32 files, and its appearance and drill gave great satisfaction.

11th Middlesex (Duke of Cambridge's Own Middlesex Regiment). The regiment, under Col. Gore Browne, was officially inspected on Saturday evening on the Horse Guards' Parade by Major-Gen. Higginson, C.B., commanding the Home District. The parade state showed 695 of all ranks. Gen. Higginson said he considered that all ranks were well trained, the men showed great steadiness, and were quick to correct mistakes. The manual firing and bayonet exercises were very well done. The General also commented on the creditable fact that no officer or man (who had not previously applied for and obtained written leave) was absent from the inspection. He also paid a high tribute of praise to Volunteers in general for their zeal, enthusiasm, and self-sacrifice, which kept the force alive. The officers present were Col. Gore Brown, Majors Wickenden and Hotham (adjt.), Capts. Russel, Long, Robbins, A. Whewell, and Haywood, and Lieuts. Jordan, Thompson, F. J. Neele, E. A. Neele, Brown, Freeth, and Beningfield. The battalion paraded for the last time in grey, as early in 1884 it will adapt the scarlet uniform of the Line regiment with which it is affiliated. The change of clothing for the whole battalion will be made on the same day, and not, as is customary with Volunteers, by companies. Pending the approval of her Majesty, the Rev. Prebendary Cadman, M.A., Chaplain to the Archbishop of Canterbury, Rector of Holy Trinity Church, Marylebone, has accepted the chaplaincy of the corps. "An Old Soldier" writes:—"I witnessed, on Saturday last, the inspection of the 20th Middlesex Volunteers on the Horse Guards' Parade. The battalion, numbering about 600 of all ranks, was first formed in column facing south, and then the eight strong companies (of about 30 files) were wheeled into line an inspected. As the battalion stood in line, the good physique of the men was very noticeable, and the steadiness and discipline of the 20th may be very favourably compared with the Line. After the inspection of the ranks, the battalion marched past in column, in quarter-column, and in column of double companies. The marching all through was good, but the marching by double companies was excellent. The bayonet exercise was then performed in a storm of rain. No doubt it might have been done better, and probably is very often by the same battalion. It was noticeable that three of the officers wore the new scarlet uniform, which the corps is about to adopt. The commanding officer's soldierlike word of command had a very great deal to do with the success of the inspection, but the officers generally deserve the greatest credit."

13th Middlesex (Queen's Westminster) Rifles will be officially inspected this evening in Hyde Park.

15th Middlesex (Customs and Docks) Rifles. This battalion will undergo its annual inspection this evening in Battersea Park.

18th Middlesex Rifles. Col. Fitzroy, Coldstream Guards, inspected Lieut.-Col. Gordon Ives' command last Saturday evening in Hyde Park. Nearly 800 of all ranks were present, and the drill, including the bayonet-exercise, gave every satisfaction to the inspecting officer.

19th Middlesex (Bloomsbury) Rifles. This in all respects model battalion is to be officially inspected this evening in the grounds of the Foundling Hospital.

24th Middlesex (Post Office) Rifles. We understand that the Field Telegraph Companies of this regiment have commenced the course of special instruction in flag, heliograph, and lamp drills.

1st Surrey Rifles. Col. FitzRoy, commanding the 31st Regimental District, inspected this regiment on Saturday last at the head-quarters, Camberwell. The battalion stood in six good companies. Col. FitzRoy expressed himself pleased with the muster and drill.

1st Volunteer Battalion, West Surrey Regiment. Col. Lloyd, commanding the 2nd Regimental District, inspected this battalion at Croydon last Saturday. The muster was about 550, in eight companies, and the drill and appearance of all ranks gave evident satisfaction to the inspecting officer.

2nd Tower Hamlets Rifles. Col. Moncrieff, Scots Guards, inspected this battalion last Saturday evening in Regent's Park. There were 723 on parade, out of 843 enrolled. Lieut.-Col. Sir Fowell Buxton was in command.

Amusements.

At the Royal Italian Opera, the first appearance this season of Madame Adelina Patti attracted an overflowing audience last Saturday evening, and the welcome accorded to the favourite songstress on her entrance as Rosina, in Rossini's "Barbiere di Siviglia," was of the warmest kind. Signor Cotogni was Figaro, Signor Nicolini, Almaviva, Signor de Reszke, Basilio, and Signor Scolara, Bartolo. On Monday, "La Gioconda" was repeated. "La Traviata" was given on Tuesday, with Madame Patti as Violetta; "Aïda," with Madame Maria Durand as the heroine, on Wednesday; and the ever-popular "Le Nozze di Figaro" was represented on Thursday, with Madame Albani, Madame Espetto, and Madame Lucca comprised in the cast.

At the Gaiety, the Gymnase company presented, on Monday evening, "Monsieur le Ministre," a clever comedy of character, written by the well-known French journalist M. Claretie, and produced in Paris so recently as last February.

After a brief career of six nights, Mr. Wilkie Collins's unsuccessful drama of "Rank and Riches" has been removed from the Adelphi playbill, and the American version of "La Dame aux Camélias," already played at the Gaiety and Imperial Theatres, under the title of "Camille," has been substituted. Miss Lingard here resumes her position as the heroine, and gives increased effect to the more pathetic situations.

At the Opera Comique, Mr. John S. Clarke varied his lively programme on Monday evening, reproducing "The Comedy of Errors," with the same distribution of characters as before, and reviving with excellent effect Mr. John Brougham's eccentric drama "Among the Breakers," originally produced at the Strand Theatre, July 26, 1869.

The few weeks of the season remaining at the Avenue Theatre will be occupied by Offenbach's merry and melodious opera of "Barbe Bleue," originally brought out at the Variétés, Paris, in 1866, with Mdlle. Schneider in the prominent female character, and soon after transferred to the London stage, when Miss Julia Matthews and Miss Emily Soldene identified themselves with the English version. The translation of MM. Meilhac and Helévy's lively libretto furnished by the late Mr. Charles Kenney could hardly be improved, and it is here once again brought into requisition.

The grand entertainment and costume ball to be given by the members of the Savage Club in aid of an endowment for the Royal College of Music will take place at the Royal Albert Hall on Wednesday, July 11.

Brigdr.-Gen. J. H. Gordon, C.B., Bengal S.C., has been selected to receive the Indian good-service pension vacated by Major-Gen. Sir H. T. Macpherson, V.C., K.C.B., K.C.S.I., Bengal S.C., who has succeeded to colonel's allowance; and similar pensions have been conferred upon Col. W. Bannerman, Bombay S.C., in the place of Brigdr.-Gen. J. Blair, V.C.; upon Brigdr.-Gen. T. E. Gordon, C.B., C.S.I., Bengal S.C., in the room of Col. W. C. Mylne, Bengal S.C.; and upon Col. R. Murray, Bengal S.C., in place of Lieut.-Gen. H. H. Maxwell, C.B., Royal Bengal Artillery.

Army & Navy Gazette.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JUNE 23, 1883.

As the Army Estimates are likely to come on again some time next week, or before the end of June, we trust that the appeal of the compulsorily Retired Purchase Colonels may be reached in the next discussion. Presuming that such will be the case, we would again draw the attention of the honourable Members of both Houses to the nature of the grievance of the officers in question. They assert that their purchase-money has been sunk during many years of active service, on the guarantee of the Crown and the Government that their commissions, so purchased, were stepping-stones to the highest ranks and emoluments of the profession, but entirely unrestricted by any rules as to age or full-pay employment. Article 978, XII., of the Royal Warrant of June 25, 1881, clearly recognises the claim of those Colonels who are debarred on account of age from succeeding to the Establishment of General Officers, to a just equivalent for their loss.

The old Purchase Colonels are simply being pushed aside to make way for juniors, who now rise without payment to the position the Colonels had aspired to. They are not allowed to succeed to a higher scale of pensions, and their purchase-money is escheated by the Crown. However liberal to some minds may appear the rates of pension to officers who could not immediately have claimed like pensions on voluntary retirement, the Purchase Colonels' pension is not adequate to the prospective loss they are destined to suffer, if their lives are spared. Unlike other Purchase officers of junior ranks, their case chiefly rests upon their having surmounted all the obstacles in their path towards future advancement prior to the date of the Royal Warrant obliging them to retire. Their promotion to the Establishment of General Officers was assured, provided they lived long enough to succeed in their proper turn. Therefore, their absolute right to promotion to the "Establishment," and ultimate retirement on the pensions of General Officers, appears to be incontrovertible. In lieu of this right, the Colonels now appeal to the House of Commons to grant them the full Regulation value of their commissions when Purchase was abolished, with interest on the same from the dates of their compulsory retirement. Some doubtless will contend that the officers have no case, that their grievance is only one of sentiment. But the War Office has admitted that they have a case. The only point is as to how the case shall be met, and in deciding it the fact will have to be kept in view that the officers have been removed from the Army against their wish and inclination. They were removed presumably in the interests of the State. Then, it is clearly for the State to make up to them for all they have lost.

We understand a proposal has been made to increase the establishment of Major-Generals of Engineers, in order to save from retirement Colonel Sir Andrew Clarke, K.C.M.G., Inspector-General of Fortifications, who, unless promoted, will be retired next month.

We wonder if any notice will be taken in Parliament of Lord Wolseley's evidence before the Channel Tunnel Committee on Thursday, viz., that the invasion of England by the French was a feasible operation now, and would continue to be so until this country was put in a proper state of defence? Further, that we had half a million of men with muskets—he could not call them soldiers—for home defence. Lord Wolseley spoke of the half-million as men with muskets, would it not have been more in accordance with facts if he had called them lads? But who have given us these lads, with or without muskets? Has not his lordship himself had a considerable deal to do in the preparation of the hash, which until lately he seemed to regard with no small favour? Is he, too, changing his views and opinions, or at least the expression of them, as others have done?

Colonel T. Phillips, half-pay, late 18th Hussars, who vacated command of his regiment last year in conformity with the five-years' rule, has now followed the example of General Evelyn Wood, and been called to the Bar. This should give him an additional claim for employment on the Staff of the Army.

The Canadian Government has succeeded, we understand, in obtaining the vote it had asked for, for the establishment of the three Infantry Schools for the instruction of officers of the Dominion Militia, and in addition, a new Artillery School is to be added in British Columbia. It seems, therefore, that notwithstanding the ungenerous attacks to which Major-General Luard has been subjected on account of the honesty of his last annual report, some of the most prominent of Canada's politicians are sensible of the justice of the General's remarks.

The number of Committees and Sub-Committees now at work at Aldershot is absolutely bewildering. The following are some of the matters on hand, not to mention those being dealt with by the Sub-Committees:—1. Infantry Valise Equipment, Dress, &c. 2. Saddlery and Cavalry Dress and General Equipment, &c. 3. Revision of Cavalry and Royal Horse Artillery Drill-book. 4. Revision of Manual of Army Signalling. 5. Revision of the Rules of the War Game. 6. On Iron Shield Carts, &c. It is not improbable that it will be possible to add to this list shortly.

We stated last week that a concession had been made to the veterinary profession, by which Veterinary-Surgeons holding commissions in the Army were to be allowed in future to go to Court, and we expressed our satisfaction at this favour having been shown to the Veterinary Department during the régime of the present Principal Veterinary-Surgeon. We notice in the list of presentations at the Levée on Monday last, the name of Mr. J. Collins, who was presented by H.R.H. the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief. This official recognition of their retiring chief will be highly appreciated by the members of the Army Veterinary Department.

Three names have been mentioned in connection with the appointment of Principal Veterinary Surgeon of the Army, about to become vacant by the retirement of Mr. Collins,—those of Inspecting Veterinary-Surgeons Gudgin and Fleming, and First-Class Veterinary-Surgeon Harpley, Royal Horse Guards. It is, however, pretty generally reported that Mr. Fleming is the coming man. Mr. Fleming has done so much to further the interests of veterinary science, and is recognised as an officer of such exceptional vigour, that it certainly could not be considered in the light of an injustice were he selected over the heads of his seniors on the list of Inspectors. He is a man fitted in every way for the position, and being President of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons, his status in the profession is such as to give him the strongest possible claim. His appointment may therefore be looked forward to almost with certainty.

A propos, Mr. Collins leaves the service at the age of 52. Had he been an Inspector only, he could have remained on until 55; but his seven years as Principal Veterinary Surgeon having expired, the terms of the Warrant did not allow of his being given an extension.

One of the latest appointments to the Army Pay Department is that of Major G. C. Bayly, Royal Artillery. This officer has relinquished his commission as Major to become a Paymaster with the honorary rank of Captain. As an impetus to his youthful energies and aspirations, he is now, after 20 years' combative service, relegated to a lower honorary rank, with the hope and prospect of becoming a Major once more after 10 years' service as Paymaster, i.e., on completing a total of 30 years' service. Could absurdity be carried further?

We remember, some years ago, hearing a well-known War Office official assert that every man over 40 was far better out of a public service than in it, as after attaining that age he lost all energy, and was simply in the way. Our friend was a young man then, and he has since been exceptionally fortunate. His own good luck has evidently had its effect in convincing him that the radius of mental capacity may be enlarged, for he holds the doctrine now that a man has got any amount of work in him up to 45. When he attains this age himself, he will no doubt extend the limit still further, and make it 50, and so on, until he reaches the end of the chapter.

The official residence of the Adjutant-General to the Forces at Aldershot is being prepared for occupation. Report says that Lord Wolseley will take up his residence there in July, and remain for two months.

By Vote 16 of the Army Estimates, "War Office," page 80, it appears that for muddling the Army, the following officials have been paid as follows:—

	Per Annum.
1. Secretary of State for War	£5,000
2. Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State	1,500
3. Permanent Under-Secretary of State	2,000
4. Assistant Under-Secretary of State	1,200
5. Surveyor-General of the Ordnance	1,500
6. Financial Secretary	1,500
7. Accountant-General	1,500
8. Deputy-Accountant-General	1,100
9. Assistant-Accountant-General	1,000
10. Twenty-one Principal Clerks	17,351
Total	£33,651

£33,651 per annum for the civil management of our Army! What have we got for all this—and what have we lost!

The following will give an idea of some of the expenses caused by the abolition of Purchase and the compulsory retirement of officers for age and five years' non-employment. Vide Army Estimates, non-effective services, Vote 19, page 115:—

	Per Annum.
A. Pay of Field-Marshals and Generals on the Retired List	£272,000
B. Retired pay and retired full pay to Regimental Officers on the Retired List	450,000
C. Retired pay and allowances to Departmental Officers	263,000
H. Compensation to Purchase Officers on retirement	118,500
G. Commutation of Pensions	93,906
Per annum	£1,197,406

And this sum is going on increasing yearly!

Our correspondent at Moscow writes:—"Lord Wolseley has had excellent opportunities of making himself acquainted with the Russian Army and the Military administration controlling it. During the coronation, the élite of the Army has been gathered in and about Moscow, and in the Palace festivities have participated almost every General and military functionary of note. On duty and off duty, in a mass and singly, the hero of Tel-el-Kebir has made a thorough inspection of the Russian troops and leaders, and returns to England with an amount of information which will not be without its effect on the British Army, and which may—though I trust this will never be realised—be of priceless value in a conflict with the Russians for the possession of Herat or Constantinople. If less fuss has been made of Lord Wolseley than his admirers would like, it cannot be ignored that he has been excellently treated by the Russian authorities, barring the one grievance of being lodged at an hotel, instead of in the Kremlin. But I am assured that, in spite of the vast accommodation afforded by the Palace and other State buildings in the Kremlin, the room occupied by the Palace officials, ministers, and statesmen has been such that he could not have been more comfortably lodged inside the Kremlin than at the Slaviansky Bazaar. There has been, at any rate, no intention to slight him, and several officers have expressed to me their regret that his separation from the Duke should have occasioned him any inconvenience at all."

Lieutenant-Colonel Alleyne, R.A., and Major Burnett, R.H.A., have been appointed members of the Committee now sitting on the subject of cavalry drill and field movements.

The Duke of Cambridge made an excellent speech in the House of Lords the other day, and although very much tongue-tied from his official position, he told Parliament and the country some home truths, the most important being that the home battalions of territorial regiments had to send from 200 to 250 men yearly to India, to fill up the linked or foreign-service battalion. Now, as the establishment of most home battalions is 450 privates, and they have to send half their numbers to India every year, and all men qualified into the Reserve, nolens volens, we would ask,—What can be the fighting value of a home battalion? We would further ask any Prussian or Russian General the value of an army worked on such a system.

The proposed grey uniform for general service will shortly be issued to some of the Infantry regiments at Aldershot, for experimental purposes.

Is it not rather an alarming fact that the Infantry battalions of Militia are no less than 462 officers below their full complements? Any one can verify the fact by looking at a June Army List, and counting the number of officers in each regiment, and then comparing that number with the proper complement. The 3rd and 4th Battalions of the Cameronians are no less than 7 Captains and 14 subalterns below their establishment. The 3rd and 4th Battalions of the Manchester Regiment are 6 Captains and 14 subalterns short. It is time something was done to render the Militia service more attractive. It usually happens that when once the exodus begins, it goes on, like an epidemic. It would be strange if, after all, the Militia, instead of being benefited, as it was said it was to be, by the Territorial system, should under the new organisation lose caste with the officers, as it assuredly has done with the men. Appearances certainly lead one to suppose that such will be the case. If it should prove so, what will there be left out of all the crude ideas originated during the last twelve years, by the reforming spirits in Pall Mall to point to in justification of their handiwork? Absolutely nothing!

The belief gains ground that Lieutenant-General Sir Archibald Alison, Bart., K.C.B., will shortly be appointed to succeed Sir D. Lysons in the Aldershot command, although as yet no official intimation to this effect has been received.

We understand that an Assistant-Commissary-General of Ordnance is the inventor of a new valise equipment, which he claims to be superior to all others, a pattern of which has been submitted for trial to the Equipment Committee now sitting at Aldershot. It is evident that the treatment received by the inventor of the Oliver equipment has not deterred others from making efforts in this direction, as we hear of several inventors anxious to bring their equipments forward for trial. An officer must have strong faith indeed in the merits of his invention who would, at his own risk and expense, with all the experiences of others to guide and warn him, still labour on in this thankless business with hope of ultimate success.

It would have rejoiced the heart of the popular Deputy-Adjutant-General, Royal Artillery, could he only have heard the general expressions of delight expressed by brother-officers at Woolwich, at his and their good-fortune, on it being reported that his services had been recognised, and as a reward that he was to get a command in India.

It is proposed to reduce the weight of the baggage carried by the German soldier on the march by three or four pounds, and trials are being made for this purpose with a new form of knapsack. The decrease in weight thus obtained will, however, probably be partly used by the addition of 10 or 12 cartridges to the stock of 80, weighing about 7 lb., carried by each man. Some influential officers have proposed in the place of this arrangement, to add a second cartridge-waggon to each battalion.

The Military Tournament which has been held this week at the Agricultural Hall, Islington, has been exceptionally well attended. The feats of arms have throughout been highly appreciated, and a large sum of money will no doubt be added to the military charity for the benefit of which the Tournament was organised. A special word of praise is due to Colonel the Hon. Paul Methuen and Captain T. Tully, the indefatigable honorary secretaries, for their exertions to promote the success of the meeting.

By order of the Emperor of Austria, a grand dinner was given at Trieste, on Wednesday, in honour of the British Squadron, at the Imperial Castle of Miramar. Besides the officers of the Squadron, the chief authorities of Trieste were present. Vice-Admiral the Lord John Hay, Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean Squadron, was unable to attend, in consequence of a slight indisposition. The Governor of Trieste proposed the health of the Queen of England, to which Capt. Fairfax replied by proposing that of the Emperor Francis Joseph. The battery of the Castle and the guns of the British Squadron fired salutes of 21 guns. A military band played during dinner first the English and then the Austrian National Anthem. On the part of the English guests, toasts to the prosperity of the Austrian Navy and the health of the Governor of Trieste were proposed, and the toasts given in reply were the English Navy and the health of the Lord John Hay and the British officers. The Monarch, Inflexible, and Carysfort left Trieste on June 21, and the Superb arrived there the same day from Pola.

A number of joint naval and military torpedo and submarine mining experiments were carried out at Portsmouth on Wednesday, by the officers of the Vernon and Royal Engineers. The principal experiment was the firing of a ground mine, consisting of 250lb. of gun-cotton at a depth of water of 30 ft., when a steam launch, complete with engines and boilers and steam up, was moored broadside on, but 50 feet horizontally from the ground mine. The object of the experiment was to see whether the force of the explosion would sink or damage the steam launch. The result showed that though there was a great disturbance of the water, the launch was not sunk, but whether her engines were injured was not ascertained. During the firing of torpedoes a process of photography, invented by the officers of the Vernon, was tested, the disc of the apparatus being so arranged that the electricity that fired the torpedo also dropped the disc, and took the photograph instantaneously as the torpedo was striking the side of the ship.

Active Service cannot wear out the teeth that are brushed night and morning with Rowland's Odonto, the purest and most fragrant dentifrice ever made. All dentists allow that neither washes nor pastes are as efficacious for polishing the teeth and keeping them sound and white as a pure and non-gritty tooth-powder; such Rowland's Odonto has always proved itself. Ask any dealer in perfumery for Rowland's Odonto, and avoid spurious imitations, theirs being the only original and genuine Odonto.

THE CHANNEL SQUADRON.

A correspondent with the Channel Squadron, writing from Vigo on June 11, says:—"Since we arrived here, on the 2nd inst., it has been very rainy; hardly a day has passed without rain, and on most days it has been almost continuous. In spite of it, we have got through our usual routine of drills, including manning and arming boats, and a day at steam tactics in boats. Last Saturday, the 9th, the remains of the late Spanish Rear-Admiral Mendez Nunez were conveyed on board the Spanish frigate Lealtad, with considerable ceremony, for conveyance to Cadiz, where they are to rest among those of the other Naval heroes of Spain. The late Admiral was a native of Vigo, and died at his residence near one of the villages on the north side of the bay. Both our Admirals in their steam barges, and two cutters from each ship in the Squadron with Lieutenants on board, went over to escort the funeral cortége across. At a little after 10, they were observed to be leaving the shore, the Lealtad topped yards and drooped gaffs. All our ships hoisted the Spanish ensign half-mast at the main, and the Minotaur fired minute-guns. On arrival at the pier, they were received by detachments of the Civil Guard, two Infantry regiments, and seamen from the Lealtad, also by 300 of our Blue-jackets, 50 from each ship. The officiating clergy met the coffin at the pier-head, and a procession was formed to the church. A requiem mass was celebrated, and an addressed delivered, after which the procession was re-formed, and proceeded to a different pier, where the coffin was conveyed on board the Lealtad, having made a considerable circuit through the town. Most of the houses in the line of route had their balconies draped with the national colours (red and yellow) and black. It gave our men rather a long job, as they were on shore in readiness before 10, and did not get back to their ships till past 3. The rain fortunately held off for the proceeding, but came on again a few minutes after the men got on board. The Lealtad left next morning at daylight. The Humber came in to-day at noon, with supernumeraries and stores for the squadron, and will leave again for the Mediterranean this evening. A court-martial was held on the 6th on board H.M.S. Sultan, under the presidency of Sir W. Hunt-Grubbe, to try Lieutenant E. H. Clarke, of H.M.S. Achilles, on a charge of improperly keeping his watch by lying down in the chart-house. Lieutenant Clarke was found guilty, and adjudged to be reprimanded and dismissed his ship. This sentence is considered by many somewhat too severe, when the whole circumstances of the case are considered, as Lieutenant Clarke will have to pay his passage home in addition to being reprimanded and dismissed his ship. We leave to-morrow for Arosa Bay, but are not to arrive there till Friday, the 15th." Writing from Arosa Bay in date, June 17, our correspondent says:—"We left Vigo at 10 on Tuesday forenoon, the 12th, and arrived here on Friday afternoon, the 15th. Though we have not come very far, it being only about 35 miles from here to Vigo, we have had a pretty busy time, as we have been standing off and on the land, and had a good deal of steam tactics and sail drill. Soon after we started we exercised our Whitehead torpedoes, making runs at boats lying-off as targets. The Neptune had the ill-luck to lose one of hers, so we anchored at once and all the afternoon she was employed searching for it, assisted by boats and divers from the other ships. The search was resumed at daylight next morning but with no success, and at 8.30 the signal was made to weigh, and the Squadron stood out of the Bay. We exercised at steam tactics in the forenoon and sail drill in the evening. The following day the Neptune fell out of line for target practice; the rest of the ships exercised at making and shortening sail, and tacking under steam and sail in the forenoon, and had studding sail drill in the evening. On Friday we had "rammo!" general quarters and steam tactics in the forenoon, and arrived here and moored in the afternoon. The Thalia, homeward bound, was observed about noon and anchored soon after us. She embarked supernumeraries from the Squadron for passage to England, and left again in the evening. We have had no rain since we left Vigo, and are expecting fine weather for the regatta, which is to come off on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, the 19th, 20th, and 21st. The Neptune unbent sails on her mainmast as on our last trip, showing the immense value of her sail power by stowing half of it away. We stay here about ten days; our next move is to Corcubion, and then to Bantry, where we hope to arrive by July 10."

The under-named has been awarded the medal for long service and good conduct:—J. C. Durrant, commissioned boatman, of the Coastguard.

Headaches and Disordered Stomach.—"After suffering for nearly two-and-a-half years from severe headache and disordered stomach, and after trying almost everything, and spending much money without finding any benefit, I was recommended to try your Fruit Salt. Before I had finished one bottle, I found it doing me a great deal of good, and now I am restored to my usual health. Others I know that have tried it have not enjoyed such good health for years.—Yours truly, Robert Humphreys, Post Office, Barrasford." CAUTION.—Legal rights are protected in every civilised country. Examine each bottle, and see the Capsule is marked "Eno's Fruit Salt." Without it, you have been imposed upon by worthless imitations. Sold by all Chemists, price 2s 9d and 4s 6d. Directions in Sixteen Languages.—How to Prevent Disease. Prepared only at Eno's Fruit Salt Works, Hatcham, London, S.E., by J. C. Eno's Patent.

"Sapo Carbonis Detergens" is a physician's name for a remedy prescribed for the past quarter of a century for every variety of skin disease. The public have found that as a preventive of small-pox, scarlet fever, and measles, it is unequalled. See that the Latin name described above, and the words "Wright, Southwark," are on each wrapper, and branded on each tablet, without which none is genuine.

SPECTACLES v. BLINDNESS.—"Spectacles can only be perfectly adjusted by those having a thorough knowledge of the anatomy of the eye, combined with optical experience."—We have the highest medical authorities confirmed by daily experience, that imperfect glasses, together with the haphazard plan of selection generally employed by the mere vendor, is the cause of most cases of blindness and defective vision. Sir Julius Benedict writes:—"I have tried the principal opticians in London without success, but the spectacles you have adapted suit admirably. The clearness of your glasses as compared with others is really surprising." The Rev. Professor W. A. Hales, M.A. Cantab., 2 Minford Gardens, West Kensington Park, writes:—"The spectacles are perfect, and a most decided boon. I had occasion on Monday to write to Lord ——, and took the opportunity to mention your name and the wonderful power of your spectacles." Dr. Bird, Chelmsford, writes:—"I could not have believed it possible that my sight could have been so much improved and relieved at my age (82). I can now read the smallest type, although suffering from cataract on the right eye." Testimonials from Earl and Countess Lindsay; F. D. Dixon Hartland, Esq., M.P.; the Venerable Archdeacon Palmer, Clifton; Rev. Mother Abbess, St. Mary's Abbey, Mill Hill, Hendon; C. J. Alford, Esq., Gas Light and Coke Company, Horseferry Road, Westminster, &c. Mr. HENRY LAURANCE, F.S.S., Oculist Optician, 39 OLD BOND STREET, W. (late 3 Endsleigh Gardens, Euston Square), personally adapts his Improved Spectacles daily (Saturdays excepted), from 10 to 5. Special arrangements are made for invalids and others unable to wait on Mr. Laurance. Pamphlet, "Spectacles: their Use and Abuse," post free. City Branch, 6 Poultry, Cheapside.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

—DISEASES OF THE SKIN.—No case of disease of the skin, be its nature what it may, has failed to be benefited when these potent remedies have been properly applied. In scrofulous and scorbutic affections, they are especially serviceable. Scurvy, eruptions, and glandular swellings, which had resisted all other modes of treatment and gradually become worse from year to year, have been completely cured by Holloway's cooling Ointment and purifying Pills, which root out the disease from the blood itself and leave the constitution free from every morbid taint. In the nursery Holloway's Ointment is simply invaluable; it will give ease in sprains, contusions, burns, scalds, and infantile eruptions, and may always safely be applied by any ordinary attendant.

2/- TEA OF EXTRAORDINARY QUALITY,

As Supplied to Dukes, Earls, Barons, and the County Families of England.

THE unprecedented depression in the Tea Market now enables COOPER COOPER and CO. to offer such value in Tea as would, a few years ago, have been considered simply impossible, but is now a realised fact, for at

TWO SHILLINGS

A POUND,

COOPER COOPER and CO. are able to supply Tea of amazing strength and exquisite quality, while the choice kinds at Three Shillings a pound, which are coming to hand in lessening quantities year by year, COOPER COOPER and CO. have the greatest difficulty, after ransacking the markets of China and India, in procuring in sufficient quantities for their consumption. These choice and selected Teas COOPER COOPER and CO. have the honour to supply to many Foreign Princes, Potentates, Ambassadors, &c.

THE enormous success—without competitors and with no rivals—which has attended the sale of COOPER COOPER and CO.'s Teas is perhaps unparalleled in the annals of this or any other trade, and can only be accounted for by the way in which their business has been conducted, which has gained the patronage of all classes. COOPER COOPER and CO. number among their customers Princes, Dukes, Earls, Barons—in fact, a large per-centage of the entire Peerage—Church dignitaries of every grade, and ministers of all denominations, County Families from every county in Great Britain, and from all classes of the community. COOPER COOPER and CO. are also shipping their Teas every day to foreign parts. Paris would appear to draw its supplies from COOPER COOPER and CO.'s Stores, and in almost every large city, and especially in the seaport towns of Europe, Asia, Africa, and America—in fact, to the very ends of the earth—COOPER COOPER and CO.'s Teas and COOPER COOPER and CO.'s name are known.

COOPER COOPER and CO. have their own Agents in China and India, and are consequently able to sell their Tea at a price which is actually under that which wholesale merchants, brokers, &c., charge to ordinary dealers. They are enabled to do this as they have not the expense of travellers, and no bad debts to provide for, their terms being strictly for nett cash before delivery. They also save an immense amount by keeping no horses and vans—many houses having from 20 to 100 horses, vans, and two men to each, to deliver, sometimes, half-a-pound of tea miles and miles away, this overwhelming expense having all to come out of the quality of the Tea.

COOPER COOPER and CO. have, in fact, no expense but indispensable rent and labour, which in consequence of still-increasing business, amount only to a fraction on the price of the Tea they sell.

COOPER COOPER and CO. may mention that they include among the regular buyers of their Tea a great many London Tea Brokers, from the simple fact that it can be purchased cheaper and better from them than from the importers themselves.

COOPER COOPER and CO. sell their Teas for ready money only. They have thus no provision to make for bad or doubtful debts.

AND now a word about this year's crop. It is hardly satisfactory on the whole, but some of the choice crops secured by COOPER COOPER and CO. are simply delicious, COOPER COOPER and CO. are still enabled to sell the very best at Three Shillings a pound, and it is veritably a marvel of goodness—a "thing of beauty" and "a joy for ever." But the most astonishing thing of modern times is the Tea at Two Shillings a pound which COOPER COOPER and CO. are now selling. The rich and wealthy buy this Tea. Ladies drink it in their boudoirs and at their early drums, and, as one of our country patrons writes, "It is lovely."

COOPER COOPER and CO. may add that Indian Tea is becoming day by day a greater favourite among the best judges, and this year's crop has been prepared with greater care than ever. It is strong, pungent, with most agreeable flavour, and the better it is known, the more it will be liked. The Tea is 3s a lb., for the best.

COOPER COOPER and CO. charge threepence a package (of any size) for delivering their Teas at any of the Railway Stations in London, or any place within the limits of the London Parcels' Delivery Co., thus putting all on an equality; those who send for their tea, and those who require it sent.

COOPER COOPER and CO. do not pay railway carriage, but are willing to compound for the same on receiving the sum of 6d. in addition to the price of the Tea, to any Railway Station in England, on quantities of the value of £2 and upwards. Families residing in the country can thus, by clubbing together, have their Tea sent almost carriage free, as well as save about 9d a lb. in the cost.

THE Admiralty are alone to blame for the loss of the Lively. For reasons best known to themselves, but which are open to the suspicion of having been dictated by political motives, a special pilot, but not a licensed pilot, was appointed to the Lively, to pilot her among the islands off the coast of Scotland during her cruise with the Commissioners appointed to inquire into the grievances of the Skye Crofters, and other tenants who refuse to pay rent. The appointment of the special pilot by the Admiralty was tantamount to an open declaration on their part that they did not consider Lieutenant Mills, the navigating-officer of the Lively, competent to undertake this duty. He therefore wrote to the Admiralty remonstrating, and stating that he considered it hard to have to give up charge of the ship, on such a special occasion, to a pilot, considering his own experience. But the Admiralty were not to be moved to alter their decision. The special pilot joined, and duly took charge of the Lively, and by this appointment the Admiralty deliberately cast an undeserved slur upon the professional attainments of Lieutenant Mills. They did more. They hazarded the safety of the Lively, and the entente cordiale which should at all times obtain on board one of her Majesty's ships. They also placed Commander Parr in a most awkward position, making him de facto, but not de jure, subservient to the unlicensed pilot they had specially selected to supersede a navigating officer of the Royal Navy. That such is the case must appear incredible to all persons not connected with the Navy, but that the facts are as stated can easily be demonstrated. The Admiralty govern the Navy by an unwritten as well as by a written law. The "Queen's Regulations and Admiralty Instructions" contain the written law. The unwritten law led Lieutenant Mills to state in evidence that "he considered that the Admiralty Instructions referring to the presence of a pilot on board have reference to an ordinary pilot, and not to the case of one specially appointed by the Admiralty, as in the case of the Lively." Why should such a doubt exist? Because the Admiralty act on the unwritten law, whenever it suits their convenience to do so. At times, as in the present instance, they attempt to enforce the written law, after having acted on the unwritten, merely to shield themselves from the consequences of their own illegal acts. By appointing a special pilot to take charge of the Lively, the Admiralty de facto relieved Commander Parr and Lieutenant Mills of all responsibility regarding the navigation of that despatch-vessel. This placed both these officers in one of those indescribable, anomalous, undefinable, unmilitary, and unwarrantable positions that the Lords of the Admiralty seem to take a pleasure in so often creating, and which so frequently end in the professional ruin of the officers thereby affected. The knowledge possessed by every Naval officer of the "unwritten law, as administered by the Admiralty," made Lieutenant Mills aware of the fact that he must accept with resignation the slur cast upon him by the rulers of England's Navy. Furthermore, he knew but too well that his conduct towards the special pilot, appointed over his head, must be characterised by the greatest tact, forbearance, and moderation. The slightest hitch in their relations, a mere misunderstanding on some point of etiquette, might lead to his being reported to the Admiralty, or to such a version or perversion of the facts of the case reaching the ears of their Lordships as would effectually ruin his further prospects in the service. For the Admiralty in such cases have invariably acted on the assumption that the officer who acted strictly in accordance with the "written law" did so to spite them; that, in fact, he was animated by a spirit of resentment towards them, and had brought about the conflict to bring them into contempt. No matter how perfect the excuse of the Naval officer may have been, the Admiralty have held him to blame, under that unwritten law which their Lordships act upon, under the advice of such Civil servants as their Assistant-Secretary. That the Admiralty are guided by advice so tendered we proved not long ago, in publishing Mr. Swainson's gratuitous report and recommendations, compiled and presented to the Board "to save their Lordships trouble." On the other hand, if the special pilot, or other specially selected officer, gets into trouble, and is the senior of those with whom he quarrels, or a civilian, then their Lordships endeavour to enforce the "written law" of the service upon his juniors, or upon those who have been the innocent cause of their ill-advised policy miscarrying. In the present instance, an attempt has been made to prove that Lieutenant Mills wilfully allowed his ship to be lost on the Hen and Chickens, to spite the Admiralty for having placed a special pilot on board to do his work. Luckily for Lieutenant Mills, he was able to prove that the contrary was the case; that he took a lively interest in the work performed by the special pilot, and that he warned and questioned him about the locality of the danger in which the Lively was lost before she actually struck on the rocks. Numerous cases can be cited to prove that the "unwritten law" of the Navy renders it next to impossible for an officer to do his duty strictly, and at all times be guided in his conduct by the Queen's Regulations and Admiralty Instructions. Many officers of unblemished character and high professional attainments, whose whole lives have been devoted to the service, have been sacrificed to the arbitrary and vindictive feeling of a class partisanship, which enforces an unwritten law to gain its own ends; while those forming this class stigmatise their opponents, who would have the Navy properly governed, as inexcusably ignorant and inaccurate, whenever they call the policy of that ruling class in question. It is within the memory of many now serving in the Navy that a distinguished officer was ordered home to be tried by court-martial to satisfy political enmity. Also, that a young officer who refused to allow his evidence to be influenced at the trial "by the unwritten law," or, to speak more correctly, by those who were in a position to enforce it, and whose testimony elicited at the time the commendation of a distinguished Admiral who was president of the court, was rewarded by being superseded and placed on half-pay. The Virago case followed, in which a Surveying Lieutenant, after having saved that ship from wreck by directly interposing in her navigation and, on his own responsibility, reversing the engines and anchoring the ship, was subsequently informed by the Admiralty "that his conduct, in having forced their Lordships to censure his commanding officer, had met with their most serious displeasure," or words to that effect. This was in accordance with the unwritten law of the Navy, a law which, in truth, has been the ruin of many able and zealous officers, and which has at all times proved itself to be the curse of the service. Had Lieutenant Mills interfered with the special pilot appointed by the Admiralty over his head, what would have been the result? Let us suppose that, on his own responsibility, Lieutenant Mills had done as the Lieutenant of the Virago did before him, let us suppose that Lieutenant Mills, seeing the danger the ship was in, had said to the special pilot,—"You are running us on the rocks!" and there and then altered course. What then? The pilot would have left the bridge, and reported Lieutenant Mills to Commander Parr. By that time the ship would be safe. But who is to prove she ever was in danger? The special pilot would indignantly repudiate the assertion. He most probably would swear she never was within a mile of the rocks, and would land, on the ship casting anchor, and decline to proceed further. The whole matter would be referred to the Admiralty. Their Lordships would support their special pilot, and the Navigating Lieutenant would be superseded and placed upon half-pay, perhaps never to be employed again. Such are the conclusions the history of past cases warrants our drawing from the facts disclosed by the inquiry into the loss of the Lively. True, it may be urged that there is no certainty as to what decision the Admiralty may arrive at in similar cases, and that no dependence can be placed on precedents. That is exactly what we complain of. We say that there are two laws whereby the Navy is governed, the written and the unwritten, and that the latter is so fickle and ever-changing, as to be in reality the primary cause of all the evils the Navy is heir to. The Admiralty, to give some estimable man "a job," appoints him to the Lively as pilot. The officers of the ship knew well enough that to interfere with this pilot would be their professional ruin. He then loses the ship, and the Admiralty turn upon the unlucky officers of the Lively to save themselves from well-deserved public censure. One lesson to be learnt from the loss of the Lively is surely that in future none but properly-qualified pilots should be employed; and, when they are not obtainable, the Captain and navigating officers should be left to their own devices, and the Admiralty charts. It is impossible to believe that, had there been no pilot on board, such a stupid mistake would ever have been made; but there being a so-called special Admiralty pilot on board, he was of course trusted more than pilots generally are. It is not at all clear why, if the charts are perfect, as they ought to be, a pilot should be necessary anywhere round our coasts; but in any case, no man-of-war should be placed in charge of such Admiralty self-constituted pilots, to whom deviation and variation are as often as not unmeaning terms, while even their "rules of thumb" do not, unfortunately, always come off.

WE find that a recent utterance of ours re Major-General Luard's Report on the Canadian Militia has given great umbrage to the Montreal Gazette. We greatly regret that our contemporary should so far have misconceived the spirit both of the report in question and our comments as to accuse the General of captious ill-nature and vindictiveness, and ourselves of partisanship and misstatement. There is no trace in the earnest appeal for a better system, emanating from General Luard, either of ill-nature or irritation. On the contrary, throughout its pages the report speaks most highly of the goodwill of the Canadian Militia. It is the system which is responsible for the defects to which attention has been called, and it is the system which has been attacked. It stands self-condemned, not by General Luard's comments, but by the facts which he adduces in support of them. It must be admitted by every reasonable man that the training of the Rural Militia, as at present carried out, is utterly inadequate to form a reliable first line of defence. With all deference to our contemporary, we in England speak from an experience which the Canadians of this generation have not of the inadequacy of a Militia and Volunteer system infinitely more perfect than theirs. It needs no comment or argument, in the case of any one who knows the result of the 28 days' training of the English Militia, to dispose of the Gazette's assertion that 24 days' drill, divided into two portions two years apart, realises "an effective Militia organisation." It is neither captious nor ill-natured to assert that the small amount of military knowledge acquired in a training of 12 days will be practically lost by the time the second training, two years later, comes round. With regard to the officers of the force, the Gazette, when it says that they "make enormous sacrifices of time and money to keep up their companies and regiments, and get precious little thanks for it," proves most conclusively the rottenness of the system. Unrequited expenditure of time and money should not be required. It is only in accordance with the dictates of human nature that gentlemen who are, rightly or wrongly, under the impression that the "Militia owe nothing to the country, and the country everything to the Militia"—we quote the Montreal Gazette—should kick over the traces when coercion or discipline is attempted by the Government or its officials. Discipline is not "instinctive," even in the Canadian Militiaman; it can proceed only from long, arduous training, and is the outcome not of instinct, but habit. That the training of the men is utterly inadequate for their possible work, the bare mention of the conditions of their service demonstrates to every thinking mind. That the past training of the officers has been found wanting, the institution and objects of the Military College amply testify. In the foundation of this College the Government has shown great wisdom, and we trust that it will carry the inception of reform so ably conceived to its logical conclusion. It should not be true that the country owes everything to the Militia, and the Militia nothing to the country. The first duty of a Governments is the provision of an adequate defensive force; while the first duty of citizenship is, if necessary, to serve in that force, and to esteem the necessary sacrifices thereby entailed a fair return for the protection accorded by law and freedom. We trust that, realising these facts, and accepting in their true friendly import General Luard's criticism and our own, the Government and people of Canada will look the defects of their military system in the face, and modify it so far as to make it what it pretends to be,—a reliable protection from all possible foes. For the officers, the Military College will, we believe, do all that is required. For the men, a regular yearly training of a progressive nature is urgently needed, together with a full and proper equipment of all military stores, arms, and accoutrements, while for all ranks, adequate remuneration should be assured. Nothing can be more utterly destructive to the military efficiency of the Militia than the feeling which the Montreal Gazette either expresses on their behalf, or wishes to instil into them,—that their service is a self-sacrificing condescension, and that they get "precious little thanks" for their pains. The Montreal Gazette is recognised as the Government paper of that city. Its intention, presumably, has been to draw off the attention of the public from what General Luard has said. The question, however, is one which deeply affects the Dominion. There is no matter, in fact, of greater importance. Yet the Government have systematically closed their ears to the warnings which have been whispered into them by Sir Edward Selby Smyth and General Luard. These two officers went out to Canada with the intention of doing what they could to better the condition of the local defences, which, on General Smyth's arrival, were in a deplorable state. They have had a most thankless duty to perform, but, to their credit be it said, they have played an honest part. It is not an encouraging thing to read time after time, in the Press of the Dominion, attacks such as that which lies before us. It is the Government which is at fault. General Luard has not said one word which could be taken as inferring that he attaches blame to individual officers. He does not blame the Government. What he has done has been simply that which it was his duty to do, viz., to show how defective the organisation is, and in what manner it could be improved. Had he failed to do this, he would have proved himself unfitted for the office he holds. We have been accused more than once of giving undue support to General Luard. We are always most ready to support any official whom we know to be labouring conscientiously to promote the true interests of the Empire. It is against the humbug of the age—and alas! to what an extent it is carried by some in office—that we invariably protest. The Canadian Government have been fortunate in having had at the head of their Militia Forces two honest men, who have not shrunk from the duty, unpleasant though it must have been, of making their views known. We have yet to learn that such a course of action is likely to do injury. But the Gazette "cannot think that either the report of General Luard or the article of the organ of the Imperial Forces is calculated to improve the efficiency of the Canadian Militia." The intention of the writer in the Gazette evidently has been to defend the Local Government, but we fear he has done more harm than good. We have always viewed General Luard in the light of a martyr to circumstances. The article in the Gazette places the fact beyond doubt. What the Canadian Government appears to want is a Commandant-General who will be content to draw his pay, and say pretty things in an agreeable way. There are any number of men to be found who would be only too ready to take the appointment under such conditions. But, we ask, would they not be dear at the price? Try as they may to prove otherwise, the Canadian Government will never succeed in convincing practical soldiers that their Militia Forces are in that high state of efficiency that they, presumably from ignorance, themselves suppose. This being the case, it surely is desirable that they should have at the helm men like Sir Edward Selby Smyth and General Luard, both of whom have had sufficient strength of character to state facts openly, though knowing that by doing so they would incur considerable displeasure.

The Mediterranean Squadron, under Vice-Admiral the Lord John Hay, after making a short stay at Ancona, where the Squadron was due on June 27, will proceed for a cruise down to the Islands of Corfu, Zante, &c. The cruise in the Adriatic has been much enjoyed by all on board the Squadron, as nothing could possibly have exceeded the cordiality of the welcome tendered along the coast to the Commander-in-Chief, and all under his command. Mails for the ships composing the cruising squadron should be addressed to Corfu.

The statement of Mr. Campbell-Bannerman, in reply to the question of lodging allowance to Officers in the Steam Reserve, that although it was not allowed, still no officer had been refused accommodation when applied for, is one which may sound satisfactory to the Parliamentary ear, but will be received with an incredulous smile by Naval men. The grant of the allowance is mostly confined to those in the home ports, who are employed in Admirals' and other offices, but officers who hold Admiralty appointments to ships building or preparing for commissioning rarely receive it, and generally have to provide lodging at their own expense. The Steam Reserve guardships afford accommodation for a limited number of officers, but the inconvenience of proceeding to and from the ships to which their duties call them reduces the advantage, and causes more trouble than profit. This especially applies to the Asia, placed as she is in Portsmouth Harbour; and if the Secretary of the Admiralty had the misfortune of becoming a Naval officer, and belonged to a ship fitting in the New Basins, and elected to live on board the guard-ship, he would find so much discomfort from boat work in bad weather as to make the "game not worth the candle." If the erection of naval barracks is ever accomplished, we hope that accommodation for officers of uncommissioned ships will be provided, but until that occurs, arrangements should be made to meet the present difficulty; and it would be advantageous to the service, as well as to the pockets of officers, if a "depôt mess" were formed at each home port, and conducted similar to that at Greenwich. It is unfair that the comfort of officers should be affected, and their small pay unnecessarily taxed, because they are attached to ships which are uninhabitable; and as their services are requisite during the preparation of such vessels for sea-service, they should not be inconvenienced because the pendant is not flying. Taking the large number of officers attached to the Steam Reserves for various duties, it would be impossible at present to provide accommodation for all. Mr. Campbell-Bannerman admitted that out of 401 officers employed in the Steam Reserves, accommodation for only 99 could be provided at the different ports; and he must be easily convinced, when informed by biassed individuals, that the allowance of 1s. 6d. per diem for provisions to those unaccommodated satisfies the recipients, who have to "board and lodge" themselves with that sum. The fact is that, failing any better arrangement for their comfort, they take the only crumb which the Admiralty offer them. If the Admiralty will not grant lodging allowance, proper measures should be adopted for relieving officers of an unjust expense.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales has become an honorary member of the Royal Naval Club of 1765, and Admiral Sir Geoffrey Hornby has been proposed for election as a member of the same club.

In the very able paper which Lord Charles Beresford read at the Royal United Service Institution last week, he exactly hit the blot in our present system of Naval administration. "The actual state of the Navy," he said, "is perfectly well known to all Naval officers, and to all the officers at the Admiralty. But what can they do? The people who know these facts are obliged, as a sort of matter of honour, to concur in what I may call the Treasury policy of the hour, and that policy is invariably the same, whatever party is in power. It is one of misjudged economy to the services. The country always approves of this policy, and will not allow money to be spent." Now, this is just where the people want leading and where we look in vain to those who should lead. The Navy—and for that matter, the Army also—is being sacrificed, hand over hand, to the cry of economy, which it suits party politicians of all shades of opinion to raise at the hustings. Each side denounces the extravagance of the other, because the appeal to the taxpayers' impatience, or supposed impatience, of taxation is always a popular one. No man wants to pay more for any article than he is obliged, and trading on this sentiment, those who should lead public opinion, and, as leaders, should endeavour to show the necessity of paying more liberally in order to secure greater efficiency in the services, are constantly engaged in the cheap-jack trade of underbidding each other in order to obtain office, and no sooner do the "outs" take the place of the "ins" than they are called upon to redeem their election pledges by reducing expenditure. Then comes in the "Treasury policy" of which Lord Charles Beresford complains. The head of the Government and the Chancellor of the Exchequer—both Treasury officials—insist that the First Lord of the Admiralty shall cut down the expenses of his department, or at any rate shall not exceed those of his predecessor. The permanent officials of the Treasury, taking their cue from their parliamentary chiefs, carefully scrutinise and if possible refuse any proposal involving increased expenditure, and the services are starved, often in spite of those who are responsible for their efficiency. Root and branch the system is wrong, and will remain so we fear until some grave disaster amounting to a national catastrophe awakens the public mind to the folly of a false economy. Then probably will come a reaction, and thousands of pounds will be spent where hundreds would now be sufficient to repair the mischief which has arisen from the public allowing itself to be lulled into a sense of false security. The history of the French Army under the Second Empire ought to be a warning to the British public, but up to the present time it seems to have been written in vain.

The reply of Lord Alcester to Viscount Sidmouth's question relative to Warrant Officers of the Royal Navy was given in the full tone of quarter-deck autocracy, leavened with the "hard and fast" line of policy which has lately been displayed by the Inland Revenue Office towards its subordinates. It is to be regretted that Viscount Sidmouth alluded to the pamphlet lately issued by the Warrant Officers, or mentioned that they had communicated with him, as it gave the noble representative of "my Lords" the opportunity of quashing the noble viscount's advocacy of the just claims of this badly-treated class. Had he simply stated the injustice of subjecting them to different rates of pay for sea and home service, when such a rule is not applied to other officers, and that the store allowance in a first-class ironclad is the same as that in a gunboat, together with other matters, in which Warrant Officers are hardly dealt by, Lord Alcester would have been spared inflicting pain on a deserving body of men, and saved the Admiralty the humiliation of asserting a principle which they never carry into practice. We can assure "my Lords" that the pamphlet is what it professes to be, and that, highly disciplined as the Warrant Officers are, they, from bitter experience, well know that the deaf ear of Admiralty officials is always turned to the representations of those who have not social influence to support them. While no Admiralty Lord would have dared reply in such terms to an interpellation respecting the Medical branch, it is all the more discreditable that such an answer as that given by his Lordship should be accorded the claims of those less fortunate, though equally deserving. The Warrant Officers will be unanimous in their gratitude to Viscount Sidmouth, at the same time regretting that his generous offices have not been met in a better spirit, and were overridden by a law which is only brought to the front to crush those on the "lower rung" who have moral courage enough to ventilate unfair dealing.

Whilst the Italian Naval authorities have adopted the new Armstrong breech-loaders, the coast artillery commission have retained the Krupp gun and cast-iron ordnance of Italian manufacture. A number of armoured turrets are now being erected on the Gulf of Spezia, for which the guns have been supplied by Krupp; but that manufacturer's design for the hydraulic loading-gear, &c., has been rejected, and the Elswick firm has been entrusted with the work.

The Royal Marine Artillery "carried off the palm" in the "tug-of-war," at the Military Tournament, Agricultural Hall, last week. After settling a batch of sturdy Grenadiers, they finished up with a victory over the Blues, by dragging them twice in succession up to the mark.

Italy has at the present time, according to the Italia Militare, more vessels constructing in her government yards than any other country. The two monster ironclads Italia and Lepanto are now being provided with armour and fitted with their machinery, and will be completed within two years at the latest. Three other vessels of the Duilio class are building at Castellamare, Spezia, and Venice. They are to be ready for launching at the beginning of 1885. There are also under construction three ram torpedo-boats, one in England, and two in Italian yards; they are to receive very powerful machinery and long spurs for ramming purposes. The Italians are likewise building a large transport, entirely of steel, and 360 in length, capable of carrying 500 horses; as well as several smaller war vessels, altogether eleven.

In view of the occupation by France of Tonquin and Annam, it may be remarked that the Naval force of the latter power consists of five steam-vessels, four of which were purchased from the French Government some years ago. These vessels are:—The d'Entrecasteaux, corvette (660 tons, 290 indicated horse-power, four $4\frac{3}{4}$-in. guns); the d'Estaing, corvette (740 tons, 380 indicated horse-power, three $5\frac{1}{2}$-in. guns); the Bien-Hoa, gunboat (120 indicated horse-power, two guns); and the Mayenne, transport (1,730 tons, 110 horse-power nominal). The Loï-Dung, a gunboat of 40 (170) horse-power and three guns, was purchased in 1866.

The Italian Government has this week concluded a series of interesting experiments with armour-plates at Spezzia. These trials were similar in most respects to those recently carried out by the Danish Government, with this difference, that they are held to have proved beyond doubt "that the compound system of armour-plating is superior to any other," the Creuzot steel plates not excepted.

It is reported that the Japanese Government are negotiating for the purchase of the Chilian cruiser, Arturo Prat. It will be remembered that this vessel was built some time back by Messrs. Armstrong, Mitchell, and Co., and that our Government refused to allow her to leave the Tyne until peace had been concluded between the Powers of Chili and Peru.

The season of the year, known in Germany as "die saure Gurken Zeit" (the time of sour cucumbers), in which English readers are accustomed to look forward to accounts in the papers of sea-serpents and extraordinary gooseberries, is now rapidly approaching. The place of the gooseberry is, in Germany, taken by the subject of the Island of Heligoland, the secession of which by the British Government is annually demanded by the German Press in articles more or less fiery, according to the degree of heat prevalent in Berlin at the time. The news that the British Reserve Squadron will again this year cruise and manœuvre off the island has already called forth some angry paragraphs; but the loudest flourishes need not be expected before the end of July or beginning of August, when the leading representatives of the German Press are assembled there, for Heligoland, though a British possession, is the most fashionable German seaside resort. It is not surprising that the Germans should desire to possess a point of such strategic value as Heligoland, commanding as it does the entrances to the rivers Eider, Elbe, Weser, and Ems; but it is to be hoped that no Radical British Government will so far forget the interests of the Empire as to listen to the clamour of interested foreigners or revolutionists at home.

The Admiralty have made the following promotions, to date from June 29:—Commanders:—Richard Evans, Edmund George Bourke, James Andrew Thomas Bruce, Henry Rose, and Pelham Aldrich, to be Captains in her Majesty's Fleet. Lieutenants:—Raymond Barron Needham, Herbert James Gilbert Garbett, Julian Alleyne Baker, Nathaniel Cotton, Lionel Fanshawe, George Augustus Giffard, Charles Lindsay, Francis Powell, and Arthur Barrow, to be Commanders in her Majesty's Fleet. We can congratulate the Admiralty on their selection of Commanders, but regret to find that the Senior Lieutenants of the Mediterranean Fleet present at the bombardment of Alexandria, and then passed over, have again had their claims to promotion disregarded, officers junior to them having once more been promoted over their heads. The same hardship has been inflicted on the Senior Lieutenants of the Channel Squadron. It is this systematic disregard to the claims of seniority and service which so greatly disheartens even the best of officers.

The Admiralty have acted on the advice tendered to them in these columns, and have granted the Egyptian Medal to the Masters of Transports employed in Egypt, in connection with the war, between July 11 and September 14 last year. Notice to this effect is given in last night's Gazette. Applications are to be made personally, or by letter, to the Accountant-General of the Navy, and the production of certificates from the owners of the transports will be required. We regret that the Mates of the transports have not been included in the grant.

The conflagration which occurred at the Royal Dockyard, Amsterdam, on the 20th instant, appears to have greatly damaged, if not totally destroyed, the cruisers Doggersbank and Kortenaer, at the time in course of construction at that yard. The former vessel, an iron corvette, sheathed with wood, was rapidly approaching completion, but of the latter, only a few frames were standing. It is reported that the roof of the sheds in which the Doggersbank was building fell in, and completely crushed the already partially destroyed vessel. These corvettes belonged to a class of seven vessels, which were built from the designs of Chief Constructor Dr. Fidemann, for the purpose of forming a squadron of fast and heavily-armed cruisers, of which the Dutch Navy stands greatly in need. The vessels of the same type already afloat are:—Atjeh, launched in 1876; Koningin Emma, launched in 1879; Tromp, launched in 1877; De Ruyter, launched in 1880, and Van Speyk, launched in 1882. They are of the following dimensions:—Length between the perpendiculars, 265 ft.; breadth of beam, 42 ft.; depth of hold, 19 ft. 6 in.; draught of water, 20 ft. 8 in.; displacement, 3,300 tons. Armament:—Six $6\frac{3}{4}$ in. and eight $4\frac{3}{4}$ in. Krupp guns, besides Harvey and spar torpedoes. The engines, which have been supplied by the Government works and the Fijenoord Company, indicate 3,000 horse-power, and propel the vessels at a speed of 15 knots per hour.

Following on the remarks recently made in these columns regarding the anomalous position German officers and men would hold when navigating a Chinese ship-of-war under the German flag, should war break out between France and China, and the Ting Yuen, while being so navigated, encounter a French ship or squadron, the German Admiralty have decided not to utilise that ship as previously contemplated; and the reliefs she was to have taken out for the German Squadron in the China seas will proceed thither in the corvette Stein, now ordered to be commissioned for the purpose. The German Minister of Marine has notified the Chinese Embassy of his decision, and has advised that a merchant crew be engaged for the purpose of navigating the Ting Yuen, to China. We should not be surprised at the Chinese authorities having to resort to this country after all for officers and men for the Ting Yuen.

The Italian Times, published at Rome, gives a portrait of the Minister of Marine, Baron Ferdinand Acton, à propos of the launch of the steel cruiser Royal yacht Savoia at Castellamare on June 25, with a pedigree headed, in large type, after the Admiral's name, "of the Blood Royal of England." The pedigree begins with Edward I., and, per devias vias, male and female, ends with a numerous family of Neapolitan Actons of to-day. The Savoia is 84 mètres long, of 5,000 horse-power, carries 16 powerful breech-loaders, and is to steam 16 knots. "Avanti Savoia!" —mai dove?

The general tone of the Italian Press just now is equally insulting to England and to France. The anniversary of Magenta the other day did not evoke a line in any paper. The date of Solferino, when Italia certainly did not keep her promise fare da se, will be certainly passed over in silence also, but "Palestro" and the "Tchernaya," where the brave Sardinians had little to do in comparison with the French, are duly commemorated in the name of the new street near the Porta Pia. In the injudicious bantering of some English newspapers respecting Admiral Pierre's exploits off the coast of Madagascar, the journals of Rome and Naples find pegs to hang offensive articles to Great Britain and the Republic, and one paper observes the opinion of England on such questions must be received with profound respect, as she has just come out triumphant from a magnificent encounter with an Egyptian mob, and is a "past mistress" in the art of bombarding, as Alexandria proves. The spirit of the Press indicates a sense of security and all the insolence of ingratitude. The Italians are chuckling with delight at the prospect of a war between France and China, but, lest we should sympathise with them, they are careful to let us know they think the Empire is tumbling to pieces, and that India will fall to Russia, and Ireland to the United States, in the good time coming. M. Thiers, and Metternich, and Napoleon III. were, perhaps, wiser than Mr. Gladstone, after all.

Foundations for the purpose of providing assistance to persons who, having been in good positions, have fallen into difficulties are unfortunately rare. It is therefore, with much pleasure that we hear of the revival of the Almshouse of Noble Poverty, founded by Cardinal Beaufort in 1446, and attached to the Hospital of St. Cross, near Winchester. As instances do occur where old officers of both Army and Navy have, through no fault of their own, become nearly or quite destitute, it may be desirable to spread as widely as possible the information that there does exist such a haven of rest for sufferers by the storms of misfortune. Although now very limited, it is contemplated to add to the numbers of brethren as the funds available for the purpose increase. A set of rooms sufficient for the accommodation of the brother, and a wife or daughter, money stipend, rations, medical attendance, &c., form a provision for old age, for which many would be thankful. The only qualifications are that a candidate should, by misfortune, have been reduced from independence to poverty, should be at least 50 years of age, and should not have received any parish relief within twelve months next preceding the time of election. Applications to be made to the Master of St. Cross, near Winchester.

The danger of such escapades as Lord Randolph Churchill's about the Khedive is only to be estimated by those who know the state of feeling in Egypt, and who have to live there, and by those who attach some importance to the public opinion of Europe. We do not refer to this matter as one of politics, but as one of policy, bearing on the relations of our Army of Occupation to the Egyptian Government.

The Italian Military manœuvres this autumn should be attended by some of our Staff. In spite of General Cadogan's efforts, our Government never appointed a Military Attaché to the Embassy to Italy, and yet the Army is one of progress, of increasing importance, and with many features of interest. One development of Parliamentary control would please our Radicals. It is a matter of patronage for hon. Members to get their towns made the head-quarters of Brigades or Divisions. We may come to it in time. From August 30 to September 3, two Army Corps will manœuvre independently, and from September 5 till the 10th will manœuvre against each other. On September 4, they will each be reviewed, one at Boghera, the other at Montebello. On August 17, the cavalry manœuvres will begin in Lombardy, and end on September 12, on which day the division will be reviewed at Milan. It is expected that the King will inspect the troops on both occasions.

Who is responsible at Head-quarters for gazetting the promotion of officers? In one regiment, a subaltern is promoted while there are one, two, or even more supernumerary Captains; while in another regiment, no one is promoted unless the whole of the supernumeraries are absorbed. Why is this permitted? The Secretary of State should, without delay, investigate the present system of promotion, as it is not one calculated to imbue the officers of the Army with the idea that justice of the most perfect kind is meted out to them. The authorities should at once lay down a hard-and-fast rule that either a certain proportion of supernumeraries are permitted in a regiment, or that no regiment is to have one officer beyond the establishment. It is decidedly mortifying for a subaltern to see himself condemned to serve on in his rank until every supernumerary is absorbed, while in another regiment an officer, perhaps junior to him in service, is promoted supernumerary to the establishment. We would again suggest that an extra Captain be granted to those regiments who have a Major promoted to such rank prior to July 1, 1881, as these officers do not perform the duties of commander of a company. It is but a short time since we called attention to the short service of the subalterns of certain regiments, and we would propose, in order to equalise promotion, which has been greatly upset since the amalgamation of battalions in 1881, that subalterns of over nine years' service should be promoted to vacancies in regiments where the senior has not completed six years.

The correspondent of an Italian paper at Port Said gives a terrible account of the effect produced on decent people there by the dress of the Highlanders! "He can understand," he says, "Albanians and Greeks wearing ridiculous short petticoats, but they have the delicacy to cover the skin of their legs, whereas the Scotch leave a space from the knee to the lower part of the calf quite naked!" And then their music is deplorable! They actually use Calabrian cornemuses (bag-pipes), like so many pifferari, and drive people mad with the hideous noise. Some of their instruments are evidently borrowed from the Arnaouts or Circassians. "The soldiers have women's scarves hanging from their shoulders." The writer concludes that they are fantastic troops, with theatrical costumes, which they put off when they are on active service.

In the death of General Sir William Knollys a gap has been created which it will be difficult to fill. The deceased General had for the last twenty years been past active military employment, but his name was well known to all soldiers, and the recollection of his five years' command at Aldershot was one to which many an officer has been able to look back with satisfaction. In his younger days, Sir William was a good cross-country rider; in fact, a sportsman all round. As Adjutant of the 1st Battalion Scots Guards, he did much to raise the reputation of the regiment, and as commanding officer the care he bestowed on all matters affecting the welfare of the non-commissioned officers and men caused his name to be remembered long after his connection with the regiment had ceased. Indeed, of him it may fairly be said that throughout an eventful life he made no enemies.

Colonel C. J. East, lately Assistant-Quartermaster-General in charge of the Intelligence Branch of the Quartermaster-General's Department, started for India on Thursday, to assume his brigade command.

Reports on the water-bottles and filters used by them in Egypt have been called for from all corps that served during the recent campaign.

A Memorandum was lately drawn up on the Commissariat and Transport Department, during the recent Campaign in Egypt. The document is dated December 23, 1882, and has the name at the end of it of "Edward Morris, Commissary-General." The following extracts will be interesting:—

Page 6. Issue of Rations.—An order should be given that quartermasters are at all times to be present with the head-quarters of the regiment; that they are to give proper notice to the Commissariat of their requirements, and are to be present at the depôts to receive supplies. Many difficulties arose during the Campaign, owing to quartermasters not attending to such matters.

Page 26, Appendix VI.—Extract from Report upon Commissariat Supply and Transport, in connection with the 2nd Division, Egyptian Expeditionary Field Force.—"At mid-day, on the 14th, the Black Watch left for Belbeis. They went off so suddenly and without warning that they neglected to take any of the rations for the following day that had been prepared for them, so that they had to be sent after them afterwards. Fortunately, I had arranged with the officer commanding, how he should proceed to purchase at Belbeis."

Page 24, Appendix V.—Extract from Report of Deputy-Comy.-Gen. Saunders, in charge of 1st Division:—"Quartermasters of Regiments.—I must place upon record the apathy, want of forethought, and general indifference evinced (with one or two exceptions) by regimental quartermasters throughout the campaign. The clearest and most distinct orders were issued from time to time as to what rations, how to be drawn, and for how many days they were to last, yet in most cases they were disregarded, or only attended to partially, or when it suited the quartermaster's convenience. Commissariat officers complained frequently of this want of attention to their duties on the part of quartermasters, who appeared to treat the rationing of their regiments as a duty of minor importance, to be relegated to the quartermaster-serjeant. I have no hesitation in saying that much of the delay and inconvenience complained of by commanding officers in regard to their supplies in the field, can, on investigation, be proved to originate with the quartermaster, who has either failed to attend to his duty or to comply with the regulations of this department, of which, in the majority of cases, they profess entire ignorance. It was frequently observed that upon a regiment marching into camp, no steps were taken by the quartermaster to arrange for his requirements, until the commissariat officer had personally reminded him of his duty."

It surely is unusual for a departmental officer to report on a regimental officer in the manner done in one of these extracts. The quartermaster is only responsible to his commanding officer, and had he failed in his duties as stated, it seems to us that the "apathy," "want of forethought," and "general indifference" evinced by him should have been brought to the notice of the commanding officer, who is, according to the regulations of the service, responsible for any shortcomings of the nature stated. Had this been done at the time, it would have given the friendless class of officers now attacked an opportunity of defending themselves, when all the circumstances of the case were fresh, and evidence was obtainable to prove who was in the wrong.

Mr. Gibson will on Monday ask the Under-Secretary of State for India whether there is not great stagnation of promotion, and consequent dissatisfaction, in the Indian Medical service. Whether this stagnation is not owing to the abolition of a number of higher-grade appointments, and also to the disbandment of a number of native regiments. Whether the prospects of promotion to the rank of Deputy Surgeon-General of several brigade surgeons and surgeons-major in the Indian Medical Service have been destroyed by recent alterations and arrangements which did not exist when the officers affected joined the service. Whether the Government will consider the propriety of granting increased pensions to such brigade surgeons and surgeons-major as compensation for their altered prospects, and as inducements to retire and make vacancies for the surgeons on the establishment who are now unemployed. Whether the difference between the rates of pay drawn by brigade surgeons and surgeons-major, and the rates of pay that would be drawn by junior officers for the same duties, would more than compensate Government for the increased expenditure that would have to be incurred to induce senior officers to retire. And, whether the Government have any scheme ready to meet the grievances of the Indian Medical Service.

We would suggest to the authorities that as elasticity has been given to the terms of Army enlistment, it might be of advantage if recruits were allowed to join and remain in battalions and batteries of their own choice. An interesting return might be furnished to Parliament of the number of eligible recruits who refuse to enlist, when told they are liable to be transferred at any moment from those they wish to serve with. We would also suggest that supernumeraries might be borne on the strength of regiments, as in the Militia, so long as the total number of men voted by Parliament is not exceeded.

Dr. Cameron will, on Army Estimates, in Committee of Supply, Vote 16, move to reduce the Vote by £1,200, being the pay of the Director of Transport and Supplies.

More urgent claims on our limited space have prevented us from noticing till now "The Historical Records of the Household Cavalry," which have occupied many pages of Colburn's United Service Magazine. At first the "Record" consisted mainly of details of Court duties, and of descriptions of gorgeous uniforms —lace, feathers, and ribbons. But in the number for June, some battles and sieges are mentioned, and the part taken in them by the Household Cavalry is vaguely and inaccurately stated. We will now only notice two passages referring to the battle of Dettingen, and this we feel obliged to do, in consequence of our having expressed unequivocal opinions as to the claim, or rather absence of claim, of the Life Guards to bear the name of that battle on their colours. "In the spring of the year 1742, the Life Guards embarked for Flanders, and were present both at Dettingen and Fontenoy." "In 1746, the Corps of Life Guards was reduced from four troops to two, but no change was made in the two troops of Horse Grenadiers." Now these statements appear to be disingenuous, for the writer of them must surely have known that they were not correct, in the sense in which they would generally be read. The 1st and 2nd Troops of Horse Guards, the lineal predecessors of the 1st and 2nd Life Guards, remained in England during the campaigns in question. The 3rd and 4th Troops, which were engaged at Dettingen (though they were not mentioned in the despatch, or in the roll of casualties) returned to England in 1746, and were disbanded. The several "Troops of Horse Guards" were always quite distinct corps. These facts are beyond question, and yet we find "Dettingen" still retained among the honours of the Life Guards.

A handsome volume, called "Reminiscences of Military Service with the 93rd Sutherland Highlanders," by Surgeon-General Munro, M.D., C.B., has appeared very opportunely, when the administration of the Medical Department of the Army has been subjected to an elaborate, tedious, and apparently futile investigation. Dr. Munro entered the Army in 1844, and was promoted to be surgeon of the 93rd Highlanders in 1854. He joined his regiment in Bulgaria, and was with it during all its Crimean and Indian war services, taking his full share of dangers and privations, and often being obliged to perform arduous and painful duties. He continued to serve with the 93rd till 1867, when his promotion to the rank of Deputy-Inspector-General removed him from regimental work. Some of the incidents he relates are amusing, many of them are touching and sad, all are interesting. No medical officer who was only officially "attached" to a regiment could become so attached to it, in the best sense, as Dr. Munro was to his fellow Highlanders, and no soldiers could have such trust in a merely departmental medical officer as the 93rd evidently had in him, while he was their "ain doctor." Our author writes in a despondent tone about "Army reform." If there be any advantages in the change to short-service (now happily abandoned), he does not see them; if there were any good reasons for discontinuing to appoint Medical Officers to regiments, as parts of those regiments, he has failed to discover them. If Dr. Munro ever joined in the agitation in favour of unification, if he ever desired that Surgeons should undertake, in addition to their special professional duties, those pertaining to the purely executive officers, if he ever thought that "change" and "improvement" were synonymous terms, such illusions must have been dispelled before he wrote, for no trace of them is to be found in the interesting work he has just given us. To those who cling to the delusion that those "reforms," from the effects of which we cannot even hope to recover till years elapse, may have in them some hidden virtue, and who yet are open to conviction, we would recommend the careful perusal of Dr. Munro's "Reminiscences." We give the following extracts in confirmation of the opinions expressed above:—

"But we, who spent our lives in the old long-service Army, know that esprit de corps did exist; that it was productive of much good, and we grieve to see that the feeling is discouraged or ignored. We have all read the arguments in support of short service with the colours, and the necessity for the formation of a Reserve. But, after ten years' trial of short service, what is the strength of the Reserve which we have formed? At most, some fifty thousand men. At what cost to our fighting army has this Reserve been formed? It has filled the ranks of our regiments with lads, and caused a scarcity of efficient non-commissioned officers, and been followed by such a rapid current of change in our regiments that officers and men have not time to know how far they can rely upon each other."

"But amongst the many changes which in recent years have been effected, not one has been felt more keenly by all classes than the loss of the regimental surgeon. We acknowledge that there were serious defects in the old Army Medical organisation, and that something more suited to the requirements of modern warfare was a necessity. But the change that has been made was too sweeping and too sudden of accomplishment, and was deeply felt by all classes, especially by the medical officers themselves."

As the conditions in Algeria are such as not to permit the French Army Corps located there (the 19th) to undertake autumn manœuvres on a large scale, it has been resolved to substitute marching manœuvres near the most important garrisons, the three arms taking part in them.

Colonel Alexander will, on Tuesday, July 24, call the attention of the House to the recent changes made in the regulations for recruiting in the Army, and move a resolution. Probably the House of Commons will be counted out on this occasion.

Referring to the helmet now in use in the British Army, the Progrès Militaire takes occasion to expose some absurdities in regard to it in the French land and naval forces. The present French Minister of Marine, since his appointment, has issued a series of regulations which have given great satisfaction to his subordinates. The English helmet has been given not only to the French colonial forces, but its use has also been permitted in the southern parts of France. In the meantime, the Intendance and the General Staff have not yet been able to agree whether to supply the helmet to the portions of the Army employed in Africa. Although the French have now been in Tunis for over two years, and both Generals, commanding officers, and surgeons have been asking for a head-covering more suitable to the climate, the poor soldiers are still exposed to the dreadful effects of the direct rays of a tropical sun. The authorities receive the complaints, arrange them carefully, and prepare estimates, but nothing has yet been done to effect a change. Thus, in Algiers, Oran, Tunis, as well as in Marseilles and Perpignan, the officers of the Army are still forbidden to wear a more rational head-dress, whilst the officers of the various Naval forces have been authorised to use the cork helmet this summer.

With reference to our remarks last week on the subject of survivors of the great campaigns, we may point out that Lieutenant-Colonel Anthony O'Reilly, who figures in Hart as a Peninsular veteran, has been dead for many years, and would be in his 103rd year if still living. General Anthony Bacon, who figures in the list of retired Majors as a survivor of the Peninsula and Waterloo, died on May 29, 1876, aged 85. Colonel Sir Henry Wyatt, Lieutenant-Colonel Sir George Morris, and Major John Orr, all three credited with Peninsular service, have long since joined the great majority, and Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. Horace Pitt has died since his accession to the Rivers peerage. The list of Waterloo veterans which we gave last week should, however, undoubtedly include the name of Lieutenant-Colonel William Hewett, late 53rd Regiment, who, in his 88th year, is still living. He enters his 89th year on July 2 next, and is the last surviving son of General Sir George Hewett, who was commander-in-chief in India and in Ireland, and who was created a baronet in 1813 for his military services. Pace Siborne's record of the Waterloo Campaign, Lieutenant-Colonel Hewett was present as a Captain in the 3rd Battalion, 14th Regiment. He afterwards exchanged into the 2nd Battalion of the Rifle Brigade, became a Major in 1825, purchased an unattached lieutenant-colonelcy in 1828, and subsequently retired by sale.

M. Baller has just laid his report on recruiting in the French Army on the table of the Chamber. This report exposes the three principal objects which the Committee have endeavoured to attain,—first, to reduce the military obligations which weigh upon the nation, by equalising them; second, to strengthen the Reserves by submitting the whole contingent incorporated to the same period of instruction; third, to facilitate the recruitment of the lower cadres by suppressing the total and partial exonerations of which the most enlightened portion of the French youth reaped the benefit. This is very Republican and égalitaire, but it is extremely unlikely that "the most enlightened portion of the French youth" will make good non-commissioned officers. Forced to remain three years away from their occupations, they will serve with reluctance, and directly their term has expired they will take their departure.

"P. L." writes:—"The appointments of officers and serjeant-instructors of musketry having been recently abolished, and officers commanding companies having been made responsible for the proper training of their men, a very large amount of additional work has devolved upon adjutants of regiments, who, in addition to checking and going carefully through all the company returns and registers, are responsible for the preparation of the battalion monthly musketry return, and of the annual return, in all of which every man belonging to the regiment must be accounted for in a musketry sense, and the result of the different practices shown, averages of different companies and parties of casuals and recruits must be made up and shown, and the progress of the battalion in musketry for the year must be fully shown up to date. In addition, the musketry records of the battalion have to be kept up, and also a record kept of all recruits joining, transferred, or discharged. The above work was formerly done by the instructor of musketry, assisted by his trained serjeant-instructor, but as the services of the latter are no longer available, the adjutant has only himself to depend upon, as his orderly-room clerk, not having had any experience with musketry returns, cannot be expected to understand them; besides which his time is otherwise fully occupied. This work being in addition to the ordinary work of an adjutant, for which he receives 2s. 6d. a day if a captain, and 3s. 6d. if a subaltern, besides forage allowance for his horse, I venture to submit whether it would not be a just thing to allow him at any rate a portion of the allowance of 2s. 6d. a day which was formerly given to the instructor of musketry, in order to compensate him for the extra work, which, in many cases, has to be done at night, as an adjutant's time during the day is generally fully occupied."
